NEW COAL PACT CALLED 'VIOLATION'

Revamped U.N. Minus Russia, 'If She Balks,' Is Proposed

3 Resolutions Are Discussed In House

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP) — Three resolutions were introduced today in Congress aimed to give the United Nations a strong arm and a new start—with talk of dropping Russia if she balks.

Ten House members, including Republicans and Democrats, declared the calling of a new charter conference to give U.N. power to enforce "world law to prevent war" would be the surest way of "determing whether the Soviet Union is bent on conquest."

Propose Reorganization

Ten Senators from both parties proposed a reorganization meeting, to be called by President Truman, to propose revisions to strengthen the organization in maintaining world peace. Senators suggested it might be necessary to go ahead without Russia.

The third resolution promptly followed in the Senate. Proposed by one of these Senators and two others, it suggested that U.N. be given authority to enact, interpret and enforce laws to keep peace.

The House proposal was similar. It would have Congress urge the President to take the initiative in calling a general U.N. conference under provisions of its charter "for the purpose of making the United Nations capable of enacting, interpreting and enforcing world law to prevent war."

Rep. Judd (R-Minn.) told the House: "Let us revive the hope of the world for peace."

In addition to Judd, those introducing the resolution were Reps. Hays (D-Ark.), William T. Byrne (D-NY), Kefauver (D-Tenn.), Richards (D-SC), Mansfield (D-Mont.), Mundt (R-SD), Hale (D-Me), Muhlenberg (R-Pa.) and Nixon (R-Calif.)

The 10 members issued a statement saying:

"The sponsors believe that there is no surer way of determining whether the Soviet Union is bent on conquest than by learning whether she would be willing to go along with other nations in creating a United Nations which could guarantee her security."

Armed Force Unity Gets Senate Stamp

Measure In House Now Awaiting Vote

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP) — The Senate stamped its approval tonight upon a permanent unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces.

The compromise measure—developed after repeated requests by President Truman during the past two years—now goes to the House where Republican leaders have it on their "must list."

The Senate passed the bill on a voice vote after rejecting a series of amendments by Senator E. V. Robertson (R-Wyo), who with some support from Navy and Marine Corps enthusiasts, had been battling the measure.

"Unity Necessary"

Chairman Gurney (R-SD) of the Senate Armed Services Committee and other supporters said the far-reaching revision of the armed forces is necessary to save the United States from destruction when and if a future war strikes.

Under the bill, called "The National Defense Act of 1947," all land, sea and air forces would be placed under a single cabinet officer, the Secretary of National Security. The air forces would be raised to co-equal status with the Army and Navy.

The present Secretaries of War (Army) and Navy would lose their cabinet places but along with a new Secretary of Air would continue to administer the three departments.

Four wartime agencies—most of them set up by Presidential order—would be given permanent status within the overall national security organization.

Agencies Listed

They are:

A National War Council headed by the new Secretary of National Security and composed of the civilian and professional chiefs of the Army, Navy and Air Force Departments.

The joint Chiefs of Staff composed of the military and Navy leaders of the three armed services. They would direct strategic policy but would not have actual command authority.

A Munitions Board composed of the under or assistant secretaries of the three departments which would direct military purchases

A national research and development board which would push plans for scientific or "push button warfare," including atomic development. It would succeed the wartime office of scientific research and development.

Dewey Heads For Kansas City

ENROUTE TO KANSAS CITY WITH GOV. DEWEY, July 9—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York today ended three days of private political conferences in Sapulpa, Okla., and headed for Kansas City to meet more top Republicans in his unofficial pursuit of the G.O.P. Presidential Nomination.

There, awaiting the New Yorker's arrival, Kansas' Republican National Committeeman Harry Darby said Dewey was "even more popular today than at any previous time" but added that "it will not be known how the Kansas delegation will vote until the delegates are chosen."

The Kansas delegation voted for Dewey in 1940 and 1944.

"No one man or group tells Kansans what to do—our Republicans make their own decisions," Darby added.

Almost from the moment of his arrival in Sapulpa until his departure this afternoon, the New York Governor stuck to his hotel suite conferring with Republican leaders of Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

All were understood to have told him current sentiment indicated a majority of the delegates from their states would vote for him at the National Convention in Philadelphia next June.

Kept Sister Locked In Shack On Farm

MILWAUKEE, July 9—(AP)—Arthur Boelke, 54, was arrested today on a charge of illegally imprisoning his 67-year old sister in a locked shack on Boelke's farm in Milwaukee County.

Capt. James Flatley of the Sheriff's Department said officers investigating an anonymous letter concerning the sister, Edna Boelke, found the woman on Monday locked in a stifling shack—its one window boarded up—the floor littered with bits of torn newspaper and furnished only with a couch and a bed without a mattress.

Miss Boelke was taken to County Emergency Hospital where her condition still was listed as poor.

Flatley quoted Boelke as saying he had been appointed his sister's guardian after she was declared mentally incompetent in County Court a year ago. He said she feared being sent to an institution and begged him to take care of her and that he had tried to give her "every comfort."

Boelke told officials, Flatley said, that his sister has lived on an adjoining farm until June 15, and that he had provided her food, but that due to the press of farm work, he had moved her to the shack at that time and had locked her up "for fear she would harm herself."

Sonja Henie Gets Threatening Notes

HOLLYWOOD, July 9. (AP)—Sonja Henie's secretary complained to police today that every day for more than two years the skater-actress has received a typewritten crank letter from an admirer and that it's all getting to be pretty annoying.

The secretary, Miss Ann Barr, said the letters were signed "A. H." Asked if they might be described as threatening letters, Miss Barr said she thought that was the correct term. Police said they would study the missives and determine what action to take.

GOP Seeks Public Aid For Tax Bill

Measure Approved By Senate Group

WASHINGTON, July 9 — (AP) — Republican backers of the $4,000,000,000 Income Tax Cut Bill shoved it through the Senate Finance Committee on an express schedule today and followed up with an appeal for public support against an expected veto.

House Speaker Martin (R-Mass.) made the plea in a radio broadcast, asserting that the issue is whether the President or Congress is to control the nation's purse strings.

He spoke after the Finance Committee, acting in less than an hour, approved the House-passed Bill 10-3 and headed it for the Senate where its path to passage appeared clear.

Vote Size Questioned

Even opponents conceded that the only questions with regard to passage are the size of the vote and how long it will take but they were by no means so sure of what would happen if President Truman should veto the bill as he did a similar one on June 16. The only difference in the new measure is that it is effective January 1 instead of July 1.

Martin based his argument on this point:

"The strength of the House of Representatives and of the whole Congress has always been in its control of the purse strings. It is necessary for the 80th Congress to protect this prerogative so the checks and balances in government may be maintained, as they were intended by the founding fathers to be maintained under our constitution."

Martin concluded:

"I hope you will let your members of Congress on both sides of the capitol know how you feel about this necessity for putting our domestic affairs on a sound basis."

"We'd like to finish the bill in the Senate this week," Committee Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) told reporters, "but I don't know how long anyone is going to talk."

He said he had heard no recent threat of a filibuster, although there had been rumbles that foes of the measure might try to talk it to death before the slated July 26 adjournment date for Congress.

Will Extend Session

However, Senator Taft (R-Ohio) chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, served notice that the lawmakers will forget the July 26 goal, if necessary to get a final decision on the new tax bill.

With administration leaders confident that President Truman will veto the new bill, as he did a similar measure last month, GOP strategists are exerting every effort to speed a quick showdown.

The Republicans are particularly anxious to prevent giving Mr. Truman a chance to kill the bill by "pocket veto." The President has 10 days to consider a bill before signing or rejecting it, and if Congress should adjourn during the 10-day interlude, Mr. Truman could exercise the pocket-style veto—that is, let it die without taking any action.

Balkan Plan Is Offered To U. S.

LAKE SUCCESS, July 9 (AP) — France and Colombia have approached the United States with compromises aimed at reconciling the opposed American and Russian proposals for settlement of Balkan disorders, it was learned authoritatively today.

The American delegation to the United Nations has rejected both proposals designed to water down the U. S. resolution calling for a semi-permanent Investigating Commission to halt Greek border disturbances.

Russia already has rejected the commission idea, put all the blame on Greece, and insisted that the Athens government itself take steps to correct the situation.

Despite off-the-floor maneuvering, the United States was represented as confident that it could muster the necessary seven security council votes to pass the resolution, leaving Russia with the veto as the only weapon to block action.

Details of the French and Colombian proposals were lacking but they were understood to call for a commission without power to act except with the express consent of Greece and three Soviet satellites—Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria. The compromise wording would give the commission power only to help the governments work out problems of minorities, refugees and border conventions.

The French move was viewed as an outgrowth of pressure from the Communists at home to follow a line close to Russia. France had abstained on the report of the council's Balkan Investigating Commission which brought in findings forming a basis for the American resolution.

The council will renew its discussions on the Greek situation tomorrow afternoon. Some compromise plans may reach the floor.

Vets Get Extension

WASHINGTON, July 9, (AP)—The Veterans Administration today extended to January 1 the deadline for 9,500,000 veterans to reinstate lapsed national service life insurance policies without physical examinations.

"SHOOT IF YOU MUST"—A 20th Century Barbara Fritchie, played by Mrs. Howard Kelly, yesterday waved an American Flag from her door in Frederick at horsemen who took the part of Confederate Cavalry soldiers in a Civil War pageant that included the paying of $200,000 to save the town from being sacked.

Princess Elizabeth Engaged To Philip

Announcement Is Made By George VI

LONDON, Thursday, July 10 (AP) — The engagement of Princess Elizabeth to her childhood sweetheart, the handsome former Prince Philip of Greece, was announced officially early today by King George VI.

The King gave his blessing to the long-forecast engagement of Britain's heiress apparent in a court circular, the traditional manner of speaking to his subjects.

No date has been announced for the wedding, but it probably will be in October at Westminster Abbey. It is certain to be one of the most colorful ever held in London as the 21-year-old Elizabeth will be the first princess to marry while heiress apparent to the throne.

Gets Engagement Ring

The 26-year-old Philip—big, blond and breezy—gave his bride-to-be an engagement ring containing a large diamond and two smaller baguette diamonds set in platinum.

The King drafted his announcement while festive crowds thronged in front of Buckingham Palace awaiting confirmation of betrothal reports which had been bannered in London newspaper. A copy of the draft for the Court Circular was handed to newsmen last night, for use when the circular was issued officially.

"It is with the greatest pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their dearly beloved daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, to Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten, R. N., son of the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Andrew (Princess Alice of Battenberg), to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

Wage-Price Spiral May Be Started By Coal Contract

Schmidt Outlines View To Congress

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP)—An official of the United States Chamber of Commerce expressed belief today that the wage increase John L. Lewis won for his mine workers laid the groundwork for a new wage-price spiral.

Merson P. Schmidt, director of the chamber's Economic Research Department, set forth this view in testimony to the joint Congressional Committee on the economic report.

Decline Expected

An earlier witness, Clarence Francis, chairman of the Board of General Foods Corp., told the committee that average food prices may decline as much as 15 per cent by the fall of 1948.

He said "food is in for stiff competition from new automobiles, appliances and housing. In fact, the competition has begun."

Senators Flanders (R-Vt.) and Sparkman (D-Ala.) developed Schmidt's testimony with respect to the effect to the pay boost in the Coal Industry.

Schmidt told the committee, which is studying suggestions on how to stabilize the economy, that the proposed Marshall plan for rehabilitating Europe would place "additional upward pressure on our price structure" and in turn "set in motion a generalized union wage demand across the country.

Move May Have Started

Flanders expressed the opinion that such a move may already have been touched off by the coal wage agreement.

"I think you are right," Schmidt remarked.

He said "I think so" when Sparkman asked Schmidt whether he regards the coal wage increase as inflationary.

In reply to another question by Sparkman, Schmidt commented that if the miners' increase does not result in higher prices for steel and steel products, it at least will "postpone any reduction" of prices.

Exclusive

In the wake of President Truman's vetoes and his struggle with Congress, the Gallup Poll has just completed a special, intensive survey of political sentiment. How the country feels today about the parties and the candidates one year before the 1948 nominations is shown in a series of four exclusive reports by the Gallup Poll, of which the first will be published in the NEWS tomorrow.

Pageant Recalls Civil War Days In Frederick, Md.

City Officials Take Part In Ceremonies

FREDERICK, Md., July 9 (AP) — The burghers of Frederick handed over $200,000 today to save their town from being burned and sacked by a cavalry troop which cantered boldly through the streets.

The "ransom" money was delivered in the center of town to soldiers in gray of the Confederate Army to the background accompaniment of whirring motion picture cameras as virtually this entire city of 18,000 turned screen actors and actresses.

Starts Pageant

The ransom payment started an all-day pageant in which Frederick placed on a documentary film the historic events of Civil War days. All the leading merchants, bankers, Mayor and Aldermen donned costumes of the period to participate in the film based on public records.

The Confederate troops—members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce — represented the Northern Virginia Army of Gen. Jubal Early. They carried original 1857 model "Sharp's" carbines.

The re-enactment was 83 years to the day after Early's threat to sack Frederick on his drive on the capital in Washington, D. C.

This afternoon, Frederick residents gathered at the Maryland State School Athletic Field for a public picnic, heard the data of the battle of Monocacy related over loud speakers. It was this battle which gave today's pageant its title, "Fighting for time."

Gen. Ulysses Grant commented that Early's 24-hour delay in Frederick saved Washington from capture.

Calendar Turned Back

The calendar also was turned back to 1862 by the Confederate troop which re-enacted the march past the home of Barbara Fritchie and her legendary defiance of another Confederate General.

Frederick's bankers today "chipped in" to make up the ransom, just as they did in 1864. They still are awaiting repayment on the 1864 note.

The city is paying off the debt and interest yearly. Repeated efforts to have Congress reimburse Frederick for the ransom have failed of passage either in the House or Senate.

The levy was made after Gen. Early proclaimed:

"Officers will, by force, if necessary, and under imperative threat to sack the town, otherwise, compel the Mayor, City Assembly, bankers, and leading citizens to assemble and comply with the commanding general's demands immediately."

Two Army Sergeants Take Secret Papers On A-Bomb

WASHINGTON, July 9 — (AP) — Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) told the Senate today that two souvenir-hunting soldiers surreptitiously removed "certain important documents" from atomic energy files at Los Alamos, N. M., in March, 1946, but that the FBI agents recovered the papers.

So far as he knows no damage was done to the security of the atomic secrets, said Hickenlooper, who is chairman of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

He said the secret data were taken from the Los Alamos testing station by two former Army sergeants before their demobilization. He described them as "souvenir hunters."

The Department of Justice still has the case under consideration, Hickenlooper reported, but he told his colleagues:

"So far as I know, no effective breach of security xxx was accomplished.

"The documents were, as we believe, completely and fully recovered. xxx the individuals did not allow unauthorized persons to have any access to these documents, and we have no present information that any unauthorized persons did in fact see the documents other than the two Army sergeants."

FBI Headquarters here declined to disclose the names of the two former sergeants, but said they are not in custody at this time and no formal charges have been lodged against them.

"Attorneys of the Department of Justice have been conferring with the Atomic Energy Commission Staff with regard to the further course of action to be taken," the FBI said in a statement.

The statement said FBI Agents took up the trail of the missing documents last April when the Atomic Energy Commission referred the case to FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

May, Garssons Ask For New Trial

WASHINGTON, July 9, (AP) — Classing their recent bribery conviction as "unfair," ex-Congressman Andrew J. May and munitions makers Henry and Murray Garsson today applied for a new trial.

May and the Garsson brothers were accused of a conspiracy involving buying May's services as chairman of the House Military Committee for more than $50,000 to aid the Garssons' $70,000,000 wartime arms enterprises.

4 Nations Join Reds, Reject Bid

Poland, Slavs Will Not Attend Parley

PARIS, July 9 (AP)—Poland and Yugoslavia joined Russia and two other nations in the Soviet orbit tonight in rejecting the British-French invitation to participate in the Paris conference on European recovery under the Marshall plan which opens here Saturday.

On the eve of the deadline for accepting the bids, sent to 22 European nations, Finland and Hungary remained the only two nations whose participation was uncertain.

15 Nations To Attend

The participation of 15 nations, in addition to France and Great Britain, definitely was assured. It was anticipated that Albania, who also has not replied to the invitation, would follow Russia's lead in refusing to discuss the American aid proposal advanced last month by Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

Poland's refusal, announced in Warsaw after a four-hour cabinet meeting, was prompted chiefly by the fact that Germany would share equally in reconstruction efforts with other war-torn countries. Bulgaria's rejection of the bid was announced earlier in the day and Romania notified the British and French of their refusal earlier this week.

Observers said there was a "50-50" chance that Finland and Hungary would send representatives to the conference.

Those countries which have officially or unofficially accepted are: Belgium, Italy, Portugal, Eire, Greece, Turkey, Luxembourg, Holland Czechoslovakia, Iceland, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

Russian Participation Desired

In Washington, Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour said Russian participation in the conference was desirable because the more who joined, the better the results would be. He said it would be unfortunate if countries desiring to take part were prevented by pressure but he said he could not comment, when asked whether the U. S. has knowledge of pressure being exerted.

Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister, informed a National Assembly Committee that Czechoslovakia had inquired for details on the "American Conditions" of aid to Europe. He insisted that the United States had posed no conditions for aiding a European Mutual Assistance Program.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, in a speech to the Anglo-American Press Association, threw his influence behind the Marshall Program, terming it "clairvoyant initiative" which might prove the "world's salvation" from war by unifying Europe under ideals of liberty and human rights.

In his frankest statement on Russia, De Gaulle compared the Soviets with Nazi Germany and said both were menaces to Western Civilization, nurtured on totalitarian ideology under iron discipline.

Red Revolt Plot In Greece Crushed

ATHENS, July 9 (AP) — Greek police and soldiers, under orders to crush a reported Communist revolutionary plot, arrested several thousand persons today in swift predawn raids conducted simultaneously throughout Greece.

More than 2,000 persons were seized in the Athens area alone, an official announcement said. Reports from Piraeus, the Port of Athens, stated that scores of those arrested were being loaded aboard vessels for shipment to nearby islands.

Napoleon Zervas, minister of Public Order, said the zero hour for a Communist uprising—under a "Plan F"—had been set for 1 a. m. tomorrow.

The Communists already had issued orders for the distribution of arms, Zervas declared, and had intended to plunge the entire Kingdom into revolution.

Police officials here said "Plan F" was timed to coincide with the meetings in New York of the United Nations Security Council, which is considering the report of its Balkan Investigating Commission.

The arrests, accomplished without disorders, made virtually a clean sweep of leftist leaders here. Zervas said, however, that many high-ranking Communists had fled to the mountains in Northern Greece.

Owners Risk Legal Action, Hartley Warns

Southern Operators Capitulate To Lewis

WASHINGTON, July 9. (AP)—A warning that coal operators risk criminal prosecution for signing John L. Lewis' precedent-breaking wage contract was sounded today by Rep. Hartley (R-NJ) even as Southern Operators capitulated and affixed their signatures.

Hartley said the pact violates the Taft-Hartley Labor Law.

About 90 per cent of the soft coal industry has now formally agreed to Lewis' terms.

Production in Northern states soared as miners thronged back into the pitts. Output is expected to be normal in most of these states by tomorrow. In the South, where the operators balked for a time at the contract, it may take longer to get in full swing again.

The Southern Coal Producers Association, the last major holdout against the contract, yielded en masse late today. Representatives of ten of its 13 members associations promptly marched to Lewis' headquarters and affixed their names.

Ink Hardly Dry

The ink was hardly dry when Rep. Hartley said in a House speech that any operator who signed up might face charges carrying penalties up to $10,000 in fine and one year's imprisonment.

The check-off of initiation fees and assessments of the United Mine Workers, provided in the contract, is not sanctioned and is a "clear violation of the act," Hartley said.

Only the withholding of union dues from paychecks is authorized, Hartley went on, and therefore the operators who signed have "agreed to pay money for an illegal reason." He continued:

"In my opinion, this agreement clearly reflects collusion between the mine operators and the UMW with the intention of violating the law.

"For example, the contract covers the employment of miners only during the time as 'such persons are able and willing to work' The law meant for labor unions to become responsible organizations.'

Hartley told reporters he did not plan to initiate personally any action against signers, saying this would be up to the Executive Branch.

Hartley said criminal action could not be taken against Lewis, because the language of the law forbids the payment of money—except for withheld dues—to the "representatives of employes," but says nothing about the representatives of the employes accepting the payments.

The reaction of employers to Hartley's speech was summarized by Laurence J. Tierney Jr., a signer and a spokesman for the Southern Association.

"If we're wrong, we're perfectly

Russians Discuss U. S. Third Party

MOSCOW, July 9. (AP)—The Soviet Press and Radio devoted considerable attention today to formation of a Third Party in the United States for the 1948 Presidential elections, a possibility which is of much interest to the Soviets.

At the same time the Communist Newspaper Pravda said that the United States Occupation Force in Germany was conducting an export program which "in, in fact, concealed reparations out of current production from German industry."

A Tass dispatch from London quoted a report from Washington that plans for formation of a Third Party were being made.

"No definite decision for formation of such a party has been adopted yet," the report said. "Likewise, it is doubtful that any decision will be made until both large parties, the Republican and Democrats, hold their conventions in mid-summer 1948. Then it may be ready to conduct an energetic campaign in the last months of 1948."

"The main machinery which is being formed at present," the dispatch said, "is the organization of the Progressive Citizens of America, which has heavy support in the trade unions and among leftwing intellectuals."

There was no mention of a presidential nominee.

Heads Of 105 AFL Unions Agree To Fight Labor Bill In Court

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP) — The heads of 105 AFL Unions unanimously agreed today to challenge the constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill in the courts and work for the defeat of every member of Congress who supported the measure.

The AFL leadership, assembled in emergency session by President William Green, decided also to wipe out future "no strike" provisions in all AFL contracts.

A five-man committee drew up a declaration of policy which was adopted by more than 250 top representatives of all AFL unions.

"Because we believe many of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Bill are unconstitutional, we will challenge the validity of said sections in the courts," it said.

Meanwhile, The AFL will press for repeal of the law "as a slave measure, unAmerican, vicious and destructive to labor's constitutional rights."

"We will organize, unite and concentrate our efforts toward bringing about the defeat of every member of Congress for re-election who voted in favor of final enactment of the Taft-Hartley Bill.

Blond Actress' Unclothed Body Is Found In New York Apartment

NEW YORK, July 9, (AP) — An attractive, blonde actress was found beaten and strangled today in her modernistic midtown apartment, her unclothed body sprawled between twin beds, and police immediately began scanning the list of her men friends in the hunt for the slayer.

Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander, who set up headquarters at the apartment and mobilized 50 men for the case, said the 49-year-old woman worked for First National Pictures in 1937 "under the name of Bess True."

She rented the apartment under the name of Mrs. Sheila Mannering, and neighbors said they believed she was a radio actress.

The body, with a blood-stained towel in the mouth and a sheet knotted about the throat, was found this morning by the woman's maid, but Wallander said she was slain yesterday.

A partly-smoked cigar, regarded by Wallander as "a valuable clue," was found in the apartment.

Police said two neighbors said she had represented herself to be Bessie Love, the star of silent films in the early days of talking pictures.

Dewey Heads For Kansas City

ENROUTE TO KANSAS CITY WITH GOV. DEWEY, July 9—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York today ended three days of private political conferences in Sapulpa, Okla., and headed for Kansas City to meet more top Republicans in his unofficial pursuit of the G.O.P. Presidential Nomination.

There, awaiting the New Yorker's arrival, Kansas' Republican National Committeeman Harry Darby said Dewey was "even more popular today than at any previous time" but added that "it will not be known how the Kansas delegation will vote until the delegates are chosen."

The Kansas delegation voted for Dewey in 1940 and 1944.

"No one man or group tells Kansans what to do—our Republicans make their own decisions," Darby added.

Almost from the moment of his arrival in Sapulpa until his departure this afternoon, the New York Governor stuck to his hotel suite conferring with Republican leaders of Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

All were understood to have told him current sentiment indicated a majority of the delegates from their states would vote for him at the National Convention in Philadelphia next June.

Kept Sister Locked In Shack On Farm

MILWAUKEE, July 9—(AP)—Arthur Boelke, 54, was arrested today on a charge of illegally imprisoning his 67-year old sister in a locked shack on Boelke's farm in Milwaukee County.

Capt. James Flatley of the Sheriff's Department said officers investigating an anonymous letter concerning the sister, Edna Boelke, found the woman on Monday locked in a stifling shack—its one window boarded up—the floor littered with bits of torn newspaper and furnished only with a couch and a bed without a mattress.

Miss Boelke was taken to County Emergency Hospital where her condition still was listed as poor.

Boelke told officials, Flatley said, that his sister has lived on an adjoining farm until June 15, and that he had provided her food, but that due to the press of farm work, he had moved her to the shack at that time and had locked her up "for fear she would harm herself."

Sonja Henie Gets Threatening Notes

HOLLYWOOD, July 9. (AP)—Sonja Henie's secretary complained to police today that every day for more than two years the skater-actress has received a typewritten crank letter from an admirer and that it's all getting to be pretty annoying.

The secretary, Miss Ann Barr, said the letters were signed "A. H." Asked if they might be described as threatening letters, Miss Barr said she thought that was the correct term. Police said they would study the missives and determine what action to take.

GOP Seeks Public Aid For Tax Bill

Measure Approved By Senate Group

WASHINGTON, July 9 — (AP) — Republican backers of the $4,000,000,000 Income Tax Cut Bill shoved it through the Senate Finance Committee on an express schedule today and followed up with an appeal for public support against an expected veto.

House Speaker Martin (R-Mass.) made the plea in a radio broadcast, asserting that the issue is whether the President or Congress is to control the nation's purse strings.

He spoke after the Finance Committee, acting in less than an hour, approved the House-passed Bill 10-3 and headed it for the Senate where its path to passage appeared clear.

Vote Size Questioned

Even opponents conceded that the only questions with regard to passage are the size of the vote and how long it will take but they were by no means so sure of what would happen if President Truman should veto the bill as he did a similar one on June 16. The only difference in the new measure is that it is effective January 1 instead of July 1.

Martin based his argument on this point:

"The strength of the House of Representatives and of the whole Congress has always been in its control of the purse strings. It is necessary for the 80th Congress to protect this prerogative so the checks and balances in government may be maintained, as they were intended by the founding fathers to be maintained under our constitution."

Martin concluded:

"I hope you will let your members of Congress on both sides of the capitol know how you feel about this necessity for putting our domestic affairs on a sound basis."

"We'd like to finish the bill in the Senate this week," Committee Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) told reporters, "but I don't know how long anyone is going to talk."

He said he had heard no recent threat of a filibuster, although there had been rumbles that foes of the measure might try to talk it to death before the slated July 26 adjournment date for Congress.

Will Extend Session

However, Senator Taft (R-Ohio) chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, served notice that the lawmakers will forget the July 26 goal, if necessary to get a final decision on the new tax bill.

With administration leaders confident that President Truman will veto the new bill, as he did a similar measure last month, GOP strategists are exerting every effort to speed a quick showdown.

The Republicans are particularly anxious to prevent giving Mr. Truman a chance to kill the bill by "pocket veto." The President has 10 days to consider a bill before signing or rejecting it, and if Congress should adjourn during the 10-day interlude, Mr. Truman could exercise the pocket-style veto—that is, let it die without taking any action.

Balkan Plan Is Offered To U. S.

LAKE SUCCESS, July 9 (AP) — France and Colombia have approached the United States with compromises aimed at reconciling the opposed American and Russian proposals for settlement of Balkan disorders, it was learned authoritatively today.

The American delegation to the United Nations has rejected both proposals designed to water down the U. S. resolution calling for a semi-permanent Investigating Commission to halt Greek border disturbances.

Russia already has rejected the commission idea, put all the blame on Greece, and insisted that the Athens government itself take steps to correct the situation.

Despite off-the-floor maneuvering, the United States was represented as confident that it could muster the necessary seven security council votes to pass the resolution, leaving Russia with the veto as the only weapon to block action.

Details of the French and Colombian proposals were lacking but they were understood to call for a commission without power to act except with the express consent of Greece and three Soviet satellites—Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria. The compromise wording would give the commission power only to help the governments work out problems of minorities, refugees and border conventions.

The French move was viewed as an outgrowth of pressure from the Communists at home to follow a line close to Russia. France had abstained on the report of the council's Balkan Investigating Commission which brought in findings forming a basis for the American resolution.

The council will renew its discussions on the Greek situation tomorrow afternoon. Some compromise plans may reach the floor.

Vets Get Extension

WASHINGTON, July 9, (AP)—The Veterans Administration today extended to January 1 the deadline for 9,500,000 veterans to reinstate lapsed national service life insurance policies without physical examinations.

"SHOOT IF YOU MUST"—A 20th Century Barbara Fritchie, played by Mrs. Howard Kelly, yesterday waved an American Flag from her door in Frederick at horsemen who took the part of Confederate Cavalry soldiers in a Civil War pageant that included the paying of $200,000 to save the town from being sacked.

Princess Elizabeth Engaged To Philip

Announcement Is Made By George VI

LONDON, Thursday, July 10 (AP) — The engagement of Princess Elizabeth to her childhood sweetheart, the handsome former Prince Philip of Greece, was announced officially early today by King George VI.

The King gave his blessing to the long-forecast engagement of Britain's heiress apparent in a court circular, the traditional manner of speaking to his subjects.

No date has been announced for the wedding, but it probably will be in October at Westminster Abbey. It is certain to be one of the most colorful ever held in London as the 21-year-old Elizabeth will be the first princess to marry while heiress apparent to the throne.

Gets Engagement Ring

The 26-year-old Philip—big, blond and breezy—gave his bride-to-be an engagement ring containing a large diamond and two smaller baguette diamonds set in platinum.

The King drafted his announcement while festive crowds thronged in front of Buckingham Palace awaiting confirmation of betrothal reports which had been bannered in London newspaper. A copy of the draft for the Court Circular was handed to newsmen last night, for use when the circular was issued officially.

"It is with the greatest pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their dearly beloved daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, to Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten, R. N., son of the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Andrew (Princess Alice of Battenberg), to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

Wage-Price Spiral May Be Started By Coal Contract

Schmidt Outlines View To Congress

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP)—An official of the United States Chamber of Commerce expressed belief today that the wage increase John L. Lewis won for his mine workers laid the groundwork for a new wage-price spiral.

Merson P. Schmidt, director of the chamber's Economic Research Department, set forth this view in testimony to the joint Congressional Committee on the economic report.

Decline Expected

An earlier witness, Clarence Francis, chairman of the Board of General Foods Corp., told the committee that average food prices may decline as much as 15 per cent by the fall of 1948.

He said "food is in for stiff competition from new automobiles, appliances and housing. In fact, the competition has begun."

Senators Flanders (R-Vt.) and Sparkman (D-Ala.) developed Schmidt's testimony with respect to the effect to the pay boost in the Coal Industry.

Schmidt told the committee, which is studying suggestions on how to stabilize the economy, that the proposed Marshall plan for rehabilitating Europe would place "additional upward pressure on our price structure" and in turn "set in motion a generalized union wage demand across the country.

Move May Have Started

Flanders expressed the opinion that such a move may already have been touched off by the coal wage agreement.

"I think you are right," Schmidt remarked.

He said "I think so" when Sparkman asked Schmidt whether he regards the coal wage increase as inflationary.

In reply to another question by Sparkman, Schmidt commented that if the miners' increase does not result in higher prices for steel and steel products, it at least will "postpone any reduction" of prices.

Exclusive

In the wake of President Truman's vetoes and his struggle with Congress, the Gallup Poll has just completed a special, intensive survey of political sentiment. How the country feels today about the parties and the candidates one year before the 1948 nominations is shown in a series of four exclusive reports by the Gallup Poll, of which the first will be published in the NEWS tomorrow.

Two Army Sergeants Take Secret Papers On A-Bomb

WASHINGTON, July 9 — (AP) — Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) told the Senate today that two souvenir-hunting soldiers surreptitiously removed "certain important documents" from atomic energy files at Los Alamos, N. M., in March, 1946, but that the FBI agents recovered the papers.

So far as he knows no damage was done to the security of the atomic secrets, said Hickenlooper, who is chairman of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

He said the secret data were taken from the Los Alamos testing station by two former Army sergeants before their demobilization. He described them as "souvenir hunters."

The Department of Justice still has the case under consideration, Hickenlooper reported, but he told his colleagues:

"So far as I know, no effective breach of security xxx was accomplished.

"The documents were, as we believe, completely and fully recovered. xxx the individuals did not allow unauthorized persons to have any access to these documents, and we have no present information that any unauthorized persons did in fact see the documents other than the two Army sergeants."

FBI Headquarters here declined to disclose the names of the two former sergeants, but said they are not in custody at this time and no formal charges have been lodged against them.

"Attorneys of the Department of Justice have been conferring with the Atomic Energy Commission Staff with regard to the further course of action to be taken," the FBI said in a statement.

The statement said FBI Agents took up the trail of the missing documents last April when the Atomic Energy Commission referred the case to FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

Pageant Recalls Civil War Days In Frederick, Md.

City Officials Take Part In Ceremonies

FREDERICK, Md., July 9 (AP) — The burghers of Frederick handed over $200,000 today to save their town from being burned and sacked by a cavalry troop which cantered boldly through the streets.

The "ransom" money was delivered in the center of town to soldiers in gray of the Confederate Army to the background accompaniment of whirring motion picture cameras as virtually this entire city of 18,000 turned screen actors and actresses.

Starts Pageant

The ransom payment started an all-day pageant in which Frederick placed on a documentary film the historic events of Civil War days. All the leading merchants, bankers, Mayor and Aldermen donned costumes of the period to participate in the film based on public records.

The Confederate troops—members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce — represented the Northern Virginia Army of Gen. Jubal Early. They carried original 1857 model "Sharp's" carbines.

The re-enactment was 83 years to the day after Early's threat to sack Frederick on his drive on the capital in Washington, D. C.

This afternoon, Frederick residents gathered at the Maryland State School Athletic Field for a public picnic, heard the data of the battle of Monocacy related over loud speakers. It was this battle which gave today's pageant its title, "Fighting for time."

Gen. Ulysses Grant commented that Early's 24-hour delay in Frederick saved Washington from capture.

Calendar Turned Back

The calendar also was turned back to 1862 by the Confederate troop which re-enacted the march past the home of Barbara Fritchie and her legendary defiance of another Confederate General.

Frederick's bankers today "chipped in" to make up the ransom, just as they did in 1864. They still are awaiting repayment on the 1864 note.

The city is paying off the debt and interest yearly. Repeated efforts to have Congress reimburse Frederick for the ransom have failed of passage either in the House or Senate.

The levy was made after Gen. Early proclaimed:

"Officers will, by force, if necessary, and under imperative threat to sack the town, otherwise, compel the Mayor, City Assembly, bankers, and leading citizens to assemble and comply with the commanding general's demands immediately."

May, Garssons Ask For New Trial

WASHINGTON, July 9, (AP) — Classing their recent bribery conviction as "unfair," ex-Congressman Andrew J. May and munitions makers Henry and Murray Garsson today applied for a new trial.

May and the Garsson brothers were accused of a conspiracy involving buying May's services as chairman of the House Military Committee for more than $50,000 to aid the Garssons' $70,000,000 wartime arms enterprises.

VATICAN CITY, July 9, (AP) — With Pope Pius XII and the diplomatic corps as interested spectators, television was demonstrated for the first time at the Vatican today. Receiving sets were installed in the Pontiff's private library.

4 Nations Join Reds, Reject Bid

Poland, Slavs Will Not Attend Parley

PARIS, July 9 (AP)—Poland and Yugoslavia joined Russia and two other nations in the Soviet orbit tonight in rejecting the British-French invitation to participate in the Paris conference on European recovery under the Marshall plan which opens here Saturday.

On the eve of the deadline for accepting the bids, sent to 22 European nations, Finland and Hungary remained the only two nations whose participation was uncertain.

15 Nations To Attend

The participation of 15 nations, in addition to France and Great Britain, definitely was assured. It was anticipated that Albania, who also has not replied to the invitation, would follow Russia's lead in refusing to discuss the American aid proposal advanced last month by Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

Poland's refusal, announced in Warsaw after a four-hour cabinet meeting, was prompted chiefly by the fact that Germany would share equally in reconstruction efforts with other war-torn countries. Bulgaria's rejection of the bid was announced earlier in the day and Romania notified the British and French of their refusal earlier this week.

Observers said there was a "50-50" chance that Finland and Hungary would send representatives to the conference.

Those countries which have officially or unofficially accepted are:

Belgium, Italy, Portugal, Eire, Greece, Turkey, Luxembourg, Holland Czechoslovakia, Iceland, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

Russian Participation Desired

In Washington, Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour said Russian participation in the conference was desirable because the more who joined, the better the results would be. He said it would be unfortunate if countries desiring to take part were prevented by pressure but he said he could not comment, when asked whether the U. S. has knowledge of pressure being exerted.

Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister, informed a National Assembly Committee that Czechoslovakia had inquired for details on the "American Conditions" of aid to Europe. He insisted that the United States had posed no conditions for aiding a European Mutual Assistance Program.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, in a speech to the Anglo-American Press Association, threw his influence behind the Marshall Program, terming it "clairvoyant initiative" which might prove the "world's salvation" from war by unifying Europe under ideals of liberty and human rights.

In his frankest statement on Russia, De Gaulle compared the Soviets with Nazi Germany and said both were menaces to Western Civilization, nurtured on totalitarian ideology under iron discipline.

Red Revolt Plot In Greece Crushed

ATHENS, July 9 (AP) — Greek police and soldiers, under orders to crush a reported Communist revolutionary plot, arrested several thousand persons today in swift predawn raids conducted simultaneously throughout Greece.

More than 2,000 persons were seized in the Athens area alone, an official announcement said. Reports from Piraeus, the Port of Athens, stated that scores of those arrested were being loaded aboard vessels for shipment to nearby islands.

Napoleon Zervas, minister of Public Order, said the zero hour for a Communist uprising—under a "Plan F"—had been set for 1 a. m. tomorrow.

The Communists already had issued orders for the distribution of arms, Zervas declared, and had intended to plunge the entire Kingdom into revolution.

Police officials here said "Plan F" was timed to coincide with the meetings in New York of the United Nations Security Council, which is considering the report of its Balkan Investigating Commission.

The arrests, accomplished without disorders, made virtually a clean sweep of leftist leaders here. Zervas said, however, that many high-ranking Communists had fled to the mountains in Northern Greece.

Owners Risk Legal Action, Hartley Warns

Southern Operators Capitulate To Lewis

WASHINGTON, July 9. (AP)—A warning that coal operators risk criminal prosecution for signing John L. Lewis' precedent-breaking wage contract was sounded today by Rep. Hartley (R-NJ) even as Southern Operators capitulated and affixed their signatures.

Hartley said the pact violates the Taft-Hartley Labor Law.

About 90 per cent of the soft coal industry has now formally agreed to Lewis' terms.

Production in Northern states soared as miners thronged back into the pitts. Output is expected to be normal in most of these states by tomorrow. In the South, where the operators balked for a time at the contract, it may take longer to get in full swing again.

The Southern Coal Producers Association, the last major holdout against the contract, yielded en masse late today. Representatives of ten of its 13 members associations promptly marched to Lewis' headquarters and affixed their names.

Ink Hardly Dry

The ink was hardly dry when Rep. Hartley said in a House speech that any operator who signed up might face charges carrying penalties up to $10,000 in fine and one year's imprisonment.

The check-off of initiation fees and assessments of the United Mine Workers, provided in the contract, is not sanctioned and is a "clear violation of the act," Hartley said.

Only the withholding of union dues from paychecks is authorized, Hartley went on, and therefore the operators who signed have "agreed to pay money for an illegal reason." He continued:

"In my opinion, this agreement clearly reflects collusion between the mine operators and the UMW with the intention of violating the law.

"For example, the contract covers the employment of miners only during the time as 'such persons are able and willing to work.' The law meant for labor unions to become responsible organizations.'

Hartley told reporters he did not plan to initiate personally any action against signers, saying this would be up to the Executive Branch.

Hartley said criminal action could not be taken against Lewis, because the language of the law forbids the payment of money—except for withheld dues—to the "representatives of employes," but says nothing about the representatives of the employes accepting the payments.

In his frankest statement on Russia, De Gaulle compared the Soviets with Nazi Germany and said both were menaces to Western Civilization, nurtured on totalitarian ideology under iron discipline.

Russians Discuss U. S. Third Party

MOSCOW, July 9. (AP)—The Soviet Press and Radio devoted considerable attention today to formation of a Third Party in the United States for the 1948 Presidential elections, a possibility which is of much interest to the Soviets.

At the same time the Communist Newspaper Pravda said that the United States Occupation Force in Germany was conducting an export program which "in, in fact, concealed reparations out of current production from German industry."

A Tass dispatch from London quoted a report from Washington that plans for formation of a Third Party were being made.

"No definite decision for formation of such a party has been adopted yet," the report said. "Likewise, it is doubtful that any decision will be made until both large parties, the Republican and Democrats, hold their conventions in mid-summer 1948. Then it may be ready to conduct an energetic campaign in the last months of 1948."

"The main machinery which is being formed at present," the dispatch said, "is the organization of the Progressive Citizens of America, which has heavy support in the trade unions and among leftwing intellectuals."

There was no mention of a presidential nominee.

Heads Of 105 AFL Unions Agree To Fight Labor Bill In Court

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP) — The heads of 105 AFL Unions unanimously agreed today to challenge the constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill in the courts and work for the defeat of every member of Congress who supported the measure.

The AFL leadership, assembled in emergency session by President William Green, decided also to wipe out future "no strike" provisions in all AFL contracts.

A five-man committee drew up a declaration of policy which was adopted by more than 250 top representatives of all AFL unions.

"Because we believe many of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Bill are unconstitutional, we will challenge the validity of said sections in the courts," it said.

Meanwhile, The AFL will press for repeal of the law "as a slave measure, unAmerican, vicious and destructive to labor's constitutional rights."

"We will organize, unite and concentrate our efforts toward bringing about the defeat of every member of Congress for re-election who voted in favor of final enactment of the Taft-Hartley Bill.

Blond Actress' Unclothed Body Is Found In New York Apartment

NEW YORK, July 9, (AP) — An attractive, blonde actress was found beaten and strangled today in her modernistic midtown apartment, her unclothed body sprawled between twin beds, and police immediately began scanning the list of her men friends in the hunt for the slayer.

Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander, who set up headquarters at the apartment and mobilized 50 men for the case, said the 49-year-old woman worked for First National Pictures in 1937 "under the name of Bess True."

She rented the apartment under the name of Mrs. Sheila Mannering, and neighbors said they believed she was a radio actress.

The body, with a blood-stained towel in the mouth and a sheet knotted about the throat, was found this morning by the woman's maid, but Wallander said she was slain yesterday.

A partly-smoked cigar, regarded by Wallander as "a valuable clue," was found in the apartment.

Police said two neighbors said she had represented herself to be Bessie Love, the star of silent films in the early days of talking pictures.

Local "Ham" Saves Young Flyer's Life

An Associated Press dispatch from Honolulu revealed yesterday that the medical instructions sent 6,000 miles to tiny Palmyra atoll by Leroy Jenkins, 708 Louisiana Avenue, saved the life of a 19-year-old Army radioman.

Jenkins was tinkering with his amateur radio set before going to work Tuesday morning when he heard an appeal from an army radio operator stationed on the atoll for instructions on how to administer morphine to the young Air Corpsman who had lost a leg and an arm in a plane crash at the island. Jenkins secured instructions from Dr. Donald B. Grove and relayed them to the island. Near the end of the conversation an amateur at Audobon, N. J., took over and relayed further instructions as Jenkins left for work.

Seventh Air Force officers declined to identify the injured flyer but reported he lost his right arm and leg and had arrived at Hickam Field in a rescue plane.

Five other men aboard the ship, which crashed on a reef at Palmyra a few seconds after a takeoff, escaped injury. Crewmen carried the injured radioman 100 yards through the surf to shore. The Civil Aeronautics crew at Palmyra were roused and first aid was given.

The group used tourniquets and bandages to staunch the flow of blood while radio appeals for help were radioed. A rescue plane took off from Hickam Field, 1,000 miles away and arrived five hours later. Members of the crew said the radioman remained conscious during the trip.

LOCAL WOMAN WILL JOIN HUSBAND AT WURZBURG, BAVARIA

Another Cumberland woman will join her husband with Army occupation troops in the European Theater soon.

Mrs. George Wellington, the former Miss Willa MacCabe, Spring Gap, is awaiting orders from the U. S. government for necessary papers and expects to join her husband, M-Sgt. George Wellington, in Wurtzburg, Bavaria in August or the first part of September.

She and her 5-year-old daughter, Catherine, have been busy the last few weeks taking the required inoculations and Mrs. Wellington stated that the "shots" upset her somewhat but her daughter doesn't seem to mind them as she is anxious to see her "Daddy".

M-Sgt. Wellington has been in Bavaria since December, 1946, with Quartermaster Corps. He was transferred from Aberdeen Proving Grounds to his present post. He has been in the Army 16 years and is a son of John Wellington, 303 Washington Street, well known local artist.

Mrs. Wellington said last night that she is looking forward to the trip as, unlike most Army wives, she has traveled little during her husband's term of service. He was stationed at Aberdeen for the greater portion of his Army enlistments.

She and her daughter are residing at the home of her mother, Mrs. James MacCabe, Spring Gap, until her travel orders arrive.

Conner Gets Two-Years Parole In Court Here

Melvin J. Conner, Everett, Pa., was tried in Circuit Court Tuesday on a charge of forgery, and sentenced to serve two years in the Maryland Reformatory for Males, by Chief Judge William A. Huster.

The court, however, suspended the sentence on condition that Conner would make restitution of $44.85 obtained by passing fraudulent checks here several months ago. He was returned to county jail pending receipt of the money.

The young man was brought here after completing a 60 day jail sentence in Bedford county on a similar charge.

On June 2, Mary Matthews, his companion was tried in Circuit Court here on a charge of false pretenses, involving checks amounting to $48.23. She was given a suspended sentence of one year in the Maryland Reformatory for Women, and paroled when she made restitution, agreed to return to her home in Altoona, Pa., and stay away from Conner.

Fish Bites Woman!

Willie Wells was coming home from Seward's Creek the other evening with a string of trout, when a stern looking lady (visitor at the Boxwood Inn) stops him, and tells him a man his size could be better occupied than catching fish.

Willie tells her off real good-naturedly by saying: "Perhaps you're right, but if these fish had kept their mouths shut, they wouldn't be here." (At that, says Willie, laughing out loud, she looked just as if a fish had bit her!)

Blabbing mouths never cause anything but trouble. Nobody who knew the facts would ever criticize Willie's right to go fishing on his one day off—any more than they'd deny his right to come home to a mellow glass of beer.

From where I sit, the slower we are to criticize—and the quicker we are to recognize another's tastes, the better we'll get along together—whether those tastes apply to beer or fishing.

Potomac Park Plans New War Memorial

A committee was named Tuesday night at the meeting of Potomac Park Improvement Association, to select a site for construction of a permanent honor roll for residents who served in the Armed Forces in World War II, according to J. Milton Dick, president.

Bernard Coulehan was named chairman, assisted by Russell Robison, Willard Strawser, Bruce Thompson and Charles Ellis. Funds are available for the site, it was indicated.

The organization also heard reports on plans for street lights, and Dick and a committee have an appointment with Potomac Edison Company officials to sign a contract, it was stated.

Plans were outlined for completion of the community playground within the next week or ten days. Wire fence has been obtained and donations have been received to complete the project.

Report on natural gas service to homes in Fairgo, indicates that a contract has been sent to the Pittsburgh office of the C and A Gas Company for signature, and all funds for footage for the line have been collected and placed on deposit.

Donations were voted to the Cresaptown Volunteer Fire Company and to the Cancer Fund.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Fish Bites Woman!

Willie Wells was coming home from Seward's Creek the other evening with a string of trout, when a stern looking lady (visitor at the Boxwood Inn) stops him, and tells him a man his size could be better occupied than catching fish.

Willie tells her off real good-naturedly by saying: "Perhaps you're right, but if these fish had kept their mouths shut, they wouldn't be here." (At that, says Willie, laughing out loud, she looked just as if a fish had bit her!)

Blabbing mouths never cause anything but trouble. Nobody who knew the facts would ever criticize Willie's right to go fishing on his one day off—any more than they'd deny his right to come home to a mellow glass of beer.

From where I sit, the slower we are to criticize—and the quicker we are to recognize another's tastes, the better we'll get along together—whether those tastes apply to beer or fishing.

Potomac Park Plans New War Memorial

A committee was named Tuesday night at the meeting of Potomac Park Improvement Association, to select a site for construction of a permanent honor roll for residents who served in the Armed Forces in World War II, according to J. Milton Dick, president.

Bernard Coulehan was named chairman, assisted by Russell Robison, Willard Strawser, Bruce Thompson and Charles Ellis. Funds are available for the site, it was indicated.

The organization also heard reports on plans for street lights, and Dick and a committee have an appointment with Potomac Edison Company officials to sign a contract, it was stated.

Plans were outlined for completion of the community playground within the next week or ten days. Wire fence has been obtained and donations have been received to complete the project.

Report on natural gas service to homes in Fairgo, indicates that a contract has been sent to the Pittsburgh office of the C and A Gas Company for signature, and all funds for footage for the line have been collected and placed on deposit.

Donations were voted to the Cresaptown Volunteer Fire Company and to the Cancer Fund.

Cabbages, carrots, nearly anything that grows can if necessary become the basis of liquid fuels and lubricants now produced from petroleum, says one oil scientist.

Army Enlistment Periods Changed

Captain Laurence M. Bairstow, detachment commander at the local Army Recruiting Station announced yesterday that mustering out pay has been discontinued and that terms of enlistment have been changed for all men enlisting after July 1 in Regular Army.

The one and one half year enlistment period has been discontinued and original enlistments for two, three, four or five years will be the rule for all branches except the Air Force. A three year term will be the shortest period for enlistment in the AAF.

Former servicemen who reenlist will be limited to a three, four or five year term of enlistment, regardless of the branch of service chosen. However, ex-G.I.'s will be still entitled to grades, choice of assignment, enlistment allowance, reenlistment travel allowance and reenlistment leave currently being offered.

Extension of enlistments to a three year period which is now authorized will continue until further notice.

Two men signed for duty in the Air Force yesterday at the recruiting office. James F. Machin, Westernport, a veteran of two years and nine months in the AAF, reenlisted as a technician, fourth grade, for three years. Leo John Smith, Piedmont, who has two years and five months previous service, signed as a private for three years.

Congress Should Go Slow On Amputee Auto Law Change

A day or so ago there appeared in this newspaper an account of a Piedmont man, a veteran of World War II, having received one of the first free automobiles in this section offered to amputee veterans of the recent conflict. The gift was from the government. The recipient of this gift was Olyn A. Feight, who had his right foot blown off when he stepped on a land mine near Herstine, Germany.

We mention this fact because Congress is thinking of changing some of the rules under which Uncle Sam has been providing free automobiles for certain disabled veterans.

The autos are being given to World War II veterans who lost a foot or the use of one, such as was the case with Mr. Feight. The veteran selects his own car, has the necessary gadgets attached to meet safety requirements and passes his driver's test. Then the Government pays the bill directly to the dealer.

While there have been few such gifts to veterans in this area, those who are eligible for automobiles, so far as we know, haven't had any difficulty getting their cars. And we know of none who has had to pay more than $1,600 to get a satisfactory car with all the needed safety devices.

But having set up a good thing which appears to be working well, Congress now would wreck the whole program. This very easily could be accomplished under the provision which would raise the $1,600 ceiling to about $1,900. And on top of which the veteran would be permitted to pay, out of his own pocket, the difference between the Government ceiling and the actual price of the automobile.

It's this latter provision that would pave the way to abuses of all sorts under which a veteran might have to pay through the nose to get the car that is supposed to be his "for free."

It is our belief that auto dealers have done a commendable job in supplying autos for amputees. At the suggestion of Congressman Robert J. Corbett, they set up a priority system under which amputees are given preference over all other customers.

But it is easy to foresee how, under a new rule that would permit "payments on the side" by the veteran, a few unscrupulous people could chisel on the ex-GIs by demanding a special "bonus" from them for the delivery of an automobile.

There is one thing Congress should lose no time in doing, however. That is to carry out its intention to extend the deadline on applications.

There are hundreds of disabled servicemen who would qualify for automobiles but for the fact they are still receiving treatment in Army and Navy hospitals. The law requires a man must be discharged before he can claim a car.

Under such circumstances, some provision should be made to extend to these hospitalized amputees—after discharge—the same benefits accorded those GIs who have been able to return home sooner as civilians.

A Study Could Help

Because the President has limited powers to tinker with it, subject to congressional approval, the federal government ought to be a more efficient mechanism than it used to be. During the present session of Congress, for example, Truman has submitted three reorganization plans and two have been allowed to stand.

But if progress is being made, the impression persists that there is still a great deal to be done if functions are to be so allotted that overlapping and duplication of effort can be eliminated, if lines of authority are to be straightened out, if in general the machinery is to operate smoothly—and economically. The public has yet to be convinced that the complexities that developed during the Roosevelt years have been removed—or are being removed as speedily as possible.

Congress evidently shares this skepticism and the President himself seems to feel that it is justified. It is reported that the bill introduced by Senator Lodge and Representative Brown, which would create a commission charged with conducting a comprehensive study of the federal government, will be signed when it reaches the White House. If so, this is one area where there may be fruitful cooperation between Congress and the chief executive.

Such a commission, provided it is made up of able men with no political axe to grind, can do a most useful job. Congress, absorbed in finding solutions to new needs, can hardly be expected to take a detached view of the federal establishment. Even the President must have difficulty seeing the woods for the trees. The advice of men of affairs who can look at the whole picture objectively should be of very high value.

Their Heritage

The information that famous State Regiments of Southern Militia are again permitted to carry their traditional battle banners makes sensible news.

True it is that there are some who forget that the Civil War has ended—men and women who fail to grasp the importance of the problems of the Nation today. They spend their time arranging the affairs of history of almost a century ago. They are that far behind in the progress of America.

The three wars that have been successfully terminated since the Civil War had much to do with the cementing of ties between the men of the North and South. In the camps and on the field, the men from all sections of the country commingled under the same conditions; they learned the bigness of their brothers from other parts of the country; they learned that their motives and their patriotism were measured in the same terms as their own. Truly, the nation's mutually fought wars were the melting furnaces finally binding the North and South.

The line of the Blue and the Gray that has stretched through the past 75 years has dwindled to a mere handful. Since the turn of the century they have passed, to the younger veterans as a body, their work of inculcating patriotism and true Americanism into the people. Especially those who fail to appreciate the responsibilities they owe their government.

Those proud banners will add much to the spirit of the new regiments which will march behind them. Americans everywhere respect their heritage.

Russia's political unanimity probably adds to the drabness of life in Russia, which holds the world's championship in that respect.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

CONTROL OF TUBERCULOSIS IN AMERICA

TUBERCULOSIS, which has been the scourge of mankind thruout the centuries, is found all over the world. The number of victims in a given locality depends upon the resistance of the inhabitants and what control measures are being taken.

In the United States, the death rate is 47 per 100,000 of the population. Some reports make it even lower—41.3. This record is bettered only by Denmark, Australia, and the Netherlands. In Germany, the mortality is said to be 50; Canada, 53; Mexico, 56; England, 62; Sweden, 75; Eire, 113; Russia, 160; Poland, 195, and Brazil, 250. It is surprising to know that Greenland is highest, with 550. Whether these figures are accurate is a question, especially those from war torn countries where vital statistics are difficult to compile.

The United States was not always so fortunate and much effort has been expended in combating the disorder. Less than 60 years ago, the mortality was 245 per 100,000. By 1904 it had declined to 200 and in that year we had only six tuberculosis sanitariums and hospitals. But only advanced cases went to institutions and consequently they could boast of few cures. "Consumptives" were not isolated because the disease was looked upon as hereditary; each victim mingled with healthy individuals until weakness forced him to bed. Thus a diagnosis of tuberculosis, especially in young men and women, was a death warrant.

Infected cattle were everywhere, providing a second source of contamination. Betwen 1905 and 1915, several advances were made in health education; isolation, sanitation, pasteurization of milk, and eradication of infected cows came to the fore. This was the era of fresh air therapy. High altitudes were advocated — even mountain climbing. Pneumothorax was initiated tho used only occasionally.

In the next decade, chest surgery rose in popularity and health departments instituted more rigid control procedures. Early diagnosis was encouraged, and attempts were made to increase the resistance of children. Tuberculin tests came into vogue and authorities began to question the efficacy of fresh air as a specific; the need for rest was stressed.

Between 1925 and 1935, the X-ray became more widespread; any one who had been exposed was urged to be examined. Physicians realized that the stethoscope alone was not enough; that X-rays were necessary if the milder forms were to be picked up. Experiments were done with BCG vaccine in an attempt to immunize youngsters living in highly infectious environments. Pneumothorax proved its worth.

During the next 12 years all of the control measures reached their highest peaks. Mass X-ray programs were established; miniature films were devised, furnishing an inexpensive and rapid study of the lungs of large groups. Besides discovering beginning cases, each new victim could be isolated, thus decreasing the risk to the family and associates. The sulfonamides and antibiotics were tried. The effects of streptomycin were demonstrated and now, for the first time, there is a possibility of treating the disease actively in order to shorten the course of treatment. With the weapons we now possess, the disease could be wiped out in one generation.

TEARLESS

V. W. writes: Does not being able to cry indicate anything in a grown-up?

REPLY

Perhaps the well is dry. Some individuals are more stoical by nature than others.

DISTRESS FROM FAT

M. C. writes: Whenever I take vitamin D tablets I become nauseous. Is there any way in which this reaction can be overcome?

REPLY

D is an oil soluble vitamin and some persons are unable to tolerate such oily preparations. Perhaps you could take a product with a thicker capsule, which would pass thru the stomach without being digested. The alternative to pills is the use of sunlight. Try sitting on the beach whenever possible.

"FALLEN" ARCHES

H. T. writes: I was born with flat feet. Can anything be done about it at the age of 18?

REPLY

We all were but, in learning to walk, our arches usually develop. The disorder need not necessarily cause trouble as there are individuals with arches as flat as pancakes who have won hundred yard dashes. If discomfort is present, it means that strain exists. With properly padded shoes and foot exercises, a young person should be able to correct the condition.

FEAR OF CLOSED SPACES

F. G. writes: Can claustrophobia be cured?

REPLY

Yes, in many cases. The help of a psychiatrist may be needed altho many phobias disappear as we grow older.

MINOR SURGERY

D. A. writes: Can an enlarged prastate be reduced by X-ray treatments so that surgery will be unnecessary? I have high blood pressure and heart trouble so would hate to risk surgery.

REPLY

No, but a minor surgical procedure could be done with an electric current to relieve prostatic obstruction.

FARFETCHED

H. T. writes: Can a gall bladder condition cause an itching throat?

REPLY

No relationship between the two. If gall bladder disease is associated with jaundice, itching of the skin often occurs.

A PEEK BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Weatherman Affects U. S. Foreign Policy; One Congressman Vetoes Veterans Hospital; Europe Gets Bathtubs Due To U. S. Housing Shortage

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The weatherman may have some effect upon Secretary of State Marshall's foreign policy.

For the past five years bumper American crops have permitted us to dominate the world food situation—and thereby somewhat influence its politics. But now, bad weather at home plus good weather in Russia may partly reverse this situation.

Although the American wheat crop will be a record-breaker, other American grain crops are down. Unofficial studies of the world wheat situation made by the Agriculture Department indicate that Russia's wheat crop also will be greater than ever.

In fact, Russia, for the first time since before the war, should be able not only to end bread rationing at home but export about 300,000,000 bushels of wheat abroad. The Russians also are expected to bring in a rye crop of some 840,000,000 bushels, which should give them a surplus of about 100,000,000 bushels with which to play power politics.

While this may somewhat affect the Marshall plan for aiding European countries which cooperate with the Western European bloc, actually manufactured goods, particularly steel, still remain almost as important as food.

Speaker Martin and FDR

Cagey Speaker Joe Martin used to fight the late President Roosevelt on a lot of things. But chatting with a friend the other day he remarked that it was a lot different visiting the White House when occupied by FDR.

"He was a great guy," reminisced Martin. "He had a way of talking about things that I never forget. He used to say to me, 'Joe, how are those Douglas firs up on the Cape?'

"I didn't know anything about any Douglas firs on the Cape, and he knew I didn't. It was just his way of putting me in a hole."

One member of Congress alone, bull-headed Rep. Gene Cox of Georgia, has been able to block the construction of a badly needed veterans hospital.

Veterans Administrator Gen. Omar Bradley has ordered the hospital built, and a Congressional committee originally approved it. But Congressman Cox has said no.

Cox is sore because General Bradley has closed down another hospital in Cox's Congressional district at Thomasville, Ga. The Georgia hospital, composed of a group of temporary wooden buildings built by the Army, was ruled out by General Bradley as a fire trap. Also, the plumbing was not sufficient to meet the sanitary requirements of a hospital.

Finally, General Bradley informed Congress that the cost of upkeep on this makeshift Georgia hospital for six years would equal the cost of building a modern hospital 40 miles away in Tallahassee, Fla.

However, plans for the new Florida hospital were scarcely completed when Cox, with the aid of his close crony on the Rules Committee, Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia, slipped an amendment into the Independent Offices Appropriations Bill, to stop construction at Tallahassee.

The amendment inserted by Congressman Smith was a neat log-rolling provision which also awarded a veterans hospital site to Smith's own Congressional district in Virginia.

Congressman Cox has been bombarding the White House and the Veterans Administration, demanding that the wooden hospital in his district be reopened. Meanwhile maimed and sick veterans in that area are out of luck, all because of the peevishness of one Congressman.

Note—Cox has been drumming up votes for his hospital from Republicans by telling them that the Tallahassee project was a "political gift" President Roosevelt had promised Senator Claude Pepper. Tallahassee is Pepper's hometown, but he denies ever talking to FDR about the hospital.

Bathtubs for Europe

Despite the critical shortage of cast iron for domestic uses, the Commerce Department last week decided to lift all export controls on the shipments of lavatories and bathtubs abroad.

Story behind this is that plumbing-fixture manufacturers have produced enough lavatories and bathtubs to equip more than a million new housing units in the United States during the current year. They had every reason to expect that these new homes would be built in 1947—but now they won't be.

The lifting of price controls by Congress has so crippled the housing program that the plumbing-fixture industry is saddled with a huge backlog of bathtubs and lavatories for which there is no home market. So the Commerce Department, to rescue the bathtub manufacturers, decided to let them sell to foreign customers.

Another example of the short-sightedness of Congressmen like Fred Hartley of New Jersey and those who pull the wires in the real-estate lobby.

Air Pilots' Pay

The Government has been ducking one factor which some Civil Aeronautics officials contend to be a root cause of recent air crashes —namely, pilots' pay.

Last year, during the TWA strike, the public got the impression that pilots receive fantastic salaries—between $15,000 and $20,000 a year. However, the only pilots who earn such pay are those who fly the oceans. In the USA pilots earn a base pay of from $185 to $300 a month — which they get whether they fly or not. The real money comes from the number of hours they spend in the air. Therefore, if a pilot is to make a high salary he has to spend a maximum number of hours in the air. Sometimes this leads to taking chances.

Airlines have contended they might not get as much work out of pilots if they paid a guaranteed annual wage, but, on the other hand, some Civil Aeronautics officials believe that there wouldn't be as many crashes if pay scales were changed.

Truth is that airline pilots get grueling training before they qualify, have to maintain sharp physical standards, earn every cent they make.

THESE DAYS By George E. Sokolsky

The Error At Paris

MUCH of history is the record of good intentions ending in astounding errors. The Marshall Plan gives the appearance, at this stage, of having been conceived in charity and goodwill, but inevitably having produced a whopper of an historical error, the correction of which may not be possible.

It started with a speech at Harvard on June 5 in which Secretary of State George Marshall said:

". . . Any assistance that this government may render in the future should provide a cure rather than a mere palliative.

"Any government that is willing to assist in the task of recovery will find full cooperation, I am sure, on the part of the United States government. Any government which maneuvers to block the recovery of other countries cannot expect help from us. Furthermore, governments, political parties or groups which seek to perpetuate human misery in order to profit therefrom politically or otherwise will encounter the opposition of the United States."

That is obviously a firm promise. Secretary Marshall is sure, you will note. He does not say how much. He does not describe the nature of the assistance. He merely says that we shall assist a certain type of nation and oppose another type. So far this is in conformity with the Truman Doctrine, although it is a rejection of Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam at which the Big Three made no such fine distinctions. At that time, we spoke only of "peace-loving" nations, meaning Soviet Russia but not Switzerland.

George Marshall sets up a European modus operandi by saying further:

". . . It would be neither fitting nor efficacious for this government to undertake to draw up unilaterally a program resigned to place Europe on its feet economically. This is the business of the Europeans. The initiative, I think, must come from Europe. The role of this country should consist of friendly aid in the drafting of a European program and of later support of such a program so far as it may be practical for us to do so. The program should be a joint one, agreed to by a number, if not all European nations."

Bevin of England and Bidault of France immediately accepted that as a promise, a guarantee and an invitation to go ahead. They called a Conference, and included the Russians. The latter wisely wanted to know precisely what the Americans intended to do, but that no one could say. The most that the Secretary of State could offer was a proposal to Congress for an appropriation, estimated to be $5,000,000,000 a year, more or less, for a number of years, which Congress might or might not agree to do. Certainly, the present Congress is not likely to make any such appropriation on Mr. Truman's or Mr. Marshall's say-so without further and profound investigation.

This the Russians understood and they estimated that it would not go through. The British must grasp at any straw because they are so short of dollars and socialism in that country is inadequately productive.

Now, the good intention in all this lies in the necessity of aiding Great Britain, France, Italy and other European countries that are willing to avoid Communism at home and subservience to Soviet Russia. The error lies in the method of doing it. Instead of determining what this creditor country can and will do and stipulating the terms and conditions of aid, Marshall set up a debtors' conference to gang up on the creditor or to stipulate such conditions as the creditor could not meet, which, in the end, will justify their assumption of a promise given and not kept.

Secretary Marshall might have been warned by the history of the relations between this country and Europe since World War I. He chose to assume that he had a device which would work because of Europe's desperation. Actually, politicians are never desperate because they can always resort to revolution and Communism. Only the United States is desperate because this country wants peace and production. Europe is prepared to make us pay her price for peace and production—any price we can be got to pay. This lack of understanding of European history got George Marshall into his present trouble.

Columnist Comments On Series Of Articles By James A. Farley

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, July 9—There is no sadder chapter in the history of presidential politics than that being revealed in the articles in "Collier's" by James A. Farley, former postmaster general in the cabinet of the late President Roosevelt, and for eight years the chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

It is sad because both Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago and Mr. Roosevelt are not here to make clear the true meaning of whatever was said in the conferences to which Mr. Farley refers. It is tragic also because the American people are being told again that, because some people in politics hold the view that a Catholic cannot be elected either as president or vice-president, this necessarily precludes the nomination of a Catholic to these high offices.

If, as reported, both Mr. Roosevelt and Cardinal Mundelein held such views, it certainly does not seem logical that either of them felt that this position was defensible. On the contrary, the viewpoint expressed was a surrender to the ideas of the so-called "practical politicians." It was a condition rather than a theory which they thought they faced.

Farley Experienced Politician

Mr. Farley, with considerable experience as a politician, thought such a view wrong and was willing to test it if Mr. Roosevelt would say the word. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt—with due regard for his own political fortunes and believing, as he did, that he would be drafted for a third term—did not feel he should take the risk of a political-religious controversy in that 1940 campaign by putting Mr. Farley on the ticket. Something of the same self-interest, it is said, caused Mr. Roosevelt in 1944 to discard, for the vice-presidential nomination, Henry Wallace in favor of Harry Truman when the "practical politicians" told him Wallace would be a handicap to the national ticket because of his radicalism and possible opposition from Catholic voters.

Since Mr. Roosevelt was looking out for his own political future and Mr. Farley felt he was sufficiently popular with the party to be elected vice president along with Mr. Roosevelt, it is natural that the former postmaster general should feel hurt when the religious issue was raised as a bar to first or second place.

Evidently Mr. Roosevelt was disturbed, too, for, after Cardinal Mundelein lunched with the President at the White House early in 1940, the Prelate asked Mr. Farley to meet him in New York. At this conference, Mr. Farley relates, the Cardinal urged him not to press himself as a candidate. The Cardinal did not profess to speak for Mr. Roosevelt, but is quoted by Mr. Farley as having said:

"James, you have always been most frank and open with me so that I feel entirely free in broaching a confidential matter to you. It is my sincere feeling that a Roman Catholic could not be elected president of the United States at this time or for many years to come. I hope, therefore, you will do nothing to involve the Catholics of this country in another debacle such as we experienced in 1928."

But Mr. Farley disagreed. He thought Al Smith and the 1928 campaign on prohibition were wholly different from the 1940 situation and that the country understood the difference. He went on to tell the Cardinal: "You are the first person in the church who has ever attempted to influence me on a political matter, and I have been in politics for 30 years."

But in fairness to the Cardinal, it must be assumed that he spoke in his individual capacity as he had every right to do. He was not presuming to speak on this subject for the church as an institution. Having accepted this hypothesis, one may differ with the Cardinal's personal prediction as to the outcome of a presidential election if a Catholic were nominated. The whole country has gone a long distance along the road of tolerance since 1928, and even in 1940 the test, so far as the vast majority were concerned, would not have been religious but the capacity of the man nominated.

Mr. Farley quotes anew what he said in a public speech in March 1940 shortly after the Mundelein interview. The postmaster general, addressing the annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, said:

Answered Newspaper Article

"We must never permit the ideals of this republic to sink to a point where every American father and mother, regardless of race, color or creed, cannot look proudly into the cradle of their newborn babe and see a future president of the United States."

This was really in answer to a newspaper article published a few days before by a reputable correspondent in the confidence of the White House quoting Mr. Roosevelt as having said that Jim Farley would not be a good candidate for vice-president because of his religion.

One would like to believe that if Mr. Roosevelt were alive today and not listening to the "practical politicians," he would not only applaud the quotation above but would urge publicly the nomination of a Catholic if there happened to be a man of that faith conspicuous in the political limelight. For it cannot be forgotten that Franklin D. Roosevelt placed a Catholic, Alfred E. Smith, in nomination at the Democratic National Convention in 1928, and then campaigned for him.

Mr. Farley is out of politics now. While some may question the wisdom of his publishing memoirs, it cannot be overlooked that when any man is told bluntly in print that his religion is a bar to high office in America, he doesn't feel like remaining silent about it but would rather raise the question so that fair-minded persons in the future will not foreclose the opportunities of any capable American citizen to hold high office "regardless of race, color or creed."

New Coal Contract To Result In Many Things Costing More

By MARK SULLIVAN

Superficially, as a piece of paper, the new coal-wage contract is an ordinary agreement between individuals and groups they represent. One party to the contract is Mr. John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers. The other party is certain major owners of coal mines. Among these the most important are steel companies which own coal mines, especially the United States Steel Corporation.

But the consequences of this contract are not limited to the participants, the effect on them is only a beginning. From them the consequences spread to the entire economy of the country and to every citizen.

Miners will get some $1.75 more per day. Coal will cost some 75 cents more per ton to consumers. (Neither of these figures can be exact—the wage raise varies with different types of work, and the price increase with different kinds of coal and uses of it.)

This is only the beginning. Everything made in industries which use coal as fuel will cost more to make, hence cost more to the public. In one industry, steel, the increase is estimated at some $1.50 a ton. This will spread outward and upward into every article made of steel or into which steel enters. Coal is used by railroads as fuel, hence every article carried by railroads as freight will cost more to carry. No need to illustrate further. The process set in motion by this new coal-wage contract is automatic and cumulative, a certain step upward toward a higher price level for goods generally and the country generally.

The men who made this contract could have acted upon their respective private interests solely, or could take into account the public consequences of what they did. The private interest of Mr. Lewis is served fully, he got substantially what he demanded and got it practically without opposition. On the other side the leading representative of mine owners was Mr. Benjamin F. Fairless, President of United States Steel. Had he acted in the interest of mine owners solely and simply, his course might have been to resist the demanded wage-raise and fight it out. That course, if successful, would have been in the public interest also, for prevention of the wage-raise would have averted the effects on the country that are now in sight.

Mr. Fairless, apparently seeing the public interest in a different way, says he acted in that interest. As the contract was made he said he was "hopeful" it would bring "industrial peace in the bituminous coal industry for a long time to come . . . This should prove to be highly beneficial to the whole economy of the nation . . . In my judgment a coal strike at this time would have paralyzed the industry of the entire country and might also have had an adverse effect upon the international situation."

A source other than Mr. Fairless, but believing that averting a strike was the paramount consideration, gives an additional reason. A strike might have led to another taking over of the mines by the government, another in a series now considerable. And each taking over is a temporary nationalization of coal, the end might be permanent nationalization.

Mr. Fairless, regardless of his motive or line of reasoning, arrived at a result that has become somberly familiar. He appeased what he feared. But even if the appeasement achieves what he hoped for, a different kind of tragedy can come to America as a result of the course he took.

A chief cause of our boom-bust of the 1920s was the taking of too much of the fruits of industry by labor and owners; failure to give enough to the public, in the form of reduced prices of goods. This is now being repeated in coal. Labor is to get more wages, industry must charge higher prices to pay the wages, the public must pay higher prices for goods. Poor public.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

The shortage of newsprint for our daily newspapers has now become critical. It's so bad, in fact, that the papers have taken to abbreviating the titles of movies in advertisements.

The other day I saw "Stallion Road" cut down to "Bridle Path," and for "Brute Force" they simply had "ugh." Of course, they couldn't do that with all the pictures. If they cut "Ivy" down all they'd get is a leaf.

This abbreviation trend has affected the entire newspaper business. Now when a reporter calls in with "lady in Griffith Park falls in lake looking for lost dog," the city editor cuts it down to read, "lady in lake a dog." But with so little print, just think of the fun we'll have reading between the lines.

Of course, this print scarcity causes a lot of confusion. The other day one newspaper ran its crossword puzzle into the racing selections and 10 thousand people bet on a five-letter word meaning "strip." Half the readers of the paper went home without their shirts.

The shortage is getting so bad, I understand one editor was fired for using an adjective. Of course he used it on me.

But all this conversation will be a big help to the reader with the paper so much lighter. Maybe now the delivery boy will be able to reach the porch when he throws it in the morning.

The women are very happy about the newspapers getting smaller in size. Now they'll be able to see their husbands at the breakfast table. I used to bury my head in the paper at breakfast. But I wasn't being rude to my wife. She likes to eat grapefruit.

Congress Should Go Slow On Amputee Auto Law Change

A day or so ago there appeared in this newspaper an account of a Piedmont man, a veteran of World War II, having received one of the first free automobiles in this section offered to amputee veterans of the recent conflict. The gift was from the government. The recipient of this gift was Olyn A. Feight, who had his right foot blown off when he stepped on a land mine near Herstine, Germany.

We mention this fact because Congress is thinking of changing some of the rules under which Uncle Sam has been providing free automobiles for certain disabled veterans.

The autos are being given to World War II veterans who lost a foot or the use of one, such as was the case with Mr. Feight. The veteran selects his own car, has the necessary gadgets attached to meet safety requirements and passes his driver's test. Then the Government pays the bill directly to the dealer.

While there have been few such gifts to veterans in this area, those who are eligible for automobiles, so far as we know, haven't had any difficulty getting their cars. And we know of none who has had to pay more than $1,600 to get a satisfactory car with all the needed safety devices.

But having set up a good thing which appears to be working well, Congress now would wreck the whole program. This very easily could be accomplished under the provision which would raise the $1,600 ceiling to about $1,900. And on top of which the veteran would be permitted to pay, out of his own pocket, the difference between the Government ceiling and the actual price of the automobile.

It's this latter provision that would pave the way to abuses of all sorts under which a veteran might have to pay through the nose to get the car that is supposed to be his "for free."

It is our belief that auto dealers have done a commendable job in supplying autos for amputees. At the suggestion of Congressman Robert J. Corbett, they set up a priority system under which amputees are given preference over all other customers.

But it is easy to foresee how, under a new rule that would permit "payments on the side" by the veteran, a few unscrupulous people could chisel on the ex-GIs by demanding a special "bonus" from them for the delivery of an automobile.

There is one thing Congress should lose no time in doing, however. That is to carry out its intention to extend the deadline on applications.

There are hundreds of disabled servicemen who would qualify for automobiles but for the fact they are still receiving treatment in Army and Navy hospitals. The law requires a man must be discharged before he can claim a car.

Under such circumstances, some provision should be made to extend to these hospitalized amputees—after discharge—the same benefits accorded those GIs who have been able to return home sooner as civilians.

A Study Could Help

Because the President has limited powers to tinker with it, subject to congressional approval, the federal government ought to be a more efficient mechanism than it used to be. During the present session of Congress, for example, Truman has submitted three reorganization plans and two have been allowed to stand.

But if progress is being made, the impression persists that there is still a great deal to be done if functions are to be so allotted that overlapping and duplication of effort can be eliminated, if lines of authority are to be straightened out, if in general the machinery is to operate smoothly—and economically. The public has yet to be convinced that the complexities that developed during the Roosevelt years have been removed—or are being removed as speedily as possible.

Congress evidently shares this skepticism and the President himself seems to feel that it is justified. It is reported that the bill introduced by Senator Lodge and Representative Brown, which would create a commission charged with conducting a comprehensive study of the federal government, will be signed when it reaches the White House. If so, this is one area where there may be fruitful cooperation between Congress and the chief executive.

Such a commission, provided it is made up of able men with no political axe to grind, can do a most useful job. Congress, absorbed in finding solutions to new needs, can hardly be expected to take a detached view of the federal establishment. Even the President must have difficulty seeing the woods for the trees. The advice of men of affairs who can look at the whole picture objectively should be of very high value.

Their Heritage

The information that famous State Regiments of Southern Militia are again permitted to carry their traditional battle banners makes sensible news.

True it is that there are some who forget that the Civil War has ended—men and women who fail to grasp the importance of the problems of the Nation today. They spend their time arranging the affairs of history of almost a century ago. They are that far behind in the progress of America.

The three wars that have been successfully terminated since the Civil War had much to do with the cementing of ties between the men of the North and South. In the camps and on the field, the men from all sections of the country commingled under the same conditions; they learned the bigness of their brothers from other parts of the country; they learned that their motives and their patriotism were measured in the same terms as their own. Truly, the nation's mutually fought wars were the melting furnaces finally binding the North and South.

The line of the Blue and the Gray that has stretched through the past 75 years has dwindled to a mere handful. Since the turn of the century they have passed, to the younger veterans as a body, their work of inculcating patriotism and true Americanism into the people. Especially those who fail to appreciate the responsibilities they owe their government.

Those proud banners will add much to the spirit of the new regiments which will march behind them. Americans everywhere respect their heritage.

Russia's political unanimity probably adds to the drabness of life in Russia, which holds the world's championship in that respect.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

CONTROL OF TUBERCULOSIS IN AMERICA

TUBERCULOSIS, which has been the scourge of mankind thruout the centuries, is found all over the world. The number of victims in a given locality depends upon the resistance of the inhabitants and what control measures are being taken.

In the United States, the death rate is 47 per 100,000 of the population. Some reports make it even lower—41.3. This record is bettered only by Denmark, Australia, and the Netherlands. In Germany, the mortality is said to be 50; Canada, 53; Mexico, 56; England, 62; Sweden, 75; Eire, 113; Russia, 160; Poland, 195, and Brazil, 250. It is surprising to know that Greenland is highest, with 550. Whether these figures are accurate is a question, especially those from war torn countries where vital statistics are difficult to compile.

The United States was not always so fortunate and much effort has been expended in combating the disorder. Less than 60 years ago, the mortality was 245 per 100,000. By 1904 it had declined to 200 and in that year we had only six tuberculosis sanitariums and hospitals. But only advanced cases went to institutions and consequently they could boast of few cures. "Consumptives" were not isolated because the disease was looked upon as hereditary; each victim mingled with healthy individuals until weakness forced him to bed. Thus a diagnosis of tuberculosis, especially in young men and women, was a death warrant.

Infected cattle were everywhere, providing a second source of contamination. Betwen 1905 and 1915, several advances were made in health education; isolation, sanitation, pasteurization of milk, and eradication of infected cows came to the fore. This was the era of fresh air therapy. High altitudes were advocated — even mountain climbing. Pneumothorax was initiated tho used only occasionally.

In the next decade, chest surgery rose in popularity and health departments instituted more rigid control procedures. Early diagnosis was encouraged, and attempts were made to increase the resistance of children. Tuberculin tests came into vogue and authorities began to question the efficacy of fresh air as a specific; the need for rest was stressed.

Between 1925 and 1935, the X-ray became more widespread; any one who had been exposed was urged to be examined. Physicians realized that the stethoscope alone was not enough; that X-rays were necessary if the milder forms were to be picked up. Experiments were done with BCG vaccine in an attempt to immunize youngsters living in highly infectious environments. Pneumothorax proved its worth.

During the next 12 years all of the control measures reached their highest peaks. Mass X-ray programs were established; miniature films were devised, furnishing an inexpensive and rapid study of the lungs of large groups. Besides discovering beginning cases, each new victim could be isolated, thus decreasing the risk to the family and associates. The sulfonamides and antibiotics were tried. The effects of streptomycin were demonstrated and now, for the first time, there is a possibility of treating the disease actively in order to shorten the course of treatment. With the weapons we now possess, the disease could be wiped out in one generation.

TEARLESS

V. W. writes: Does not being able to cry indicate anything in a grown-up?

REPLY

Perhaps the well is dry. Some individuals are more stoical by nature than others.

DISTRESS FROM FAT

M. C. writes: Whenever I take vitamin D tablets I become nauseous. Is there any way in which this reaction can be overcome?

REPLY

D is an oil soluble vitamin and some persons are unable to tolerate such oily preparations. Perhaps you could take a product with a thicker capsule, which would pass thru the stomach without being digested. The alternative to pills is the use of sunlight. Try sitting on the beach whenever possible.

"FALLEN" ARCHES

H. T. writes: I was born with flat feet. Can anything be done about it at the age of 18?

REPLY

We all were but, in learning to walk, our arches usually develop. The disorder need not necessarily cause trouble as there are individuals with arches as flat as pancakes who have won hundred yard dashes. If discomfort is present, it means that strain exists. With properly padded shoes and foot exercises, a young person should be able to correct the condition.

FEAR OF CLOSED SPACES

P. G. writes: Can claustrophobia be cured?

REPLY

Yes, in many cases. The help of a psychiatrist may be needed altho many phobias disappear as we grow older.

MINOR SURGERY

D. A. writes: Can an enlarged prastate be reduced by X-ray treatments so that surgery will be unnecessary? I have high blood pressure and heart trouble so would hate to risk surgery.

REPLY

No, but a minor surgical procedure could be done with an electric current to relieve prostatic obstruction.

FARFETCHED

H. T. writes: Can a gall bladder condition cause an itching throat?

REPLY

No relationship between the two. If gall bladder disease is associated with jaundice, itching of the skin often occurs.

A PEEK BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Weatherman Affects U. S. Foreign Policy; One Congressman Vetoes Veterans Hospital; Europe Gets Bathtubs Due To U. S. Housing Shortage

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The weatherman may have some effect upon Secretary of State Marshall's foreign policy.

For the past five years bumper American crops have permitted us to dominate the world food situation—and thereby somewhat influence its politics. But now, bad weather at home plus good weather in Russia may partly reverse this situation.

Although the American wheat crop will be a record-breaker, other American grain crops are down. Unofficial studies of the world wheat situation made by the Agriculture Department indicate that Russia's wheat crop also will be greater than ever.

In fact, Russia, for the first time since before the war, should be able not only to end bread rationing at home but export about 300,000,000 bushels of wheat abroad. The Russians also are expected to bring in a rye crop of some 840,000,000 bushels, which should give them a surplus of about 100,000,000 bushels with which to play power politics.

While this may somewhat affect the Marshall plan for aiding European countries which cooperate with the Western European bloc, actually manufactured goods, particularly steel, still remain almost as important as food.

Speaker Martin and FDR

Cagey Speaker Joe Martin used to fight the late President Roosevelt on a lot of things. But chatting with a friend the other day he remarked that it was a lot different visiting the White House when occupied by FDR.

"He was a great guy," reminisced Martin. "He had a way of talking about things that I never forget. He used to say to me, 'Joe, how are those Douglas firs up on the Cape?'

"I didn't know anything about any Douglas firs on the Cape, and he knew I didn't. It was just his way of putting me in a hole."

One member of Congress alone, bull-headed Rep. Gene Cox of Georgia, has been able to block the construction of a badly needed veterans hospital.

Veterans Administrator Gen. Omar Bradley has ordered the hospital built, and a Congressional committee originally approved it. But Congressman Cox has said no.

Cox is sore because General Bradley has closed down another hospital in Cox's Congressional district at Thomasville, Ga. The Georgia hospital, composed of a group of temporary wooden buildings built by the Army, was ruled out by General Bradley as a fire trap. Also, the plumbing was not sufficient to meet the sanitary requirements of a hospital.

Finally, General Bradley informed Congress that the cost of upkeep on this makeshift Georgia hospital for six years would equal the cost of building a modern hospital 40 miles away in Tallahassee, Fla.

However, plans for the new Florida hospital were scarcely completed when Cox, with the aid of his close crony on the Rules Committee, Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia, slipped an amendment into the Independent Offices Appropriations Bill, to stop construction at Tallahassee.

The amendment inserted by Congressman Smith was a neat log-rolling provision which also awarded a veterans hospital site to Smith's own Congressional district in Virginia.

Congressman Cox has been bombarding the White House and the Veterans Administration, demanding that the wooden hospital in his district be reopened. Meanwhile maimed and sick veterans in that area are out of luck, all because of the peevishness of one Congressman.

Note—Cox has been drumming up votes for his hospital from Republicans by telling them that the Tallahassee project was a "political gift" President Roosevelt had promised Senator Claude Pepper. Tallahassee is Pepper's hometown, but he denies ever talking to FDR about the hospital.

Bathtubs for Europe

Despite the critical shortage of cast iron for domestic uses, the Commerce Department last week decided to lift all export controls on the shipments of lavatories and bathtubs abroad.

Story behind this is that plumbing-fixture manufacturers have produced enough lavatories and bathtubs to equip more than a million new housing units in the United States during the current year. They had every reason to expect that these new homes would be built in 1947—but now they won't be.

The lifting of price controls by Congress has so crippled the housing program that the plumbing-fixture industry is saddled with a huge backlog of bathtubs and lavatories for which there is no home market. So the Commerce Department, to rescue the bathtub manufacturers, decided to let them sell to foreign customers.

Another example of the short-sightedness of Congressmen like Fred Hartley of New Jersey and those who pull the wires in the real-estate lobby.

Air Pilots' Pay

The Government has been ducking one factor which some Civil Aeronautics officials contend to be a root cause of recent air crashes—namely, pilots' pay.

Last year, during the TWA strike, the public got the impression that pilots receive fantastic salaries—between $15,000 and $20,000 a year. However, the only pilots who earn such pay are those who fly the oceans. In the USA pilots earn a base pay of from $185 to $300 a month — which they get whether they fly or not. The real money comes from the number of hours they spend in the air. Therefore, if a pilot is to make a high salary he has to spend a maximum number of hours in the air. Sometimes this leads to taking chances.

Airlines have contended they might not get as much work out of pilots if they paid a guaranteed annual wage, but, on the other hand, some Civil Aeronautics officials believe that there wouldn't be as many crashes if pay scales were changed.

Truth is that airline pilots get grueling training before they qualify, have to maintain sharp physical standards, earn every cent they make.

THESE DAYS By George E. Sokolsky

The Error At Paris

MUCH of history is the record of good intentions ending in astounding errors. The Marshall Plan gives the appearance, at this stage, of having been conceived in charity and goodwill, but inevitably having produced a whopper of an historical error, the correction of which may not be possible.

It started with a speech at Harvard on June 5 in which Secretary of State George Marshall said:

". . . Any assistance that this government may render in the future should provide a cure rather than a mere palliative.

"Any government that is willing to assist in the task of recovery will find full cooperation, I am sure, on the part of the United States government. Any government which maneuvers to block the recovery of other countries cannot expect help from us. Furthermore, governments, political parties or groups which seek to perpetuate human misery in order to profit therefrom politically or otherwise will encounter the opposition of the United States."

That is obviously a firm promise. Secretary Marshall is sure, you will note. He does not say how much. He does not describe the nature of the assistance. He merely says that we shall assist a certain type of nation and oppose another type. So far this is in conformity with the Truman Doctrine, although it is a rejection of Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam at which the Big Three made no such fine distinctions. At that time, we spoke only of "peace-loving" nations, meaning Soviet Russia but not Switzerland.

George Marshall sets up a European modus operandi by saying further:

". . . It would be neither fitting nor efficacious for this government to undertake to draw up unilaterally a program designed to place Europe on its feet economically. This is the business of the Europeans. The initiative, I think, must come from Europe. The role of this country should consist of friendly aid in the drafting of a European program and of later support of such a program so far as it may be practical for us to do so. The program should be a joint one, agreed to by a number, if not all European nations."

Bevin of England and Bidault of France immediately accepted that as a promise, a guarantee and an invitation to go ahead. They called a Conference, and included the Russians. The latter wisely wanted to know precisely what the Americans intended to do, but that no one could say. The most that the Secretary of State could offer was a proposal to Congress for an appropriation, estimated to be $5,000,000,000 a year, more or less, for a number of years, which Congress might or might not agree to do. Certainly, the present Congress is not likely to make any such appropriation on Mr. Truman's or Mr. Marshall's say-so without further and profound investigation.

This the Russians understood and they estimated that it would not go through. The British must grasp at any straw because they are so short of dollars and socialism in that country is inadequately productive.

Now, the good intention in all this lies in the necessity of aiding Great Britain, France, Italy and other European countries that are willing to avoid Communism at home and subservience to Soviet Russia. The error lies in the method of doing it. Instead of determining what this creditor country can and will do and stipulating the terms and conditions of aid, Marshall set up a debtors' conference to gang up on the creditor or to stipulate such conditions as the creditor could not meet, which, in the end, will justify their assumption of a promise given and not kept.

Secretary Marshall might have been warned by the history of the relations between this country and Europe since World War I. He chose to assume that he had a device which would work because of Europe's desperation. Actually, politicians are never desperate because they can always resort to revolution and Communism. Only the United States is desperate because this country wants peace and production. Europe is prepared to make us pay her price for peace and production—any price we can be got to pay. This lack of understanding of European history got George Marshall into his present trouble.

Columnist Comments On Series Of Articles By James A. Farley

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, July 9—There is no sadder chapter in the history of presidential politics than that being revealed in the articles in "Collier's" by James A. Farley, former postmaster general in the cabinet of the late President Roosevelt, and for eight years the chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

It is sad because both Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago and Mr. Roosevelt are not here to make clear the true meaning of whatever was said in the conferences to which Mr. Farley refers. It is tragic also because the American people are being told again that, because some people in politics hold the view that a Catholic cannot be elected either as president or vice-president, this necessarily precludes the nomination of a Catholic to these high offices.

If, as reported, both Mr. Roosevelt and Cardinal Mundelein held such views, it certainly does not seem logical that either of them felt that this position was defensible. On the contrary, the viewpoint expressed was a surrender to the ideas of the so-called "practical politicians." It was a condition rather than a theory which they thought they faced.

Farley Experienced Politician

Mr. Farley, with considerable experience as a politician, thought such a view wrong and was willing to test it if Mr. Roosevelt would say the word. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt—with due regard for his own political fortunes and believing, as he did, that he would be drafted for a third term—did not feel he should take the risk of a political-religious controversy in that 1940 campaign by putting Mr. Farley on the ticket. Something of the same self-interest, it is said, caused Mr. Roosevelt in 1944 to discard, for the vice-presidential nomination, Henry Wallace in favor of Harry Truman when the "practical politicians" told him Wallace would be a handicap to the national ticket because of his radicalism and possible opposition from Catholic voters.

Since Mr. Roosevelt was looking out for his own political future and Mr. Farley felt he was sufficiently popular with the party to be elected vice president along with Mr. Roosevelt, it is natural that the former postmaster general should feel hurt when the religious issue was raised as a bar to first or second place.

Evidently Mr. Roosevelt was disturbed, too, for, after Cardinal Mundelein lunched with the President at the White House early in 1940, the Prelate asked Mr. Farley to meet him in New York. At this conference, Mr. Farley relates, the Cardinal urged him not to press himself as a candidate. The Cardinal did not profess to speak for Mr. Roosevelt, but is quoted by Mr. Farley as having said:

"James, you have always been most frank and open with me so that I feel entirely free in broaching a confidential matter to you. It is my sincere feeling that a Roman Catholic could not be elected president of the United States at this time or for many years to come. I hope, therefore, you will do nothing to involve the Catholics of this country in another debacle such as we experienced in 1928."

But Mr. Farley disagreed. He thought Al Smith and the 1928 campaign on prohibition were wholly different from the 1940 situation and that the country understood the difference. He went on to tell the Cardinal: "You are the first person in the church who has ever attempted to influence me on a political matter, and I have been in politics for 30 years."

But in fairness to the Cardinal, it must be assumed that he spoke in his individual capacity as he had every right to do. He was not presuming to speak on this subject for the church as an institution. Having accepted this hypothesis, one may differ with the Cardinal's personal prediction as to the outcome of a presidential election if a Catholic were nominated. The whole country has gone a long distance along the road of tolerance since 1928, and even in 1940 the test, so far as the vast majority were concerned, would not have been religious but the capacity of the man nominated.

Mr. Farley quotes anew what he said in a public speech in March 1940 shortly after the Mundelein interview. The postmaster general, addressing the annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, said:

Answered Newspaper Article

"We must never permit the ideals of this republic to sink to a point where every American father and mother, regardless of race, color or creed, cannot look proudly into the cradle of their newborn babe and see a future president of the United States."

This was really in answer to a newspaper article published a few days before by a reputable correspondent in the confidence of the White House quoting Mr. Roosevelt as having said that Jim Farley would not be a good candidate for vice-president because of his religion.

One would like to believe that if Mr. Roosevelt were alive today and not listening to the "practical politicians," he would not only applaud the quotation above but would urge publicly the nomination of a Catholic if there happened to be a man of that faith conspicuous in the political limelight. For it cannot be forgotten that Franklin D. Roosevelt placed a Catholic, Alfred E. Smith, in nomination at the Democratic National Convention in 1928, and then campaigned for him.

Mr. Farley is out of politics now. While some may question the wisdom of his publishing memoirs, it cannot be overlooked that when any man is told bluntly in print that his religion is a bar to high office in America, he doesn't feel like remaining silent about it but would rather raise the question so that fair-minded persons in the future will not foreclose the opportunities of any capable American citizen to hold high office "regardless of race, color or creed."

New Coal Contract To Result In Many Things Costing More

By MARK SULLIVAN

Superficially, as a piece of paper, the new coal-wage contract is an ordinary agreement between individuals and groups they represent. One party to the contract is Mr. John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers. The other party is certain major owners of coal mines. Among these the most important are steel companies which own coal mines, especially the United States Steel Corporation.

But the consequences of this contract are not limited to the participants, the effect on them is only a beginning. From them the consequences spread to the entire economy of the country and to every citizen.

Miners will get some $1.75 more per day. Coal will cost some 75 cents more per ton to consumers. (Neither of these figures can be exact—the wage raise varies with different types of work, and the price increase with different kinds of coal and uses of it.)

This is only the beginning. Everything made in industries which use coal as fuel will cost more to make, hence cost more to the public. In one industry, steel, the increase is estimated at some $1.50 a ton. This will spread outward and upward into every article made of steel or into which steel enters. Coal is used by railroads as fuel, hence every article carried by railroads as freight will cost more to carry. No need to illustrate further. The process set in motion by this new coal-wage contract is automatic and cumulative, a certain step upward toward a higher price level for goods generally and the country generally.

The men who made this contract could have acted upon their respective private interests solely, or could take into account the public consequences of what they did. The private interest of Mr. Lewis is served fully, he got substantially what he demanded and got it practically without opposition. On the other side the leading representative of mine owners was Mr. Benjamin F. Fairless, President of United States Steel. Had he acted in the interest of mine owners solely and simply, his course might have been to resist the demanded wage-raise and fight it out. That course, if successful, would have been in the public interest also, for prevention of the wage-raise would have averted the effects on the country that are now in sight.

Mr. Fairless, apparently seeing the public interest in a different way, says he acted in that interest. As the contract was made he said he was "hopeful" it would bring "industrial peace in the bituminous coal industry for a long time to come . . . This should prove to be highly beneficial to the whole economy of the nation . . . In my judgment a coal strike at this time would have paralyzed the industry of the entire country and might also have had an adverse effect upon the international situation."

A source other than Mr. Fairless, but believing that averting a strike was the paramount consideration, gives an additional reason. A strike might have led to another taking over of the mines by the government, another in a series now considerable. And each taking over is a temporary nationalization of coal, the end might be permanent nationalization.

Mr. Fairless, regardless of his motive or line of reasoning, arrived at a result that has become somberly familiar. He appeased what he feared. But even if the appeasement achieves what he hoped for, a different kind of tragedy can come to America as a result of the course he took.

A chief cause of our boom-bust of the 1920s was the taking of too much of the fruits of industry by labor and owners; failure to give enough to the public, in the form of reduced prices of goods. This is now being repeated in coal. Labor is to get more wages, industry must charge higher prices to pay the wages, the public must pay higher prices for goods. Poor public.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

The shortage of newsprint for our daily newspapers has now become critical. It's so bad, in fact, that the papers have taken to abbreviating the titles of movies in advertisements.

The other day I saw "Stallion Road" cut down to "Bridle Path," and for "Brute Force" they simply had "ugh." Of course, they couldn't do that with all the pictures. If they cut "Ivy" down all they'd get is a leaf.

This abbreviation trend has affected the entire newspaper business. Now when a reporter calls in with "lady in Griffith Park falls in lake looking for lost dog," the city editor cuts it down to read, "lady in lake a dog." But with so little print, just think of the fun we'll have reading between the lines.

Of course, this print scarcity causes a lot of confusion. The other day one newspaper ran its crossword puzzle into the racing selections and 10 thousand people bet on a five-letter word meaning "strip." Half the readers of the paper went home without their shirts.

The shortage is getting so bad, I understand one editor was fired for using an adjective. Of course he used it on me.

But all this conversation will be a big help to the reader with the paper so much lighter. Maybe now the delivery boy will be able to reach the porch when he throws it in the morning.

The women are very happy about the newspapers getting smaller in size. Now they'll be able to see their husbands at the breakfast table. I used to bury my head in the paper at breakfast. But I wasn't being rude to my wife. She likes to eat grapefruit.

Artillery Officer Will Speak Here

The second of a series of seven illustrated lectures on the African, Sicilian, Italian and North African campaigns for officers and enlisted personnel of the National Guard and composite Reserve Corps will be presented Thursday, July 24, at 8 p. m., in the City Hall auditorium.

Lt. Col. Harvey K. Palmer, Jr., senior Field Artillery instructor for the Maryland Military District will present a lecture entitled "The Sicilian Campaign", Captain Thomas Stafford, 208th Composite Group instructor announced.

Colonel Palmer was educated at Jamestown, N. Y., and is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in Field Artillery in 1923.

During World War II, he served as a lieutenant colonel and battalion commander in the European Theatre. He saw action with the 102nd Division Artillery and also served with the 79th Division and the 1st Division Artillery.

He had been awarded the Bronze Star, American Defense Ribbon, Victory Medal, and battle stars for the Normandy, Rhineland, and Central Germany campaigns.

FOUR ARE INJURED IN COLLISION HERE

Four persons were slightly injured early yesterday morning when the car in which they were riding crashed against the rear of a truck near the intersection of Henderson Avenue and Pear Street.

Police said the accident occurred at 1:10 a. m. when the car operated by Jack Zembower, 19, 1801 Bedford Street, collided with the one and one-half ton truck operated by Clarence F. Reynolds, Timonium, Md.

Zembower suffered a cut about the nose. Riding with him and treated in Allegany Hospital were William Watson, 21, 309 Race Street, for bruises; Mildred Stotler, 17, 526 Bedford Street, brush burns of the chin, and Mary Downlitter, 19, Ellerslie, lacerations on the left side of the head and above the left eye.

Lt. James E. Van said the truck Reynolds was driving north on Henderson Avenue had passed the intersection and was moving around a parked car when the car rammed against the rear of the truck.

Zembower was charged with reckless driving and will receive a hearing in trial magistrates court.

THE EXCITING STORY OF 1948 FUR FASHION UNFOLDS

in a glorious showing of the new ripple backs . . . new longer lengths . . . new collars . . . new sleeves

The Style Story in Furs is a Longer one this Year...

Columns could be written about the newness of the 1948 fur fashions, because nearly everything is new except Rosenbaum's traditional quality. Here are the highlights of the 1948 style details . . . come, see them this week in our initial fur showing of the season.

LENGTHS

1948 fur coat lengths will run from 32 to 34 inches for the shorter coat. Longer lengths will be at mid-calf for Furs that can be worked into this longer idea.

SHOULDERS

Are far less exaggerated. The flange treatment is very much on the wane, yielding to a new drape fashion. The sleeve hangs softly from the shoulder line and works its way dramatically and gracefully toward the elbow, and then back into a narrow cuff arrangement. This will be fairly well regarded as a major note.

SLEEVES

The push-up sleeve has been replaced by the new overlapping LEG-OF-MUTTON with cuff. The PARACHUTE SLEEVE is being displayed rather generously, and this is natural, since it was only introduced as the past season advanced. For the more conservative needs, there are some turn-back cuff arrangements. In instances, SLEEVES are huge enough to almost resemble Capes.

COLLARS

Any number of coats are being shown with tricky PETER PAN COLLAR arrangements, as the QUEEN ANNE STAND-UP COLLAR. Surprising, too, both collar treatments are shown by the "ultra" producers, who feature the unusual in Furs. Indeed, the TUNNEL COLLAR, is quite prominent. This is the fashion designed to frame the face, and affect a high neckline. The CARDIGAN NECKLINE, with accentuated points, is quite the "go."

BACKS

The FLARE IDEA is very much in evidence, but more pronounced in the shorter length coats . . . In fact, it's quite fabulous in some . . . Any number of BACK TREATMENTS reflect the free-swing influence . . . . Often from a SUNBURST YOKE.

There are SPORT FUR COATS, half-belted at back, and often with brilliant button trimming . . . Emphasis is placed on decorative buttons. They're made in the costume-jewelry type of button, and add a note of colorful elegance.

We can say, without the slightest exaggeration that the sumptuous beauty and sterling quality of the coats in this collection have never been equalled in the history of furs! These are the dream-creations which furriers have been working toward for many a long year.

Pelts so fabulously lush and incredibly supple . . . so rich in sheen and color . . . have been fashioned with a lavishness never before possible.

Most of these 1948 fashions have, actually, 30% more fur than coats of any previous year.

And most important too, is the fact that prices are at down-to-earth figures. Coats of this quality would be unthinkable last year at the new, lower 1948 prices.

Mrs. Belle French Troxell To Mark 90th Birthday

Will Receive Friends Saturday

Mrs. Belle French Troxell will celebrate her 90th birthday with a family dinner party Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carl C. Hetzel, 106 Decatur Street, with whom she resides and will receive her friends informally during the day.

Summer flowers will be used in the decorations and out of town guests here for the observance are Mrs. Milton B. Christ, a granddaughter, and her children, Marjory and Carl, Emmitsburg and Mrs. Charles M. Shriver, a niece, Pikesville.

Born in Baltimore, July 12, 1857, a daughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. Robert A. French, she came to Cumberland with her parents the first year of the Civil War, when her father, who was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, was transferred here. The latter part of his years of service Mr. French was superintendent of the Romney division.

In 1876 she and Charles S. Troxell were married in St. Paul's English Lutheran Church with Rev. Mr. Holloway officiating. Mrs. Hetzel is their only child. Mrs. Troxell has three grandchildren, Mrs. Christ, Mrs. Charles A. Williams, Panama; and Mrs. F. Bruce Fable, this city.

Since coming to Cumberland Mrs. Troxell has been a member of St. Paul's English Lutheran Church and took an active part in it's activities until recent years. Also active in civic affairs, she was one of the charter members of the Ladies Auxiliary of Central YMCA and served as it's president for 35 years. Although living a retired life she is in good health and is interested in the affairs of Cumberland and the world.

The only municipally owned archaeological project in the United States is Pueblo Grande, about four miles east of Phoenix, Arizona.

Mr., Mrs. Sherry To Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sherry will celebrate their 22nd wedding anniversary with a family dinner party, Saturday at their home, 532 Woodside Avenue. A rainbow color scheme will be carried out in the decorations with assorted summer flowers.

The former Miss Catherine Clem, daughter of Milo Clem, Sr., city, and John E. Sherry, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherry, also of Cumberland, were married July 12, 1925. The wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Thompson in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church. Miss Ruth Campbell and Percy Wilson were their attendants.

Mr. Sherry is a desk sergeant with the city police. He is a member of the Cumberland Aerie, No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Knights of Malta. Mrs. Sherry is a member of the Navy Mothers Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherry are the parents of three children, John, a veteran of 21 months in the Navy, Pauline and Joanne, all at home.

Events In Brief

The Ladies Bible Class of Grace Methodist Church has postponed indefinitely the picnic it had planned for today in Constitution Park.

Cumberland Chapter 914, Women of the Moose will meet at 8 tonight at the home, with Mrs. Shirley Short conducting her first meeting since her installation.

The Young Women's Mission Circle of the First Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 tonight.

A covered dish supper and business meeting of the Sunday School Council of the First Baptist Church will be held at 6 tomorrow night.

The Excelsior Sunday School Class of Grace Methodist Church will hold a family picnic tomorrow night at Constitution Park.

The Western Maryland Chiropractic Association will meet in the form of a picnic tonight at the home of Dr. Adam Baer, Frostburg.

Cumberland Chapter DeMolay will hold a semi-formal dance tomorrow night at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club with Jimmy Andrews and his orchestra playing from 9 until midnight. Admittance is by invitation only.

Mrs. Sarah E. Brown, 214 Roberts Street, was awarded a prize for being the oldest mother attending the picnic at Bethel Methodist picnic grounds, Okonoko, W. Va., July 4. Mrs. Brown is 92 years and eight months old.

Plans for a wiener roast on August 1, in Constitution Park were formulated at the meeting of the Jean Roland Circle of Melvin Chapel, earlier in the week at the home of Edith and Dorothy Streett. A program was presented by Katherine Sue Zais, Goldie Imes and Louella Perdew.

The Women's Missionary Society of Second Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 tonight at the church.

The RTAO will hold a blue jean dance from 8 to 11 tonight at the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club.

Travelers Aid Society Receives Report

The regular meeting of the Travelers Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon at the city hall where Mrs. Nora Fleming gave her report for the month.

It included a new item, contributing groceries to eight persons, whose home burned and everything was destroyed. They had lived near Pittsburgh and were on their way to Baltimore, looking for work. They were also provided with clothing.

The report also consisted of 43 contacts made; 33 investigations; meals provided for 56; lodgings for 12; transportation for one; three wires sent; three long distance calls made; eight letters written; three visits made and 89 local phone calls completed.

St. Mary's Alumni Has Annual Party At Marydale

Approximately 100 members and guests attended the annual party of St. Mary's Alumni Association, Tuesday night at Marydale. Dancing with music by Jimmy Andrews' quintet and cards featured the entertainment. Prizes were won by Mrs. Charles Freeland, Mrs. John Niland, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Arthur Clark and Mrs. Rose Ambrose.

Concluding the evening, refreshments were served by Miss Margaret King and her committee, including Miss Adelaide Hession, Mrs. Angela Justice, Miss Gertrude Clancey, Miss Lillian VanMeter, Miss Catherine King, Mrs. Florence Staarman and Mrs. Helene Buzzard.

The association is planning another dance sometime later in the summer.

Fair Exhibits Discussed

Members of the Bedford Road Homemakers Club were urged to enter exhibits at the fair next month and Mrs. Thomas Buser and Mrs. William McDermott named by Mrs. G. R. Golladay, to assist Mrs. Robert Streett, Flower chairman, in sending cards to the sick. The meeting was held Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Charles McDonald, Bowling Green.

Reports on the RWSC were given with Mrs. McDermott giving the highlights on the talks; Mrs. Ernest Powell, on ceramics; Mrs. Earl Smith, a resume of the food and clothing projects; Mrs. L. J. Millar and Mrs. Thomas Wotring spoke on the accomplishments of the fourth year members and flower arrangements; Mrs. Golladay, on the sermon to the graduates and Mrs. Frederick W. Growden, who received her eight year pin, spoke on "World Topics of Today."

July 4 games featured the recreation under the direction of Mrs. R. J. Earsom and the prize was won by Mrs. Orndorff. Mrs. Wotring will be hostess for the August meeting, which will feature a white elephant and hat sale.

The oil field of Iran [illegible] the southwest territory at the head of the Persian Gulf, is the single field in existence.

Mrs. Belle French Troxell To Mark 90th Birthday

Will Receive Friends Saturday

Mrs. Belle French Troxell will celebrate her 90th birthday with a family dinner party Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carl C. Hetzel, 106 Decatur Street, with whom she resides and will receive her friends informally during the day.

Summer flowers will be used in the decorations and out of town guests here for the observance are Mrs. Milton B. Christ, a granddaughter, and her children, Marjory and Carl, Emmitsburg and Mrs. Charles M. Shriver, a niece, Pikesville.

Born in Baltimore, July 12, 1857, a daughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. Robert A. French, she came to Cumberland with her parents the first year of the Civil War, when her father, who was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, was transferred here. The latter part of his years of service Mr. French was superintendent of the Romney division.

In 1876 she and Charles S. Troxell were married in St. Paul's English Lutheran Church with Rev. Mr. Holloway officiating. Mrs. Hetzel is their only child. Mrs. Troxell has three grandchildren, Mrs. Christ, Mrs. Charles A. Williams, Panama; and Mrs. F. Bruce Fable, this city.

Since coming to Cumberland Mrs. Troxell has been a member of St. Paul's English Lutheran Church and took an active part in it's activities until recent years. Also active in civic affairs, she was one of the charter members of the Ladies Auxiliary of Central YMCA and served as it's president for 35 years. Although living a retired life she is in good health and is interested in the affairs of Cumberland and the world.

The only municipally owned archaeological project in the United States is Pueblo Grande, about four miles east of Phoenix, Arizona.

Mr., Mrs. Sherry To Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sherry will celebrate their 22nd wedding anniversary with a family dinner party, Saturday at their home, 532 Woodside Avenue. A rainbow color scheme will be carried out in the decorations with assorted summer flowers.

The former Miss Catherine Clem, daughter of Milo Clem, Sr., city, and John E. Sherry, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherry, also of Cumberland, were married July 12, 1925. The wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Thompson in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church. Miss Ruth Campbell and Percy Wilson were their attendants.

Mr. Sherry is a desk sergeant with the city police. He is a member of the Cumberland Aerie, No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Knights of Malta. Mrs. Sherry is a member of the Navy Mothers Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherry are the parents of three children, John, a veteran of 21 months in the Navy, Pauline and Joanne, all at home.

Events In Brief

The Ladies Bible Class of Grace Methodist Church has postponed indefinitely the picnic it had planned for today in Constitution Park.

Cumberland Chapter 914, Women of the Moose will meet at 8 tonight at the home, with Mrs. Shirley Short conducting her first meeting since her installation.

The Young Women's Mission Circle of the First Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 tonight.

A covered dish supper and business meeting of the Sunday School Council of the First Baptist Church will be held at 6 tomorrow night.

The Excelsior Sunday School Class of Grace Methodist Church will hold a family picnic tomorrow night at Constitution Park.

The Western Maryland Chiropractic Association will meet in the form of a picnic tonight at the home of Dr. Adam Baer, Frostburg.

Cumberland Chapter DeMolay will hold a semi-formal dance tomorrow night at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club with Jimmy Andrews and his orchestra playing from 9 until midnight. Admittance is by invitation only.

Mrs. Sarah E. Brown, 214 Roberts Street, was awarded a prize for being the oldest mother attending the picnic at Bethel Methodist picnic grounds, Okonoko, W. Va., July 4. Mrs. Brown is 92 years and eight months old.

Plans for a wiener roast on August 1, in Constitution Park were formulated at the meeting of the Jean Roland Circle of Melvin Chapel, earlier in the week at the home of Edith and Dorothy Streett. A program was presented by Katherine Sue Zais, Goldie Imes and Louella Perdew.

The Women's Missionary Society of Second Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 tonight at the church.

The RTAO will hold a blue jean dance from 8 to 11 tonight at the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club.

Advice To The Lovelorn

Jealous Person Is A Poor Risk, Girl Of 18 Is Advised

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl 18 years old and in love with a man 22. He tells me he loves me, and even talks of marriage, but he makes me very jealous by fooling around with my girl friends when he comes to see me. He knows I get jealous, yet he keeps on doing it.

Please tell me how to overcome my jealousy. "HEARTACHE"

Dear "Heartache:"

In my opinion, few 18-year-old girls are mature enough to be thinking about getting married, and you show your immaturity very plainly in being jealous. Jealousy is a very childish quality, and unless you begin to grow up emotionally very soon, you're not going to make a success of any marriage at any age.

One out of every five quarrels between husbands and wives is said to be caused by jealousy on one side or the other, and nearly half of all divorces. Anyone who knows anything at all about marriage will tell you that a jealous person is an extremely poor risk as a marital partner.

It's only human for this man to keep on flirting with your girl friends when you make it so plain that it irritates you. If you took it in your stride, and laughed it off, he'd probably stop doing it because it wouldn't give him any more satisfaction. Teasing isn't any fun if a person doesn't mind it.

If a girl is afraid to have the man in whom she is interested pay any attention at all to any other girl, it simply shows she doesn't trust his feeling for her. If she were sure she came first with him, she'd know nobody else could win him away from her, and a little harmless flirting wouldn't worry her.

Let the Young Folks Alone!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you settle a dispute in our family circle?

Is it proper for a young girl over 21 to save so much money from her boy friend's salary each week for an engagement ring? We call her a collector. W. G.

Dear W. G.:

It seems to me that if such an arrangement is convenient and satisfactory to the couple in question it is entirely their own affair and their families should keep out of it. What business is it of anybody but themselves?

What if it is a little unconventional? There's no harm in that.

I certainly hope this girl and her young man aren't so unfortunate as to have the kind of families who feel called upon to offer unasked-for advice all the time. Why don't you be the one to call a halt in such doings, if this is the case, and suggest that the young people be left to run their own affairs in their own way?

Advice To The Lovelorn

Jealous Person Is A Poor Risk, Girl Of 18 Is Advised

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl 18 years old and in love with a man 22. He tells me he loves me, and even talks of marriage, but he makes me very jealous by fooling around with my girl friends when he comes to see me. He knows I get jealous, yet he keeps on doing it.

Please tell me how to overcome my jealousy. "HEARTACHE"

Dear "Heartache:"

In my opinion, few 18-year-old girls are mature enough to be thinking about getting married, and you show your immaturity very plainly in being jealous. Jealousy is a very childish quality, and unless you begin to grow up emotionally very soon, you're not going to make a success of any marriage at any age.

One out of every five quarrels between husbands and wives is said to be caused by jealousy on one side or the other, and nearly half of all divorces. Anyone who knows anything at all about marriage will tell you that a jealous person is an extremely poor risk as a marital partner.

It's only human for this man to keep on flirting with your girl friends when you make it so plain that it irritates you. If you took it in your stride, and laughed it off, he'd probably stop doing it because it wouldn't give him any more satisfaction. Teasing isn't any fun if a person doesn't mind it.

If a girl is afraid to have the man in whom she is interested pay any attention at all to any other girl, it simply shows she doesn't trust his feeling for her. If she were sure she came first with him, she'd know nobody else could win him away from her, and a little harmless flirting wouldn't worry her.

Let the Young Folks Alone!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you settle a dispute in our family circle?

Is it proper for a young girl over 21 to save so much money from her boy friend's salary each week for an engagement ring? We call her a collector. W. G.

Dear W. G.:

It seems to me that if such an arrangement is convenient and satisfactory to the couple in question it is entirely their own affair and their families should keep out of it. What business is it of anybody but themselves?

What if it is a little unconventional? There's no harm in that.

I certainly hope this girl and her young man aren't so unfortunate as to have the kind of families who feel called upon to offer unasked-for advice all the time. Why don't you be the one to call a halt in such doings, if this is the case, and suggest that the young people be left to run their own affairs in their own way?

Postal Receipts Show Slight Drop

Postal receipts at the Cumberland Postoffice for the fiscal year which ended June 30 totaled $297,074.11, a decrease of $354.19 as compared to receipts in thep revious fiscal year of $297,428.30. Postoffice officials reported yesterday.

In the first six months of the 1946-47 fiscal year, however, postal receipts were $6,858 ahead of receipts for the same period in the preceding year.

Largest decrease in receipts for any one item was in sales of United States Savings bonds, with a drop of sales of $25,293 in the 1946-47 fiscal year as compared to the 1945-46 period. The former total was $81,206 as compared to $106,500 in 1945-46. Officials pointed out that the recent fiscal period was the first full fiscal year since the close of the war, and that the end of hostilities was probably one of the factors causing the drop in sales.

Although postal savings deposits in 1945-46—exceeded those of the previous fiscal year by $60,690, the total on deposit as of June 30 of this year was $413,130, a decrease of $2,719 under the total on deposit as of June 30, 1946.

Another sizable decrease was noted in sales of United States savings stamps, which dropped $20,325 from the total of $33,197 in 1945-46 to $12,872 in the fiscal year just ended.

4. Hitherto impossible remote control detection and recording of life, speech, hunting feats and other little known phases of native life.

5. Close quarter observation, sound recording, still and motion picture photography in black and white and full colors of teeming bird and animal life on lakes and rivers.

Sisk was called Monday by Gatti from Montreal and told that he had been selected as one of the four photographers to go on the expedition, having met all of the necessary qualifications. A contract will be signed within a short time to cover the eight to 12 months the expedition is expected to require.

An advance party headed by Gatti will reach British East Africa early in August and make its way to Peak Margherita, which at 16,980 feet is the highest of the Mountains of the Moon, and establish the base camp.

Head For Mombasa

Sisk, with others of the expedition, which he estimates will number about 30 or 35 persons altogether, will leave New York by ship between September 15 and October 1 for Mombasa, just south of the Equator on the eastern coast of Africa.

According to latest plans, all personnel will meet in Mombasa, Kenya Colony, and from there, in October, will proceed by road via Voi into the Tanganyika Territory. From Moshi, a party will climb the Kilimanjar to make special experiments and broadcasts from the 19,700-foot peak, the highest mountain on the continent.

Work in Tanganyika will include the big game Ngorongoro Crater and the Serengeti Plains, as well as many of the territory's less known regions and tribes.

After three full months in Tanganyika, the expedition plans to enter Rwanda, the country of the giant Watussi, at Muhinga, to cross this territory from south to north, then to proceed through the western province of the Uganda Protectorate toward the Mountain of the Moon where there will be at least a month of work.

Two more months will be taken up by research and experiments conducted throughout the Northern province of Uganda, and from the "Northern Frontier" region of the Kenya Colony down the Nairobi, where the expedition will conclude its activities sometime around the middle of 1948.

Sisk, after becoming interested in photography, joined the Cumberland Camera Club and served one year as its president. He was an active member up until the past year when the press of business prevented him from taking part. In the meantime he had won a number of prizes in Camera Club competition and had some of his prints hung in the annual Cumberland Valley Photographic Society Salon at the Washington County Museum.

Photography Supervisor

Leaving the employment of the Celanese Corporation of America, Sisk went to work in 1945 as a photographer for George Washington University which operated the Allegany Ballistics Plant for the Army. Last year he started to work for the Hercules Powder Company at the ballistics laboratory as supervisor of photography.

In this position, Sisk has had the opportunity to use high-speed, ribbon-frame and other cameras that many professional photographers never get a chance to operate, and on the Mountains of the Moon expedition, which will be equipped with a trailer darkroom, a diving bell, a heliocopter and radio, he will have all the latest equipment at his disposal.

Sisk's wife, Mrs. Edna (Jimmie) Sisk, and their two-year-old son, James Craig Sisk, expect to remain in Cumberland while he is on the expedition.

DEATHS

MRS. ELIZABETH MATTINGLY

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Mattingly 77, widow of Bernard A. Mattingly, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. West, 507 Baltimore Avenue, after a lingering illness.

She was a native of this city, a daughter of the late George and Marget Kolb Ruhl.

Mrs. Mattingly was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church and of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary of that parish.

Her husband died about three years ago and a son, Frank Mattingly, well known Frostburg undertaker, died two years ago.

Besides Mrs. West, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. John Halloran, Pittsburgh, Pa., and four sons, George Mattingly, Struthers, Ohio, and Liguori, Raymond and Joseph Mattingly, all of this city.

One sister, Mrs. Anna Hoffman, and a half sister, Mrs. Michael Kane, both of this city; two brothers, Charles Ruhl, Youngstown, Ohio, and George Ruhl, this city; one half brother, John Shober, this city, and nine grandchildren, also survive.

The body is at the West home. A funeral mass will be celebrated Saturday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

JOSEPH F. SUMMERS

Joseph F. Summers, 47, 520 Beall Street, Western Railway telegrapher and World War I veteran, died yesterday morning in Veterans Hospital, Washington, D. C.

A son of J. Oscar and Mary Ellen Noonan Summers, 520 Beall Street, he was born in Elk Garden, W. Va., but had lived in Cumberland for the past 35 years.

Mr. Summers, who served with the 29th Division in World War I, was a member of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion.

He was admitted to Newton D. Baker Veterans Hospital, Martinsburg, W. Va., June 10 and was later transferred to the Washington hospital.

CLAUDE CAMPBELL RITES

A funeral service for Claude E. "Buzz" Campbell, 48, 112 South Liberty Street, who died suddenly yesterday morning, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Kight Funeral Home.

Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, will officiate and burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery.

Mr. Campbell, who served as a Seabee during World War II, dropped dead at 12:25 p. m. the Celanese plant where he was employed as a machinist. Death resulted from a heart attack.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said Campbell reported to the plant's first aid station and complained of being "short of breath" shortly before he died.

Campbell, who served aboard the U.S.S. President Coolidge when it was sunk off Guadalcanal in the Pacific early in the war, had left the aid station and was talking to fellow-workers outside when he collapsed, Dr. Deming said.

He was a member of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion; Henry Hart Post No. 13, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B.P.O. Elks, and Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

A native of Cumberland, he was a son of the late Harry W. and Catherine Gulrey Campbell.

MR. GERSON RITES

A funeral service for Isaac Gerson, about 70, a former resident of this city, who died yesterday morning in a Baltimore Hospital, will be conducted this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Stein Funeral Home. Burial will be in East Gate Cemetery.

Mr. Gerson operated a shoe repair shop here some time ago and lived at 707 Columbia Avenue before moving to Baltimore to live with a daughter.

Surviving are five sons, including Abe and Jacob Gerson, and four daughters.

MRS. CONNER RITES

A funeral service was held yesterday morning in Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Church for Mrs. Elizabeth Conner, 71, mother of Andrew W. Conner, who recently moved to Everett, Pa., from this city. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Conner died Sunday night in Everett after an illness of six months.

Another son and five daughters also survive.

WADE HERRIOTT

Wade Herriott, 65, Romney, W. Va., died yesterday morning in Memorial Hospital where he was admitted Monday.

The body was taken to Romney for services and interment.

MR. PETERMAN RITES

A funeral service for Tolbert Raymond Peterman, 63, 421 Independence Street, veteran printer employed by the Times and Alleganian Company, who committed suicide Monday afternoon at his residence, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Stein Funeral Home.

Rev. Dr. H. Hall Sharp, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, will officiate and interment will be in St. Luke's Cemetery. Pallbearers will be Joseph E. Mackert, W. V. Martin, George Cline, W. A. Miller, Angelo Samson and James Orr, all members of Cumberland Local No. 244, International Typographical Union.

WILLIAM SMITH RITES

A funeral service for William Smith, 64, who died yesterday morning in Memorial Hospital where he was admitted Monday, will be conducted tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Hafer Funeral Home.

Rev. Frederick D. Oberkircher, pastor of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church, will officiate and burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery.

Mr. Smith, who had been a patient at Sylvan Retreat, Valley Road, for a number of years, was a native of this city, a son of the late John C. and Wilhelmina Smith.

A sister, Mrs. Lena Rice, Baltimore, is the only survivor.

MRS. CHARLOTTE FLANAGAN

Mrs. Charlotte Kathern Flanagan, 74, died yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at her home, 117 South Centre Street, after an illness of seven months.

Mrs. Flanagan, known as "Katie" to her friends, was a native of Sideling Hill, a daughter of the late Lloyd and Harriet Barnes. She had been a resident of this city for a number of years.

She was the widow of Sterling P. Flanagan, who died in 1930.

Surviving are one son, Charles E. Flanagan, this city; two daughters and two sons by a former marriage, Mrs. Ted Shumaker, Parsons, W. Va., Mrs. Albert Phillips, this city; Walter R. Price, at home, and Sterling R. Price, San Francisco, Calif. Seventeen grandchildren and six great grandchildren also survive.

The body is at the Kight Funeral Home.

Miner Given Six Months By Juvenile Magistrate

Willard Miller, Franklin, near Westernport, was sentenced to serve six months in the Maryland House of Correction by Magistrate Thomas E. Stakem in Juvenile Court yesterday, on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his two minor children. County officials said the man is a coal miner and has not been providing properly for his family.

He was sent to the County Jail, pending his removal to the state institution, and the plight of his family was referred to the Welfare Board.

Tax Exemption

money into the community to pay their labor. These workers spend their money for things they need. They buy food, clothing, automobiles, entertainment, homes and all the other things they want. This money flows through the entire community and every taxpayer benefits. When one of these plants is idle, the effects are soon felt by everyone."

The former attorney - general quoted a long list of properties that are exempt by legislative action. He referred to railroads, cemeteries, canals, religious, cultural and educational institutions, manufacturing concerns, commercial enterprises, tools, crops, food, and numerous other items covered in various types of tax exemptions throughout the country.

Exemptions Common Practice

"Tax exemptions are no novelty," Walsh declared. "In a competitive business and economic world, they are a common practice for many reasons."

He expressed the opinion that these suits have hurt Cumberland very badly, in its efforts to attract new industry to the city and county. He declared the payment of taxes on tools and equipment by the Kelly Springfield Tire Company and the other two firms could not mean more than a few cents on the tax dollar to the individual taxpayer, but the loss of one of these plants, and by the same token the establishment of a new comparable plant or plants here would effect everyone proportionately.

Walsh declared that Baltimore City, where more than half the population of the state lives, has long followed the practice of exempting taxes on all industrial plants' tools and equipment. As a result the city has continued to grow and expand, with new plants still moving there, while on the other hand, he said, Cumberland is stagnated, "because there are people here, some of whom fail to identify themselves publicly, who discourage growth and development, by actions of this character."

Could Pass Resolution

He expressed the opinion the County Commissioners should set the tax picture straight, by passing the resolution as authorized in the state law, and exempt taxes on tools and equipment of all manufacturers in the county.

Walsh reminded the Court that the Kelly-Springfield Company has paid taxes on its land and buildings and mentioned these figures: in 1941 the company paid $47,500; in 1942, $44,800; in 1943, $51,900; and in 1944, $50,000. Similar amount were paid in more recent years on land and buildings he said.

Whitworth and Heskett cited various statutes, decisions and cases involving the legality of tax exemptions and argued that these exemptions are constitutional and fair in every respect. The Court was reminded of the history of both Celanese and the Pulp and Paper Mill, and the attorneys said both plants have continued to grow and expand.

Heskett particularly spoke of the economic welfare of the community and said, "we all know what would happen in Cumberland and the county if one of these plants stopped production."

Court Asks Questions

As each attorney presented his views, they were interrupted by the Court from time to time, so the judge could make notes of references used or ask questions. Chief Judge William A. Huster, Associate Judge George Henderson and Associate Judge Joseph D. Mish, of Hagerstown. The hearing started at 10 a. m., and following a short lunch recess, continued until about 5 p. m. The Court indicated several weeks will be required to study briefs, arguments etc., before a decision can be written.

Reed, the plaintiff, was in the Court room and members of the County Board and several local attorneys and county assessors were also interested spectators.

Princess Elizabeth

The former prince, who gave up his royal titles last March to become a British citizen, spent the afternoon with his betrothed, and dined with the royal family night. He and the princess will make their first semi-public appearance as an engaged couple today at a Buckingham Palace garden party.

Mountbatten is certain to be named a duke. He probably will become the Duke of Clarence. This title has been vacant for half a century. He is a great, great grandson of Queen Victoria and a distant cousin of Princess Elizabeth, who is a great, great granddaughter of Victoria.

Is Of American Descent

Elizabeth is the first British princese of American descent. One of her mother's ancestors was Robert Porteous, an early settler in Virginia. Porteous' wife was a cousin of George Washington's father.

Philip spent most of his youth in Britain where he was educated and where he joined the Royal Navy in keeping with the Mountbatten tradition. Friends said he expected to remain in the Navy after his marriage.

The son of Prince Andrew of Greece and also a member of the Danish Royal Family, Philip was reared virtually as a son of Lord Mountbatten.

Where the royal couple will reside after their marriage was problematical. They may stay for some time with their royal in-laws, it was conjectured, because no royal residence, now is deemed available for the couple.

Philip is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church. However, there has been speculation about the likelihood of his admission to the Church of England which he attended while at school and later at Dartmouth, the British Navy's equivalent to Annapolis.

W. Md. Railway Heads Inspect Lines Here

Officials of the Western Maryland Railway on Tuesday inspected the line between Cumberland and Connellsville, Pa., and yesterday looked over C. and P. lines.

Those in the party included C. W. Brown, president; G. R. Howarth, vice president and general manager; Joseph M. Miller, Elkins Division superintendent; W. B. Lee, division engineer; C. J. Wolfe, motive power superintendent; George H. Lyming, master mechanic, and W. H. Rayburn, trainmaster.

Saw Mill Specialist Working This Area

James E. Dykes, Annapolis, saw mill specialist of the Department of State Forests and Parks, is visiting in Allegany County this week, giving technical advice and assistance to saw mill operaters, according to William A. Parr, district forester.

Dykes will be in Garrett County next week, and saw mill operators and lumbermen who have problems which Dykes can help them with, should contact the district forester's office in the Court House for an appointment.

Postal Receipts Show Slight Drop

Postal receipts at the Cumberland Postoffice for the fiscal year which ended June 30 totaled $297,074.11, a decrease of $354.19 as compared to receipts in thep revious fiscal year of $297,428.30. Postoffice officials reported yesterday.

In the first six months of the 1946-47 fiscal year, however, postal receipts were $6,858 ahead of receipts for the same period in the preceding year.

Largest decrease in receipts for any one item was in sales of United States Savings bonds, with a drop of sales of $25,293 in the 1946-47 fiscal year as compared to the 1945-46 period. The former total was $81,206 as compared to $106,500 in 1945-46. Officials pointed out that the recent fiscal period was the first full fiscal year since the close of the war, and that the end of hostilities was probably one of the factors causing the drop in sales.

Although postal savings deposits in 1945-46—exceeded those of the previous fiscal year by $60,690, the total on deposit as of June 30 of this year was $413,130, a decrease of $2,719 under the total on deposit as of June 30, 1946.

Another sizable decrease was noted in sales of United States savings stamps, which dropped $20,325 from the total of $33,197 in 1945-46 to $12,872 in the fiscal year just ended.

known life among great herds of elephants, buffaloes, antelopes and other animals, and of occasional migrations of big game.

Will Photograph Birds

3. Remote control, electronically directed photography and sound recording of little known aspects of intimate life among practically unapproachable animals and birds.

4. Hitherto impossible remote control detection and recording of life, speech, hunting feats and other little known phases of native life.

5. Close quarter observation, sound recording, still and motion picture photography in black and white and full colors of teeming bird and animal life on lakes and rivers.

6. Exploration of yet unrevealed underwater life of tropical lakes and rivers; first observation of submerged actions of crocodiles and hippos; "freezing" of fastest subaqueous movements, including known and unknown fish life, by stroboscopic speedlight photography.

Sisk was called Monday by Gatti from Montreal and told that he had been selected as one of the four photographers to go on the expedition, having met all of the necessary qualifications. A contract will be signed within a short time to cover the eight to 12 months the expedition is expected to require.

An advance party headed by Gatti will reach British East Africa early in August and make its way to Peak Margherita, which at 16,980 feet is the highest of the Mountains of the Moon, and establish the base camp.

Head For Mombasa

Sisk, with others of the expedition, which he estimates will number about 30 or 35 persons altogether, will leave New York by ship between September 15 and October 1 for Mombasa, just south of the Equator on the eastern coast of Africa.

According to latest plans, all personnel will meet in Mombasa, Kenya Colony, and from there, in October, will proceed by road via Voi into the Tanganyika Territory. From Moshi, a party will climb the Kilimanjar to make special experiments and broadcasts from the 19,700-foot peak, the highest mountain on the continent.

Work in Tanganyika will include the big game Ngorongoro Crater and the Serengeti Plains, as well as many of the territory's less known regions and tribes.

After three full months in Tanganyika, the expedition plans to enter Rwanda, the country of the giant Watussi, at Muhinga, to cross this territory from south to north, then to proceed through the western province of the Uganda Protectorate toward the Mountain of the Moon where there will be at least a month of work.

Two more months will be taken up by research and experiments conducted throughout the Northern province of Uganda, and from the "Northern Frontier" region of the Kenya Colony down the Nairobi, where the expedition will conclude its activities sometime around the middle of 1948.

Sisk, after becoming interested in photography, joined the Cumberland Camera Club and served one year as its president. He was an active member up until the past year when the press of business prevented him from taking part. In the meantime he had won a number of prizes in Camera Club competition and had some of his prints hung in the annual Cumberland Valley Photographic Society Salon at the Washington County Museum.

Photography Supervisor

Leaving the employment of the Celanese Corporation of America, Sisk went to work in 1945 as a photographer for George Washington University which operated the Allegany Ballistics Plant for the Army. Last year he started to work for the Hercules Powder Company at the ballistics laboratory as supervisor of photography.

In this position, Sisk has had the opportunity to use high-speed, ribbon-frame and other cameras that many professional photographers never get a chance to operate, and on the Mountains of the Moon expedition, which will be equipped with a trailer darkroom, a diving bell, a heliocopter and radio, he will have all the latest equipment at his disposal.

Sisk's wife, Mrs. Edna (Jimmie) Sisk, and their two-year-old son, James Craig Sisk, expect to remain in Cumberland while he is on the expedition.

DEATHS

MRS. ELIZABETH MATTINGLY

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Mattingly 77, widow of Bernard A. Mattingly, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. West, 507 Baltimore Avenue, after a lingering illness.

She was a native of this city, a daughter of the late George and Marget Kolb Ruhl.

Mrs. Mattingly was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church and of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary of that parish.

Her husband died about three years ago and a son, Frank Mattingly, well known Frostburg undertaker, died two years ago.

Besides Mrs. West, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. John Halloran, Pittsburgh, Pa., and four sons, George Mattingly, Struthers, Ohio, and Liguori, Raymond and Joseph Mattingly, all of this city.

One sister, Mrs. Anna Hoffman, and a half sister, Mrs. Michael Kane, both of this city; two brothers, Charles Ruhl, Youngstown, Ohio, and George Ruhl, this city; one half brother, John Shober, this city, and nine grandchildren, also survive.

The body is at the West home. A funeral mass will be celebrated Saturday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

JOSEPH F. SUMMERS

Joseph F. Summers, 47, 520 Beall Street, Western Railway telegrapher and World War I veteran, died yesterday morning in Veterans Hospital, Washington, D. C.

A son of J. Oscar and Mary Ellen Noonan Summers, 520 Beall Street, he was born in Elk Garden, W. Va., but had lived in Cumberland for the past 35 years.

Mr. Summers, who served with the 29th Division in World War I, was a member of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion.

He was admitted to Newton D. Baker Veterans Hospital, Martinsburg, W. Va., June 10 and was later transferred to the Washington hospital.

CLAUDE CAMPBELL RITES

A funeral service for Claude E. "Buzz" Campbell, 48, 112 South Liberty Street, who died suddenly yesterday morning, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Kight Funeral Home.

Dr. Hixon T. Bowersox, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, will officiate and burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery.

Mr. Campbell, who served as a Seabee during World War II, dropped dead at 12:25 p. m. the Celanese plant where he was employed as a machinist. Death resulted from a heart attack.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said Campbell reported to the plant's first aid station and complained of being "short of breath" shortly before he died.

Campbell, who served aboard the U.S.S. President Coolidge when it was sunk off Guadalcanal in the Pacific early in the war, had left the aid station and was talking to fellow-workers outside when he collapsed, Dr. Deming said.

He was a member of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion; Henry Hart Post No. 13, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B.P.O. Elks, and Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

A native of Cumberland, he was a son of the late Harry W. and Catherine Gulrey Campbell.

MR. GERSON RITES

A funeral service for Isaac Gerson, about 70, a former resident of this city, who died yesterday morning in a Baltimore Hospital, will be conducted this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Stein Funeral Home. Burial will be in East Gate Cemetery.

Mr. Gerson operated a shoe repair shop here some time ago and lived at 707 Columbia Avenue before moving to Baltimore to live with a daughter.

Surviving are five sons, including Abe and Jacob Gerson, and four daughters.

MRS. CONNER RITES

A funeral service was held yesterday morning in Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Church for Mrs. Elizabeth Conner, 71, mother of Andrew W. Conner, who recently moved to Everett, Pa., from this city. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Conner died Sunday night in Everett after an illness of six months.

Another son and five daughters also survive.

WADE HERRIOTT

Wade Herriott, 65, Romney, W. Va., died yesterday morning in Memorial Hospital where he was admitted Monday.

The body was taken to Romney for services and interment.

MR. PETERMAN RITES

A funeral service for Tolbert Raymond Peterman, 63, 421 Independence Street, veteran printer employed by the Times and Alleganian Company, who committed suicide Monday afternoon at his residence, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Stein Funeral Home.

Rev. Dr. H. Hall Sharp, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, will officiate and interment will be in St. Luke's Cemetery. Pallbearers will be Joseph E. Mackert, W. V. Martin, George Cline, W. A. Miller, Angelo Samson and James Orr, all members of Cumberland Local No. 244, International Typographical Union.

WILLIAM SMITH RITES

A funeral service for William Smith, 64, who died yesterday morning in Memorial Hospital where he was admitted Monday, will be conducted tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Hafer Funeral Home.

Rev. Frederick D. Oberkircher, pastor of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church, will officiate and burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery.

Mr. Smith, who had been a patient at Sylvan Retreat, Valley Road, for a number of years, was a native of this city, a son of the late John C. and Wilhelmina Smith.

A sister, Mrs. Lena Rice, Baltimore, is the only survivor.

MRS. CHARLOTTE FLANAGAN

Mrs. Charlotte Kathern Flanagan, 74, died yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at her home, 117 South Centre Street, after an illness of seven months.

Mrs. Flanagan, known as "Katie" to her friends, was a native of Sideling Hill, a daughter of the late Lloyd and Harriet Barnes. She had been a resident of this city for a number of years.

She was the widow of Sterling P. Flanagan, who died in 1930.

Surviving are one son, Charles E. Flanagan, this city; two daughters and two sons by a former marriage, Mrs. Ted Shumaker, Parsons, W. Va., Mrs. Albert Phillips, this city; Walter R. Price, at home, and Sterling R. Price, San Francisco, Calif. Seventeen grandchildren and six great grandchildren also survive.

The body is at the Kight Funeral Home.

Miner Given Six Months By Juvenile Magistrate

Willard Miller, Franklin, near Westernport, was sentenced to serve six months in the Maryland House of Correction by Magistrate Thomas E. Stakem in Juvenile Court yesterday, on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his two minor children. County officials said the man is a coal miner and has not been providing properly for his family.

He was sent to the County Jail, pending his removal to the state institution, and the plight of his family was referred to the Welfare Board.

Tax Exemption

money into the community to pay their labor. These workers spend their money for things they need. They buy food, clothing, automobiles, entertainment, homes and all the other things they want. This money flows through the entire community and every taxpayer benefits. When one of these plants is idle, the effects are soon felt by everyone."

The former attorney - general quoted a long list of properties that are exempt by legislative action. He referred to railroads, cemeteries, canals, religious, cultural and educational institutions, manufacturing concerns, commercial enterprises, tools, crops, food, and numerous other items covered in various types of tax exemptions throughout the country.

Exemptions Common Practice

"Tax exemptions are no novelty," Walsh declared. "In a competitive business and economic world, they are a common practice for many reasons."

He expressed the opinion that these suits have hurt Cumberland very badly, in its efforts to attract new industry to the city and county. He declared the payment of taxes on tools and equipment by the Kelly Springfield Tire Company and the other two firms could not mean more than a few cents on the tax dollar to the individual taxpayer, but the loss of one of these plants, and by the same token the establishment of a new comparable plant or plants here would effect everyone proportionately.

Walsh declared that Baltimore City, where more than half the population of the state lives, has long followed the practice of exempting taxes on all industrial plants' tools and equipment. As a result the city has continued to grow and expand, with new plants still moving there, while on the other hand, he said, Cumberland is stagnated, "because there are people here, some of whom fail to identify themselves publicly, who discourage growth and development, by actions of this character."

Could Pass Resolution

He expressed the opinion the County Commissioners should set the tax picture straight, by passing the resolution as authorized in the state law, and exempt taxes on tools and equipment of all manufacturers in the county.

Walsh reminded the Court that the Kelly-Springfield Company has paid taxes on its land and buildings and mentioned these figures: in 1941 the company paid $47,500; in 1942, $44,800; in 1943, $51,900; and in 1944, $50,000. Similar amount were paid in more recent years on land and buildings he said.

Whitworth and Heskett cited various statutes, decisions and cases involving the legality of tax exemptions and argued that these exemptions are constitutional and fair in every respect. The Court was reminded of the history of both Celanese and the Pulp and Paper Mill, and the attorneys said both plants have continued to grow and expand.

Heskett particularly spoke of the economic welfare of the community and said, "we all know what would happen in Cumberland and the county if one of these plants stopped production."

Court Asks Questions

As each attorney presented his views, they were interrupted by the Court from time to time, so the judge could make notes of references used or ask questions. Chief Judge William A. Huster, Associate Judge George Henderson and Associate Judge Joseph D. Mish, of Hagerstown. The hearing started at 10 a. m., and following a short lunch recess, continued until about 5 p. m. The Court indicated several weeks will be required to study briefs, arguments etc., before a decision can be written.

Reed, the plaintiff, was in the Court room and members of the County Board and several local attorneys and county assessors were also interested spectators.

Princess Elizabeth

The former prince, who gave up his royal titles last March to become a British citizen, spent the afternoon with his betrothed, and dined with the royal family last night. He and the princess will make their first semi-public appearance as an engaged couple today at a Buckingham Palace garden party.

Mountbatten is certain to be named a duke. He probably will become the Duke of Clarence. This title has been vacant for half a century. He is a great, great grandson of Queen Victoria and a distant cousin of Princess Elizabeth, who is a great, great granddaughter of Victoria.

Is Of American Descent

Elizabeth is the first British princese of American descent. One of her mother's ancestors was Robert Porteous, an early settler in Virginia. Porteous' wife was a cousin of George Washington's father.

Philip spent most of his youth in Britain where he was educated and where he joined the Royal Navy in keeping with the Mountbatten tradition. Friends said he expected to remain in the Navy after his marriage.

The son of Prince Andrew of Greece and also a member of the Danish Royal Family, Philip was reared virtually as a son of Lord Mountbatten.

Where the royal couple will reside after their marriage was problematical. They may stay for some time with their royal in-laws, it was conjectured, because no royal residence, now is deemed available for the couple.

Philip is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church. However, there has been speculation about the likelihood of his admission to the Church of England which he attended while at school and later at Dartmouth, the British Navy's equivalent to Annapolis.

W. Md. Railway Heads Inspect Lines Here

Officials of the Western Maryland Railway on Tuesday inspected the line between Cumberland and Connellsville, Pa., and yesterday looked over C. and P. lines.

Those in the party included C. W. Brown, president; G. R. Howarth, vice president and general manager; Joseph M. Miller, Elkins Division superintendent; W. B. Lee, division engineer; C. J. Wolfe, motive power superintendent; George H. Lyming, master mechanic, and W. H. Rayburn, trainmaster.

Saw Mill Specialist Working This Area

James E. Dykes, Annapolis, saw mill specialist of the Department of State Forests and Parks, is visiting in Allegany County this week, giving technical advice and assistance to saw mill operaters, according to William A. Parr, district forester.

Dykes will be in Garrett County next week, and saw mill operators and lumbermen who have problems which Dykes can help them with, should contact the district forester's office in the Court House for an appointment.

Red Cross Gives Advice To Vacation Motorists

Cumberland motorists preparing for vacation trips are advised to carry first-aid equipment in their cars, according to H. Lee Silcox, chairman of first aid, life saving and accident prevention for Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross.

The kit, which can be assembled easily, should contain a few rolls of sterile bandage, an antiseptic, a roll of adhesive tape, scissors, bandaids, triangular dressings and a few sterile dressings. Silcox added that a flashlight will be useful in case an accident occurs during the night.

The Red Cross also urges motorists to observe safety rules while driving. For those who enjoy swimming, precautionary measures which should be observed follow:

Stay in shallow water unless you know how to swim; never swim alone; do not go into water immediately after eating; never swim far from shore unless accompanied by a person in a boat; explore unknown waters before diving; when possible, swim in patrolled areas.

Two Men Are Injured When Box Car Burns

Two Baltimore and Ohio Railroad employes were admitted to Memorial Hospital yesterday morning for treatment of severe burns suffered when a box car loaded with fertilizer caught fire on the eastbound repair shops here.

They were Vermont Zollner, 24, 401 Laing Avenue, who was burned about the face, arms and hands, and Ray Lewis, 24, Thomas Street, who sustained burns of the face and eye. Both were reported in satisfactory condition.

South End Fire Company went to the fire at 11:26 a. m. to offer aid and reported the car burned rapidly due to the inflammable contents.

Red Cross Gives Advice To Vacation Motorists

Cumberland motorists preparing for vacation trips are advised to carry first-aid equipment in their cars, according to H. Lee Silcox, chairman of first aid, life saving and accident prevention for Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross.

The kit, which can be assembled easily, should contain a few rolls of sterile bandage, an antiseptic, a roll of adhesive tape, scissors, bandaids, triangular dressings and a few sterile dressings. Silcox added that a flashlight will be useful in case an accident occurs during the night.

The Red Cross also urges motorists to observe safety rules while driving. For those who enjoy swimming, precautionary measures which should be observed follow:

Stay in shallow water unless you know how to swim; never swim alone; do not go into water immediately after eating; never swim far from shore unless accompanied by a person in a boat; explore unknown waters before diving; when possible, swim in patrolled areas.

Two Men Are Injured When Box Car Burns

Two Baltimore and Ohio Railroad employes were admitted to Memorial Hospital yesterday morning for treatment of severe burns suffered when a box car loaded with fertilizer caught fire on the eastbound repair shops here.

They were Vermont Zollner, 24, 401 Laing Avenue, who was burned about the face, arms and hands, and Ray Lewis, 24, Thomas Street, who sustained burns of the face and eye. Both were reported in satisfactory condition.

South End Fire Company went to the fire at 11:26 a. m. to offer aid and reported the car burned rapidly due to the inflammable contents.

Legion Installation To Be Held July 22

Newly elected officers of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, will be installed at the next regular post meeting, July 22, it was announced yesterday by Russell C. Paupe, post adjutant.

Commander Thomas R. "Pat" Farrell, who succeeds Phil Fleming, expects to announce his committee appointments for the year shortly after the installation.

Answer Fire Calls

South End Fire Company answered a false alarm at the home of F. J. Wallace, 43 New Hampshire Avenue, early yesterday afternoon. Firemen said the cellar of the home filled with smoke when a fire was lighted in the furnace.

East Side Fire Company was called to 1024 Shade's Lane yesterday at 5:55 p. m. when a car owned by William Day and parked outside his home caught fire due to a short circuit. The blaze was out on arrival, firemen said.

MILK THE LIFETIME FOOD

I went to a snooty party the other night. Real snooty. Bluebloods from way back.

Before the gentleman with the checkered vest inquires how I happened to get invited, I'd like to explain it was a charity affair and I had been asked to bring along a couple of entertainers.

Billy Rose

As I was causing devastation among the canapes, somebody came up from behind and gave me the unimportant kiss on the cheek. It was a Movie Star, an actress whose face you probably know better than your own.

"What are you doing at this clambake?" I asked her, after the hellos.

"I've known the hostess since I was a kid," she said, and flashed the smile that's good for three million domestic at the box office.

I thought that was a little bit odd, but didn't press it. When I first met the Movie Actress about twenty years back, she was doing a hot Charleston specialty in a littlee night club down the street from one of my early tourist traps.

This gal's life is one of the firecracker stories of show business. She got a job in Hollywood playing bit parts, clawed her way to stardom, went into eclipse when talkies came, learned how to act with words, and then stormed back to the top over mountains of younger and prettier flesh.

I watched the Actress as she stood there, holding court at this elegant gathering. She made the society belles look pretty dusty—and she knew it.

She was dressed in a little black number dreamed up by Adrian that must have set her back six bills. Around her neck was a diamond necklace that would have been a bargain at a quarter of a million.

"Not bad for a gal who did only a so-so Charleston," I said to myself.

And then I noticed she was also wearing a little fraternity pin over her heart—seed pearls and black glass—worth all of twenty bucks in a rising market.

I sidled over and said. "Where'd you get the pin? Don't tell me you're going in for college boys this season."

The Movie Actress laughed up and down the scale. "A story goes with this pin," she said. "But I'll only tell it if you promise not to use my name."

"First the story," I said. "We'll talk about the promise later."

"Maybe it won't sound like much," the Actress began. "It happened out on Long Island when I was 16. In Westbury, My mother brought me up out there in one of those houses with five rooms and two mortgages. The rich kids in Westbury called it 'The Eyesore.' They had equally charming names for me. 'Miss Gym Bloomers' was one of them.

"Most of the girls in our neighborhood went to private schools. These little witches acted as if Public High were some kind of reform school. How I hated them! Of course, it was because I wanted to be like them.

"I especially hated a girl named Bettina. She went to Miss Finch's School for Young Ladies. I used to laugh at her languid way of talking—that is, when I wasn't trying to imitate it. Many's the night I dreamed about killing Bettina. And I might have done it, too, if I thought I could have gotten away with it.

"One day Bettina told me how the president of the freshman class at Williams was giving her the big rush. She said she was going to the Spring Hop with him, and that he had promised her his fraternity pin. At 16, that fraternity pin shaped up to me like the crown jewels of Russia.

"When Bettina came home from school that June, I asked to see the pin. She doubletalked a little, and then confessed the freshman had given it to his mother.

"That was the big moment of my life, Billy. I unbuttoned my jacket and showed her my fraternity pin. The one I'm wearing tonight. Bettina just about split when I told her it had been given to me by the captain of the Yale football team."

"You must have been pretty fond of that Yale boy to keep wearing his pin all these years," I said.

"Yale boy, my eye," grinned the Movie Actress. "I went without lunches for three months to pay for that pin."

"How come you're wearing it tonight, then?" I asked. "It doesn't exactly go with that necklace."

The Movie Actress smiled. "The necklace is to make the girls here tonight a little unhappy. The fraternity pin is for our charming hostess, Mrs. Bettina Havemeyer, formerly of Westbury, Long Island."

"I've decided not to use your name when I write this story," I told the former Charleston dancer. "Nothing good can come from having a girl like you for an enemy."

Yarosz Has Close Call

Let "Bunny" Tell Story

No Harness Racing Here

"Pat" Honored By Legion

By C. V. BURNS

Peter J. "Bunny" Buntag, manager of Tommy Yarosz, the third ranking light-heavyweight in the United States, according to "ring" magazine, took a swing at me in Paul Sheehe's beanery the other morning but he didn't mean any harm.

"Bunny" was rehashing the terrific battle from which his great fighter recently emerged with Joe Basora, the tough Puerto Rican, at the Olympia Arena in Detroit.

And we have clippings from the Detroit Times, the Detroit Free

TOMMY YAROSZ

Press and the Detroit News as proof that it must have been a humdinger.

Buntag explains that Basora closed Yarosz's right eye in the very first round and "Bunny" became sick, fearing that the referee might be prompted to halt the fight and give it to the Puerto Rican on a TKO. "That would have been awful," the manager of the Monaca (Pa.) boxer who has won 35 consecutive fights, emphasized.

In the third round Tommy had a lump almost as big as a walnut raised below his right eye and between rounds a razor blade was used to puncture the swelling to release the bad blood and reduce the size of the knot. To make it more painful, Basora was heeling in the clinches.

"I must admit things looked bad for Tommy for 4½ rounds but still I had confidence in him because he has the heart of a lion and always fights harder when he is stung," Buntag declared.

The tide turned in the fifth round and Yarosz took the play away from Basora by hitting the Puerto Rican with everything but his manager's walking stick. The late rally had 5,442 cash customers on their toes. Tommy won the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth rounds and copped the split decision at the finish.

"Bunny" explains it this way:

"As Basora stepped through the ropes to leave the ring he told the boxing commissioner he thought he had won the fight. Then as he started for the dressing room he went out like a light and tumbled to the floor unconscious. Detroit papers stated he was 'out' for 40 minutes and when he regained consciousness he complained that his head was split open and his ribs were cracked."

At the hospital doctors advised Basora not to fight any more.

"Even though Basora wound up in the hospital it was a close call for Yarosz," Buntag declared. "A defeat would have hurt at this stage of the game with promoters seeking Yarosz for Charles and other top-notchers."

There'll be no harness racing in Maryland this year.

And next year when harness racing licenses are granted in the state they will not be issued to tracks licensed for flat racing.

This ruling has been announced by the Maryland Racing Commission.

Four of the 16 applications for trotting meet licenses were received by the state commission from flat racing interests, namely, the Cumberland Fair Association, Bel Air, Hagerstown and Marlboro.

According to the new edict issued by the commission Cumberland and the other half milers licensed for flat racing must keep "hands off" harness racing.

Harness racing with pari-mutuel betting was legalized by the 1947 legislature.

J. Stuart Janney, Jr., new chairman of the state commission, says:

"We can't have any harness racing this season, so we might as well do it right and not rush through things and make mistakes.

"It will require applicants for licenses to do a good deal of work and study, and it probably will be the end of August or the first part of September before we can have a public hearing."

The election of Thomas Raymond Farrell as commander of Fort Cumberland Post, American Legion, will be good news to his many friends throughout the county.

We've known "Pat," as he is more familiarly known, from way back and one wouldn't want to meet a nicer fellow.

A native of Mt. Savage or "one of the boys from west of the stone bridge," the genial Irishman has served as ticket taker and "identifier" of dead heads or cash customers at local professional and amateur boxing shows for many years.

I believe "Pat" first acted in that capacity back in the 1920's when Calton "Funny" Newnam was matchmaker for American Legion professional boxing shows at the old frame state armory which occupied the site of the present brick structure on South Centre Street.

Many of our old friends have held the position to which "Pat" has been elected. There's Judge William A. Huster, Dr. Arthur P. Dixon, Harry E. Flook, Tom Conlon, Daniel F. McMullen, Fred Puderbaugh, the late W. Earl Brooks, Wesley Abrams, Bob Bowers, the late Harry Spiker, Claude Deal, John R. Kelley, Sr., the late Dr. George O. Sharrett and Charley Smith.

Here's luck, "Pat."

FRIDAY GAMES

North End at Astor (Rolling Mill)
Lacy's at Legion (Community Park)
Reed's at Concord (Campobello)
Maccabees at V. F. W. (East Side)
Amvets at Virginia Ave. (Taylor)

The "whitewashing" experts of the City Softball League were up to their old tricks yesterday when the Concord Clothiers applied a coat of kalsomine to the Maccabees to launch their second half championship drive with a 10-0 victory in a game staged at Community Park.

Carter Banks let the Bees down with four hits while his matches rapped out ten bingles including Bernard Smith's homer with one aboard and a triple; James Smith's triple and single, Charley Yates' three-bagger and double and Russ Davis' double and single.

VFW Surprises Amvets

An improved V. F. W. team surprised in its initial start of the second half by spilling the Amvets, runners-up in the first half race, by the score of 6 to 2 on the Rolling Mill diamond.

Coach Derl Keller's aggregation collected eight hits, four of which were shared by Ted Rowan and E. Lewis. One of the latter's blows was a triple. Stoutamyer obtained two hits for the Amvets. Roy Duncan, shortstop of the Vets pulled the fielding gem when he turned in a bare-handed catch of Sheetz's line drive.

Lacy's Delicatets took the measure of Astor Cab at Taylor Field, 4 to 1. Junior Hardy put this game on ice in the third frame when he belted a four-bagger with two on the hassocks. "Babe" Crabtree was the only player who got two hits. Durbin of Lacy's and Minnicks of Astor connected for two-baggers.

Tosses One-Hitter

Glen Kauffman tossed a one-hitter as the North End Social and Athletic Club subdued the Virginia Avenue Merchants at Stitcher Field by the score of 4 to 1. Welsh of North End got two of his team's seven hits.

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, topped Reed's Electricians in an eight-inning game at Campobello by the score of 5 to 2. Scores:

Major Leaguers Will Play Full Schedule Today

Yanks Invade West; Cubs Battle Dodgers

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK, July 9 (AP) — The all-star game was just a bitter memory for the National Leaguers today as they buckled down for another ding-dong battle to the wire while the American Leaguers faced the possibility of another rout this time by the New York Yankees.

Returning stars joined up with their clubs for the second half of the races which finds the eastern National nines playing host to the westerners with the reverse situation in the junior circuit.

In the National, Brooklyn's Dodgers were riding atop the heap with a game edge over the Boston Braves with the New York Giants another half length astern. In threatening positions were the upcoming World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago's Cubs and Cincinnati's Reds.

The Cards were 4½ games behind the league leaders with Chicago 5½ out and Cincinnati six. Only the Philadelphia Phils (12½) and Pittsburgh Pirates (13) appeared out of the chase.

The Brooks, Braves and Giants have been moving in and out of the first three spots virtually all season and another shift could easily happen tomorrow when the Cubs invade Ebbets Field for a doubleheader with Brooklyn, St. Louis plays at New York and Cincinnati visits at Boston.

Burt Shotton faces the third western invasion in an enviable position with his two top flingers, Ralph Branca (12-6) and Handsome Harry Taylor (7-2) ready to go against Chicago's Hank Borowy (8-3) and Bob Chipman (5-3).

Open Five Game Series

Mel Ott and his New York wrecking crew, still up in the chase despite mediocre mound work, take on the surging Cards who seem to have straightened out their kinks for their usual second half spurt. This five-game series, which includes a night game tomorrow and successive doubleheaders Friday and Saturday could well be the making or breaking of either club providing one of the teams winds up with a 4-1 edge or 5-0 sweep.

The Reds, cheered by the superb slinging of Ewell (no-hit) Blackwell in the Chicago classic, open up against Billy Southworth's formidable Braves in Boston with an afternoon contest and then a night affair while the hapless Pirates and Phils will continue their battle of the cellar at Philadelphia.

Although they were chuckling over their 10th all-star triumph, the American leaguers, with the exception of the New York group, were not too happy over the big edge held by the Yankees. Unless they can stop the Bronx Bombers on this trip and whittle down some of the eight-game margin held by Bucky Harris' men, the turnstiles are likely to click at a much slower rate for the rest of the season.

Yanks Invade St. Louis

The Yanks with a terrific stadium record and a weak road mark, invaded St. Louis for tomorrow's night clash with an eight-game winning streak and an inspired ball club.

The Red Sox and Tigers are in a virtual tie for second with the Detroiters a percentage point ahead. They will tangle in a twilight tilt in Detroit.

Strung out behind the second and third placers are Connie Mack's amazing Philadelphia A's (10½), Cleveland (11), Chicago (12½), Washington (14½), and St. Louis (19½).

The A's and Indians tangle in a twi-night doubleheader in Cleveland with Bob Feller slated to return to action for the Indians.

Caseys To Play Legion At Fort Hill Field

The battle between the first place American Legion and the runner-up Knights of Columbus at Fort Hill field will feature today's program in the Rocking Chair Softball League.

In other games Texcel will play the Elks at Campobello, Potomac Edison faces the Moose at East Side and Jaycees will be hosts to Outdoor Club on Rolling Mill Field.

TO CASHIER SHOOT—Fred S. Tomlin, of Glassboro, N. J., holder of the highest average ever made on more than 1,000 registered targets, has been named by the Remington Arms Company, Inc., to cashier the West Virginia State championship trapshooting tournament which will be held at the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club July 18, 19 and 20. In 1939 Tomlin broke 2433 out of 2450 for an average of .9930. He is the only two times winner of the world's open championship and the only five times winner of the professional championship. The host organization is making preparations to accommodate a record turnout of shooters at its new traps on the Frankfort Road.

Lonaconing Plays Host To Hyndman In Contest Today

Ambulance Fund Game Set For Mt. Savage

Hyndman's Firemen and the Lonaconing Republican Club are scheduled to play off a Bi-State League postponed game today at 5:30 p. m., in Lonaconing, and a feature of the homecoming celebration there.

At Mt. Savage, a game for the benefit of the community ambulance fund will be played between Mt. Savage of the Bi-State League and Barrelvile of the Interstate League. The game will get under way at 5 p. m.

Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, one-time major league pitching star, Cumberland's Police and Fire Commissioner William V. Keegan, and Lester B. Reed, of the House of Delegates will be on hand for the pre-game ceremonies. A concert will be given by the Mt. Savage Junior Order Band.

Alexander "Pop" Nicol, president of the Bi-State League, telephoned the News from the Veterans' Hospital, Aspinwall, Pa., that he will be unable to attend the game in Mt. Savage today. Nicol underwent a tonsil operation Tuesday.

Jack Turnbull, secretary of the Bi-State League last night announced that clubs have released and signed the following:

Signed: Frostburg, James Spiker; Queen City, Richard Lynch; Midland, James Dunn; Lonaconing, Charles Genevie and John D. Wilson; Westernport, Clark Ross, Albert Kebic and John E. Clay; Amvets, James Close and Walter Misosky.

Released: Barton, Joe Inskeep, Clark Ross; Lonaconing, Albert Kolish; Westvaco, Thomas Donnelly, Claude Ravenscroft; Amvets, George Cvengros.

Moose To Practice

The Loyal Order of Moose baseball team of the Interstate League will hold a practice session today at 5:30 o'clock at Stitcher Field.

Royale A. C. Boxers Land Pennsy Bouts

Connellsville Lions Plan Show On Monday

Presley W. "Red" Mauk, manager of the Royale Athletic Club, last night announced that he will take eight amateur boxers to Connellsville, Pa., for a show to be staged there under the auspices of the Lions Club on Monday, July 14.

The Cumberlanders will be matched with leather slingers from Connellsville, Brownsville and Charleroi, Pa., in a series of eight-round matches, Mauk said.

Royale boxers already selected to make the trip are Donnie Keiser, Jimmie Catanese, Bill Frazier, Eugene Mann, Medford Nicholson and Bill Addison. Two more boxers will be added to round out the team of eight.

Tony Spinalli is the matchmaker for the Connellsville Lions Club which hopes to hold shows regularly.

Amvets To Protest Playing Of Greenya By Victorious VFW

Manage Frank Riehl of the Amvets' softball team announced last night that he will lodge a protest in behalf of his club against the V. F. W. for using George Greenya in yesterday's game in which the Vets defeated the Amvets by the score of 6-2 in the City League.

Riehl stated that Greenya, who played centerfield, wasn't released officially by the Maccabees and even if he had been released the three lowest teams in the standings would have had first claim on his services.

Virginia Avenue, the Maccabees and Virginia Avenue were the last three teams in the league when the first half race closed.

'Huppy' Davis, Trainer For 36 Years, Hopes To Saddle Winners At Fairgo

Born In Maryland, Made Debut In 1911

When the Cumberland Fair Association launches its 10-day race meeting Tuesday, August 19, many prominent trainers will send thoroughbreds postward at the Fairgo half mile racing trip.

Perhaps the best known of the trainers who hopes to saddle his share of winners is J. Grover Davis, who has been associated with the sport since 1911.

"Huppy," as he is known to racegoers, was born December 19, 1884 at Benson, Harford County, Md.

The first horse he ever saddled was Merry Lad at the Havre de Grace (Md.) track when bookmakers were still operating. The best horse he ever saddled was Annie's Dream, a sensation over Maryland and West Virginia tracks last year and regarded as one of the best horses ever to race at Fairgo. "Huppy" says Man O' War was the best horse he ever saw.

A lover of horses since a small boy, "Huppy" took a veterinarian's course and later became a trainer. He is one of the best liked men ever to come to eastern racing and one of the hardest workers ever to hit a track.

J. Grover (Huppy) Davis

Marlboro Given Ample Warning, Janney Declares

Commission Refuses To Reconsider Action

BALTIMORE, July 9. (AP)—The Maryland Racing Commission refused today to reconsider its revocation of racing dates for the Marlboro race track this fall.

Stuart S. Janney, Jr., chairman of the commission, said after a meeting of the group today that "we discussed the Marlboro question again, but we did not change our decision.

"We would like to see racing this fall at Marlboro.

"But in fairness to the public and horsemen, we cannot allow a meeting there under present conditions.

"Nothing is right at Marlboro except the racing strip itself."

The commission revoked dates for the 10-day meeting which had been scheduled to start September 13, because of "inadequate facilities."

John W. Farrell, secretary-treasurer of the track, said earlier in the day that crews were at work repairing the stables and "we have ample time to complete repairs in the two months before the track is to open."

Farrell, who also is Marlboro general counsel, added that "full plans" for the complete rebuilding of the plant were in the commission's hands.

Janney said the commission would be glad to change its decision if the conditions were corrected before the time set for the meeting, but added:

"A miracle would have to be passed or a magic wand brought into play to have Marlboro ready by that time.

"We do not believe it can be done.

"The place is in a woeful condition of disrepair.

"They have been warned every year to do something about it, but it has done no good.

"This time, they will have to follow through on their promises."

The commission spent most of the day revising the state racing code—bringing it up to date and correcting and clarifying language of some of the rules.

Janney said most of the revisions were technical.

He said the rule requiring a prerace test for stimulation in horses has been reworded so that "we can more easily prosecute those found breaking it," but did not elaborate.

British Boxing Board Disagrees

Rejects NBA Proposal In Paterson's Case

LONDON, July 9 (AP)—An American proposal that Jackie Paterson of Scotland be forced to forfeit his world flyweight boxing title if he failed to go through with his July 16 defense against Dado Marino of Honolulu was turned down today by the British Boxing Board of Control.

The proposal came from Abe Greene, president of the National Boxing Association in the United States, who cabled Charles Dommall, general secretary of the British board, to prevent further delay of the fight, already postponed twice by the champion because of an attack of boils.

"Illness unfortunate," Dommall said in his reply to Green. "Board's doctor certifies. Do not agree your proposal." Dommall ended his cablegram with "may you never need a doctor."

In Glasgow, Charles Black, promoter of the title bout which first was postponed from June 11 to July 9 and then put back another week, said that Rinty Monaghan, Irish contender, would fight Marino in a non-title bout next Wednesday if Paterson still is unable to appear.

STOTLER SCORES 7TH TRIUMPH AS CADILLAC TAKES LEAGUE LEAD

Jack "Moon" Stotler pitched the Cadillac tossers into first place in the Junior City Softball League yesterday when he turned back the Redmen by the score of 8 to 1 at Fort Hill upper field.

Stotler pitched a three-hitter and registered his 7th straight mound triumph of the league season. Ted Hausman collected three hits and Ron Rowan and Charley Lattimer banked three-baggers for the victors.

Beightol's Bouncers defeated Maryland Avenue in a slugfest affair at Fort Hill lower field by the score of 13-8. Twenty-three hits were made in this game. Lynn Beightol paced the winners with three hits and a base on balls while K. Owens garnered two hits and two free tickets. Shore homered for the losers.

The Cassino Cubs took the measure of East Side at East Side field by the score of 5-1. Each team got six hits. Goff homered for the losers in the second inning. Scores:

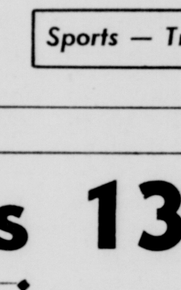
Fear Can Be Paralyzer

Without making any direct pick on the coming Zale-Graziano meeting in Chicago, it was easy to see that Gene Tunney had a leaning towards Tony Zale. You sensed this when the ex-heavyweight champion began talking about ring courage.



Gene Tunney

"Few seem to understand how important this is," Tunney said. "I know Tony Zale has his full share. Graziano may have just as much. I wouldn't know about him. But, I wouldn't say that he looked to be the most courageous fighter I ever saw last summer, when the dazed and battered Zale nailed him with that body punch. A dazed and badly battered fighter shouldn't stop an opponent with a body punch.

"This matter of ring courage is more important than many seem to know," Tunney continued. "Fear, and I'm referring all together to physical fear, can be a complete paralyzer. It can freeze your nerves, blur your brain and tie up your muscles. It isn't a matter of taking a punch on the chin, even of being knocked out. It is often the sudden realization that you are not equipped to beat an opponent in front of a big crowd.

"No one can question Billy Conn's physical gameness. I have heard, and I believe, that Conn would walk into a gun or a knife. But, it is something entirely different when you suddenly realize, in meeting a man like Joe Louis for the championship, that you are facing an opponent who can both outpunch you and outbox you, one who has most of the weapons needed to win. A dumb fellow might not know this, or ever care. But, whatever else may happen to you, you can't afford to be afraid."

"How did you feel before the two Dempsey fights?" I asked.

"In my first fight with Harry Greb," Tunney said, "Harry did about everything to me, except tear off my head and pull out my heart. I was slipping in my own blood after the third round. But, after all, he didn't kill me. I was all right a few days later. I knew then that Dempsey nor anyone else couldn't give me a worse beating. I had taken the limit. After that, I was never afraid of anyone, not even Harry Greb, a truly great fighter—and a rough one.

"I hadn't the slightest fear when I met Jack Dempsey, the greatest puncher of them all, at either Philadelphia or Chicago. If he happened to nail me — well, that was that. But I knew I wasn't going to get anywhere being afraid of his punches. I knew I had to have my brain and muscles working together, which any form of fear would have made impossible.

"After all, why be afraid when you are shooting for a million dollars?"

The Zale-Graziano Bout

"There is little question," Tunney added, "that many of Joe Louis' opponents have been frozen before the first punch was thrown. It is hard to blame them for this. They knew in advance they never belonged in the same ring with Louis. For Louis is a great fighter—a fine boxer, a hard puncher, dead game and coolheaded. It is unlucky for him that, after ten years, there is

"RICH" HAINES SPILLS 701 PINS FOR RECORD IN CLUB SOCIAL LOOP

Richard Haines established an all-time record for three games in the Club Social Bowling League last night when he toppled 701 pins on the Club Recreation Alleys, North Mechanic street.

The league has been in operation summer and winter since 1933.

Haines was bowling with the Fords against the Crescents when he hung up the new mark last night. His single game scores were 225, 246 and 230.

"Rich" is a southpaw and his three-game total is believed to be the highest rolled since Harry Cioni's 728 of approximately 10 years ago.

Umpires Are Assigned For Bi-State Games

Saturday: Westvaco at Queen City, Radcliffe and Leith. Frostburg at Amvets, Middleton and Martin. Midland at Lonaconing, Keister and DiUbaldo. Romney at Barton, Kelly and Ed Thompson. Hyndman at Mt. Savage, Dunn and Warnick.

Sunday: Queen City at Midland, Dunn and Leith. Barton at Westvaco, Kelly and Davis. Lonaconing at Amvets, Radcliffe and Keister. Romney at Mt. Savage, Warnick and Martin. Frostburg at Hyndman, Middleton and Blair.

30-Day Squirrel Season And Change In Minimum Size Of Trout Rejected

Continue Fox Bounties; To Improve Bear Creek

BALTIMORE, July 9 (AP) — The State Game and Inland Fish Commission at its regular July meeting today considered 13 requests of the Western Maryland Wildlife Federation, rejecting some and adopting others.

The commission, which reelected Garner W. Denmead, Baltimore, chariman, and all other officers, met for some time with a delegation of five from Western Maryland headed by George Walters of Eckhart.

Others in the group were Fred Crowe, and Jonathan Sleeman, Frostburg; and Clyde Michaels, Federation secretary, and Ellsworth Boal, both Westernport.

The federation first asked for a 30-day early squirrel season, from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, and the commission announced that a regulation already had been adopted setting a 15-day statewide season, Sept. 15-30, inclusive.

To Continue $2 Bounty

The commission also rejected a request that the minimum size of brook trout that could be taken be reduced from seven to six inches; announced that it would continue to pay a bounty of $2 per fox; advised the group that it was acquiring more land for hunting in Allegany and Garrett county; and that a booklet containing both game and fish laws was being published, as requested.

It voted to continue as at present in stocking trout before and during the season, instead of at the end of the season and not later than April 1 as requested.

The delegation asked that at least 25 cents of each dollar received by the commission be used for purchasing and restocking game and fish. It was announced that the commission now was spending 43 cents on the dollar in Western Maryland.

To Improve Bear Creek

Asked to improve rearing ponds at Bear Creek Hatchery, Garrett County, the commission said this was being done with possible expenditure of more than $7,000. Also, concerning a request for establishment of rearing ponds at Bottle Run, Allegany County, the board said that if advisable it would be done after a thorough investigation.

It was deemed inadvisable to make known publicly prior to the opening of the trout season the number planted and location of streams where the fish were stocked.

A careful study will be made of a proposal that the commission take "full advantage" of the possibilities of the Savage River area as trout streams; and a proposal that Little Savage River remain closed as a propagation stream was held in abeyance until the October meeting.

The Western Maryland group requested the commission to meet three times per year, and the commission said it had decided on quarterly meetings in July, October, January, and April.

Jonathan D. Longfellow of Salisbury, a member of the commission, invited the group to hold its October meeting at Salisbury, or some other Eastern Shore point, such as Cambridge or Easton. Final decision on this was deferred.

In other actions, the commission:

1—Selected September 1 to September 30 as the open season for rail and sora.

2—Included Frederick county with the five other counties for the open season on deer, from the first Monday in December through the follwoing Saturday.

3—Provided that shooting hours during the dove season begin at noon each day.

Action Affects Deep Creek

4—Amplified regulations affecting boats on Deep Creek lake by providing that all privately operated row boats, canoes, sailboats or rigs display numbers and carry life preserver equipment and that no aircraft use the lake without written permission of the commission and the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

5—Removed special regulations from the Battie Mixon fishing hole near Cumberland and provided that regular state-wide rules apply with the exception that no fishing be done from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise.

6—Brought mink into the list of protected game by includuing it in the fur bearing season from January 1 to March 15.

7—Directed Denmead to draft a regulation specifically outlawing the trapping of wild waterfowl.

8—Authorized Ernest A. Vaughn, director of the Department of Game and Inland Fish, to arrange for three-member advisory councils in each county, composed of representatives of sportsmen, farmers and the county board of education.

9—Put a possession limit of 35 on bait fish taken from other sources than trout streams or their tributaries, and prohibited the taking of such fish from trout streams.

Pellicle Establishes Grass Course Record

CHICAGO, July 9 (AP)—Hal Price Headley's Pellicle smashed an American grass course record for the second consecutive time when he galloped home an easy winner of the $25,000 Grassland Handicap before 19,000 spectators at Arlington Park today.

Pellicle, handled by Al Snider finished two and one-half lengths in front of Mrs. J. S. Letellier's Jack S. L., in 1:56 flat for the mile and three-sixteenths.

This was two-fifths of a second better than the old mark established by Put In at Washington Park in 1943.

Yarosz Has Close Call

Let "Bunny" Tell Story

No Harness Racing Here

"Pat" Honored By Legion

By C. V. BURNS

Peter J. "Bunny" Buntag, manager of Tommy Yarosz, the third ranking light-heavyweight in the United States, according to "ring" magazine, took a swing at me in Paul Sheehe's beanery the other morning but he didn't mean any harm.

"Bunny" was rehashing the terrific battle from which his great fighter recently emerged with Joe Basora, the tough Puerto Rican, at the Olympia Arena in Detroit.

And we have clippings from the Detroit Times, the Detroit Free

TOMMY YAROSZ

Press and the Detroit News as proof that it must have been a humdinger.

Buntag explains that Basora closed Yarosz's right eye in the very first round and "Bunny" became sick, fearing that the referee might be prompted to halt the fight and give it to the Puerto Rican on a TKO. "That would have been awful," the manager of the Monaca (Pa.) boxer who has won 35 consecutive fights, emphasized.

In the third round Tommy had a lump almost as big as a walnut raised below his right eye and between rounds a razor blade was used to puncture the swelling to release the bad blood and reduce the size of the knot. To make it more painful, Basora was heeling in the clinches.

"I must admit things looked bad for Tommy for 4½ rounds but still I had confidence in him because he has the heart of a lion and always fights harder when he is stung," Buntag declared.

The tide turned in the fifth round and Yarosz took the play away from Basora by hitting the Puerto Rican with everything but his manager's walking stick. The late rally had 5,442 cash customers on their toes. Tommy won the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth rounds and copped the split decision at the finish.

"Bunny" explains it this way:

"As Basora stepped through the ropes to leave the ring he told the boxing commissioner he thought he had won the fight. Then as he started for the dressing room he went out like a light and tumbled to the floor unconscious. Detroit papers stated he was 'out' for 40 minutes and when he regained consciousness he complained that his head was split open and his ribs were cracked."

At the hospital doctors advised Basora not to fight any more.

"Even though Basora wound up in the hospital it was a close call for Yarosz," Buntag declared. "A defeat would have hurt at this stage of the game with promoters seeking Yarosz for Charles and other top-notchers."

There'll be no harness racing in Maryland this year.

And next year when harness racing licenses are granted in the state they will not be issued to tracks licensed for flat racing.

This ruling has been announced by the Maryland Racing Commission.

Four of the 16 applications for trotting meet licenses were received by the state commission from flat racing interests, namely, the Cumberland Fair Association, Bel Air, Hagerstown and Marlboro.

According to the new edict issued by the commission Cumberland and the other half milers licensed for flat racing must keep "hands off" harness racing.

Harness racing with pari-mutuel betting was legalized by the 1947 legislature.

J. Stuart Janney, Jr., new chairman of the state commission, says:

"We can't have any harness racing this season, so we might as well do it right and not rush through things and make mistakes.

"It will require applicants for licenses to do a good deal of work and study, and it probably will be the end of August or the first part of September before we can have a public hearing."

The election of Thomas Raymond Farrell as commander of Fort Cumberland Post, American Legion, will be good news to his many friends throughout the county.

We've known "Pat," as he is more familiarly known, from way back and one wouldn't want to meet a nicer fellow.

A native of Mt. Savage or "one of the boys from west of the stone bridge," the genial Irishman has served as ticket taker and "identifier" of dead heads or cash customers at local professional and amateur boxing shows for many years.

I believe "Pat" first acted in that capacity back in the 1920's when Calton "Funny" Newnam was matchmaker for American Legion professional boxing shows at the old frame state armory which occupied the site of the present brick structure on South Centre Street.

Many of our old friends have held the position to which "Pat" has been elected. There's Judge William A. Huster, Dr. Arthur P. Dixon, Harry E. Flook, Tom Conlon, Daniel F. McMullen, Fred Puderbaugh, the late W. Earl Brooks, Wesley Abrams, Bob Bowers, the late Harry Spiker, Claude Deal, John R. Kelley, Sr., the late Dr. George O. Sharrett and Charley Smith.

FRIDAY GAMES

North End at Astor (Rolling Mill)
Lacy's at Legion (Community Park)
Reed's at Concord (Campobello)
Maccabees at V. F. W. (East Side)
Amvets at Virginia Ave. (Taylor)

The "whitewashing" experts of the City Softball League were up to their old tricks yesterday when the Concord Clothiers applied a coat of kalsomine to the Maccabees to launch their second half championship drive with a 10-0 victory in a game staged at Community Park.

Carter Banks let the Bees down with four hits while his matches rapped out ten bingles including Bernard Smith's homer with one aboard and a triple; James Smith's triple and single, Charley Yates' three-bagger and double and Russ Davis' double and single.

VFW Surprises Amvets

An improved V. F. W. team surprised in its initial start of the second half by spilling the Amvets, runners-up in the first half race, by the score of 6 to 2 on the Rolling Mill diamond.

Coach Derl Keller's aggregation collected eight hits, four of which were shared by Ted Rowan and E. Lewis. One of the latter's blows was a triple. Stoutamyer obtained two hits for the Amvets. Roy Duncan, shortstop of the Vets pulled the fielding gem when he turned in a bare-handed catch of Sheetz's line drive.

Lacy's Delicatets took the measure of Astor Cab at Taylor Field, 4 to 1. Junior Hardy put this game on ice in the third frame when he belted a four-bagger with two on the hassocks. "Babe" Crabtree was the only player who got two hits. Durbin of Lacy's and Minnicks of Astor connected for two-baggers.

Tosses One-Hitter

Glen Kauffman tossed a one-hitter as the North End Social and Athletic Club subdued the Virginia Avenue Merchants at Stitcher Field by the score of 4 to 1. Welsh of North End got two of his team's seven hits.

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, topped Reed's Electricians in an eight-inning game at Campobello by the score of 5 to 2. Scores:

STOOPS' AND PECK'S WIN AT FROSTBURG

FROSTBURG, July 9—The front running Stoops' Restaurant team bagged another victory today when it triumphed over Chubby's tossers at Community Park by the score of 8-1 in a Frostburg Softball League contest.

Stair let Chubby's down with four hits while his battery mate B. Tippen paced his team's 11-hit assault with three bingles.

Peck's Cafe racked up 15 hits and trounced the Eagles at State Teachers' College Field by the score of 13-3. Arnone and Scarpelli with four and three hits topped Peck's attack while Winfield was credited with three of the Eagles' seven safeties. Scores:

STOOPS'	033 200 0—8	11	0

Major Leaguers Will Play Full Schedule Today

Yanks Invade West; Cubs Battle Dodgers

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK, July 9 (AP) — The all-star game was just a bitter memory for the National Leaguers today as they buckled down for another ding-dong battle to the wire while the American Leaguers faced the possibility of another rout this time by the New York Yankees.

Returning stars joined up with their clubs for the second half of the races which finds the eastern National nines playing host to the westerners with the reverse situation in the junior circuit.

In the National, Brooklyn's Dodgers were riding atop the heap with a game edge over the Boston Braves with the New York Giants another half length astern. In threatening positions were the upcoming World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago's Cubs and Cincinnati's Reds.

The Cards were 4½ games behind the league leaders with Chicago 5½ out and Cincinnati six. Only the Philadelphia Phils (12½) and Pittsburgh Pirates (13) appeared out of the chase.

The Brooks, Braves and Giants have been moving in and out of the first three spots virtually all season and another shift could easily happen tomorrow when the Cubs invade Ebbets Field for a doubleheader with Brooklyn, St. Louis plays at New York and Cincinnati visits at Boston.

Burt Shotton faces the third western invasion in an enviable position with his two top flingers, Ralph Branca (12-6) and Handsome Harry Taylor (7-2) ready to go against Chicago's Hank Borowy (8-3) and Bob Chipman (5-3).

Open Five Game Series

Mel Ott and his New York wrecking crew, still up in the chase despite mediocre mound work, take on the surging Cards who seem to have straightened out their kinks for their usual second half spurt. This five-game series, which includes a night game tomorrow and successive doubleheaders Friday and Saturday could well be the making or breaking of either club providing one of the teams winds up with a 4-1 edge or 5-0 sweep.

The Reds, cheered by the superb slinging of Ewell (no-hit) Blackwell in the Chicago classic, open up against Billy Southworth's formidable Braves in Boston with an afternoon contest and then a night affair while the hapless Pirates and Phils will continue their battle of the cellar at Philadelphia.

Although they were chuckling over their 10th all-star triumph, the American leaguers, with the exception of the New York group, were not too happy over the big edge held by the Yankees. Unless they can stop the Bronx Bombers on this trip and whittle down some of the eight-game margin held by Bucky Harris' men, the turnstiles are likely to click at a much slower rate for the rest of the season.

Yanks Invade St. Louis

The Yanks with a terrific stadium record and a weak road mark, invaded St. Louis for tomorrow's night clash with an eight-game winning streak and an inspired ball club.

The Red Sox and Tigers are in a virtual tie for second with the Detroiters a percentage point ahead. They will tangle in a twilight tilt in Detroit.

Strung out behind the second and third placers are Connie Mack's amazing Philadelphia A's (10½), Cleveland (11), Chicago (12½), Washington (14½), and St. Louis (19½).

The A's and Indians tangle in a twi-night doubleheader in Cleveland with Bob Feller slated to return to action for the Indians.

Washington and Chicago round out the American league program with a twin bill at Chicago.

Caseys To Play Legion At Fort Hill Field

The battle between the first place American Legion and the runner-up Knights of Columbus at Fort Hill field will feature today's program in the Rocking Chair Softball League.

In other games Texcel will play the Elks at Campobello, Potomac Edison faces the Moose at East Side and Jaycees will be hosts to Outdoor Club on Rolling Mill Field.

TO CASHIER SHOOT—Fred S. Tomlin, of Glassboro, N. J., holder of the highest average ever made on more than 1,000 registered targets, has been named by the Remington Arms Company, Inc., to cashier the West Virginia State championship trapshooting tournament which will be held at the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club July 18, 19 and 20. In 1939 Tomlin broke 2433 out of 2450 for an average of .9930. He is the only two times winner of the world's open championship and the only five times winner of the professional championship. The host organization is making preparations to accommodate a record turnout of shooters at its new traps on the Frankfort Road.

Lonaconing Plays Host To Hyndman In Contest Today

Ambulance Fund Game Set For Mt. Savage

Hyndman's Firemen and the Lonaconing Republican Club are scheduled to play off a Bi-State League postponed game today at 5:30 p. m., in Lonaconing, and a feature of the homecoming celebration there.

At Mt. Savage, a game for the benefit of the community ambulance fund will be played between Mt. Savage of the Bi-State League and Barrelvile of the Interstate League. The game will get under way at 5 p. m.

Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, one-time major league pitching star, Cumberland's Police and Fire Commissioner William V. Keegan, and Lester B. Reed, of the House of Delegates will be on hand for the pre-game ceremonies. A concert will be given by the Mt. Savage Junior Order Band.

Alexander "Pop" Nicol, president of the Bi-State League, telephoned the News from the Veterans' Hospital, Aspinwall, Pa., that he will be unable to attend the game in Mt. Savage today. Nicol underwent a tonsil operation Tuesday.

Jack Turnbull, secretary of the Bi-State League last night announced that clubs have released and signed the following:

Signed: Frostburg, James Spiker; Queen City, Richard Lynch; Midland, James Dunn; Lonaconing, Charles Genevie and John D. Wilson; Westernport, Clark Ross, Albert Kebic and John E. Clay; Amvets, James Close and Walter Misosky.

Released: Barton, Joe Inskeep, Clark Ross; Lonaconing, Albert Kolish; Westvaco, Thomas Donnelly, Claude Ravenscroft; Amvets, George Cvengros.

Moose To Practice

Royale A. C. Boxers Land Pennsy Bouts

Connellsville Lions Plan Show On Monday

Presley W. "Red" Mauk, manager of the Royale Athletic Club, last night announced that he will take eight amateur boxers to Connellsville, Pa., for a show to be staged there under the auspices of the Lions Club on Monday, July 14.

The Cumberlanders will be matched with leather slingers from Connellsville, Brownsville and Charleroi, Pa., in a series of eight-round matches, Mauk said.

Royale boxers already selected to make the trip are Donnie Keiser, Jimmie Catanese, Bill Frazier, Eugene Mann, Medford Nicholson and Bill Addison. Two more boxers will be added to round out the team of eight.

Tony Spinalli is the matchmaker for the Connellsville Lions Club which hopes to hold shows regularly.

Amvets To Protest Playing Of Greenya By Victorious VFW

Manage Frank Riehl of the Amvets' softball team announced last night that he will lodge a protest in behalf of his club against the V. F. W. for using George Greenya in yesterday's game in which the Vets defeated the Amvets by the score of 6-2 in the City League.

Riehl stated that Greenya, who played centerfield, wasn't released officially by the Maccabees and even if he had been released the three lowest teams in the standings would have had first claim on his services.

Virginia Avenue, the Maccabees and Virginia Avenue were the last three teams in the league when the first half race closed.

'Huppy' Davis, Trainer For 36 Years, Hopes To Saddle Winners At Fairgo

Born In Maryland, Made Debut In 1911

When the Cumberland Fair Association launches its 10-day race meeting Tuesday, August 19, many prominent trainers will send thoroughbreds postward at the Fairgo half mile racing trip.

Perhaps the best known of the trainers who hopes to saddle his share of winners is J. Grover Davis, who has been associated with the sport since 1911.

"Huppy," as he is known to racegoers, was born December 19, 1884 at Benson, Harford County, Md.

The first horse he ever saddled was Merry Lad at the Havre de Grace (Md.) track when bookmakers were still operating. The best horse he ever saddled was Annie's Dream, a sensation over Maryland and West Virginia tracks last year and regarded as one of the best horses ever to race at Fairgo. "Huppy" says Man O' War was the best horse he ever saw.

A lover of horses since a small boy, "Huppy" took a veterinarian's course and later became a trainer. He is one of the best liked men ever to come to eastern racing and one of the hardest workers ever to hit a track.

Marlboro Given Ample Warning, Janney Declares

Commission Refuses To Reconsider Action

BALTIMORE, July 9. (AP)—The Maryland Racing Commission refused today to reconsider its revocation of racing dates for the Marlboro race track this fall.

Stuart S. Janney, Jr., chairman of the commission, said after a meeting of the group today that "we discussed the Marlboro question again, but we did not change our decision.

"We would like to see racing this fall at Marlboro.

"But in fairness to the public and horsemen, we cannot allow a meeting there under present conditions.

"Nothing is right at Marlboro except the racing strip itself."

The commission revoked dates for the 10-day meeting which had been scheduled to start September 13, because of "inadequate facilities."

John W. Farrell, secretary-treasurer of the track, said earlier in the day that crews were at work repairing the stables and "we have ample time to complete repairs in the two months before the track is to open."

Farrell, who also is Marlboro general counsel, added that "full plans" for the complete rebuilding of the plant were in the commission's hands.

Janney said the commission would be glad to change its decision if the conditions were corrected before the time set for the meeting, but added:

"A miracle would have to be passed or a magic wand brought into play to have Marlboro ready by that time.

"We do not believe it can be done.

"The place is in a woeful condition of disrepair.

"They have been warned every year to do something about it, but it has done no good.

"This time, they will have to follow through on their promises."

The commission spent most of the day revising the state racing code—bringing it up to date and correcting and clarifying language of some of the rules.

Janney said most of the revisions were technical.

He said the rule requiring a pre-race test for stimulation in horses has been reworded so that "we can more easily prosecute those found breaking it," but did not elaborate.

British Boxing Board Disagrees

Rejects NBA Proposal In Paterson's Case

LONDON, July 9 (AP)—An American proposal that Jackie Paterson of Scotland be forced to forfeit his world flyweight boxing title if he failed to go through with his July 16 defense against Dado Marino of Honolulu was turned down today by the British Boxing Board of Control.

The proposal came from Abe Greene, president of the National Boxing Association in the United States, who cabled Charles Dommall, general secretary of the British board, to prevent further delay of the fight, already postponed twice by the champion because of an attack of boils.

"Illness unfortunate," Dommall said in his reply to Green. "Board's doctor certifies. Do not agree your proposal." Dommall ended his cablegram with "may you never need a doctor."

In Glasgow, Charles Black, promoter of the title bout which first was postponed from June 11 to July 9 and then put back another week, said that Rinty Monaghan, Irish contender, would fight Marino in a non-title bout next Wednesday if Paterson still is unable to appear.

STOTLER SCORES 7TH TRIUMPH AS CADILLAC TAKES LEAGUE LEAD

Jack "Moon" Stotler pitched the Cadillac tossers into first place in the Junior City Softball League yesterday when he turned back the Redmen by the score of 8 to 1 at Fort Hill upper field.

Stotler pitched a three-hitter and registered his 7th straight mound triumph of the league season. Ted Hausman collected three hits and Ron Rowan and Charley Lattimer banked three-baggers for the victors.

Beightol's Bouncers defeated Maryland Avenue in a slugfest affair at Fort Hill lower field by the score of 13-8. Twenty-three hits were made in this game. Lynn Beightol paced the winners with three hits and a base on balls while K. Owens garnered two hits and two free tickets. Shore homered for the losers.

The Cassino Cubs took the measure of East Side at East Side field by the score of 5-1. Each team got six hits. Goff homered for the losers in the second inning. Scores:

Fear Can Be Paralyzer

Without making any direct pick on the coming Zale-Graziano meeting in Chicago, it was easy to see that Gene Tunney had a leaning towards Tony Zale. You sensed this when the ex-heavyweight champion began talking about ring courage.

Gene Tunney

"Few seem to understand how important this is," Tunney said. "I know Tony Zale has his full share. Graziano may have just as much. I wouldn't know about him. But, I wouldn't say that he looked to be the most courageous fighter I ever saw last summer, when the dazed and battered Zale nailed him with that body punch. A dazed and badly battered fighter shouldn't stop an opponent with a body punch.

"This matter of ring courage is more important than many seem to know," Tunney continued. "Fear, and I'm referring all together to physical fear, can be a complete paralyzer. It can freeze your nerves, blur your brain and tie up your muscles. It isn't a matter of taking a punch on the chin, even of being knocked out. It is often the sudden realization that you are not equipped to beat an opponent in front of a big crowd.

"No one can question Billy Conn's physical gameness. I have heard, and I believe, that Conn would walk into a gun or a knife. But, it is something entirely different when you suddenly realize, in meeting a man like Joe Louis for the championship, that you are facing an opponent who can both outpunch you and outbox you, one who has most of the weapons needed to win. A dumb fellow might not know this, or ever care. But, whatever else may happen to you, you can't afford to be afraid."

"How did you feel before the two Dempsey fights?" I asked.

"In my first fight with Harry Greb," Tunney said, "Harry did about everything to me, except tear off my head and pull out my heart. I was slipping in my own blood after the third round. But, after all, he didn't kill me. I was all right a few days later. I knew then that Dempsey nor anyone else couldn't give me a worse beating. I had taken the limit. After that, I was never afraid of anyone, not even Harry Greb, a truly great fighter—and a rough one.

"I hadn't the slightest fear when I met Jack Dempsey, the greatest puncher of them all, at either Philadelphia or Chicago. If he happened to nail me — well, that was that. But I knew I wasn't going to get anywhere being afraid of his punches. I knew I had to have my brain and muscles working together, which any form of fear would have made impossible.

"After all, why be afraid when you are shooting for a million dollars?"

The Zale-Graziano Bout

"There is little question," Tunney added, "that many of Joe Louis' opponents have been frozen before the first punch was thrown. It is hard to blame them for this. They knew in advance they never belonged in the same ring with Louis. For Louis is a great fighter—a fine boxer, a hard puncher, dead game and coolheaded. It is unlucky for him that, after ten years, there is

"RICH" HAINES SPILLS 701 PINS FOR RECORD IN CLUB SOCIAL LOOP

Richard Haines established an all-time record for three games in the Club Social Bowling League last night when he toppled 701 pins on the Club Recreation Alleys, North Mechanic street.

The league has been in operation summer and winter since 1933.

Haines was bowling with the Fords against the Crescents when he hung up the new mark last night. His single game scores were 225, 246 and 230.

"Rich" is a southpaw and his three-game total is believed to be the highest rolled since Harry Cioni's 728 of approximately 10 years ago.

Umpires Are Assigned For Bi-State Games

Saturday: Westvaco at Queen City, Radcliffe and Leith. Frostburg at Amvets, Middleton and Martin. Midland at Lonaconing, Keister and DiUbaldo. Romney at Barton, Kelly and Ed Thompson. Hyndman at Mt. Savage, Dunn and Warnick.

Sunday: Queen City at Midland, Dunn and Leith. Barton at Westvaco, Kelly and Davis. Lonaconing at Amvets, Radcliffe and Keister. Romney at Mt. Savage, Warnick and Martin. Frostburg at Hyndman, Middleton and Blair.

30-Day Squirrel Season And Change In Minimum Size Of Trout Rejected

Continue Fox Bounties; To Improve Bear Creek

BALTIMORE, July 9 (AP) — The State Game and Inland Fish Commission at its regular July meeting today considered 13 requests of the Western Maryland Wildlife Federation, rejecting some and adopting others.

The commission, which reelected Garner W. Denmead, Baltimore, chariman, and all other officers, met for some time with a delegation of five from Western Maryland headed by George Walters of Eckhart.

Others in the group were Fred Crowe, and Jonathan Sleeman, Frostburg; and Clyde Michaels, Federation secretary, and Ellsworth Boal, both Westernport.

The federation first asked for a 30-day early squirrel season, from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, and the commission announced that a regulation already had been adopted setting a 15-day statewide season, Sept. 15-30, inclusive.

To Continue $2 Bounty

The commission also rejected a request that the minimum size of brook trout that could be taken be reduced from seven to six inches; announced that it would continue to pay a bounty of $2 per fox; advised the group that it was acquiring more land for hunting in Allegany and Garrett county; and that a booklet containing both game and fish laws was being published, as requested.

It voted to continue as at present in stocking trout before and during the season, instead of at the end of the season and not later than April 1 as requested.

The delegation asked that at least 25 cents of each dollar received by the commission be used for purchasing and restocking game and fish. It was announced that the commission now was spending 43 cents on the dollar in Western Maryland.

To Improve Bear Creek

Asked to improve rearing ponds at Bear Creek Hatchery, Garrett County, the commission said this was being done with possible expenditure of more than $7,000. Also, concerning a request for establishment of rearing ponds at Bottle Run, Allegany County, the board said that if advisable it would be done after a thorough investigation.

It was deemed inadvisable to make known publicly prior to the opening of the trout season the number planted and location of streams where the fish were stocked.

A careful study will be made of a proposal that the commission take "full advantage" of the possibilities of the Savage River area as trout streams; and a proposal that Little Savage River remain closed as a propagation stream was held in abeyance until the October meeting.

The Western Maryland group requested the commission to meet three times per year, and the commission said it had decided on quarterly meetings in July, October, January, and April.

Jonathan D. Longfellow of Salisbury, a member of the commission, invited the group to hold its October meeting at Salisbury, or some other Eastern Shore point, such as Cambridge or Easton. Final decision on this was deferred.

In other actions, the commission:

1—Selected September 1 to September 30 as the open season for rail and sora.

2—Included Frederick county with the five other counties for the open season on deer, from the first Monday in December through the following Saturday.

3—Provided that shooting hours during the dove season begin at noon each day.

Action Affects Deep Creek

4—Amplified regulations affecting boats on Deep Creek lake by providing that all privately operated row boats, canoes, sailboats or rigs display numbers and carry life preserver equipment and that no aircraft use the lake without written permission of the commission and the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

5—Removed special regulations from the Battle Mixon fishing hole near Cumberland and provided that regular state-wide rules apply with the exception that no fishing be done from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise.

6—Brought mink into the list of protected game by includuing it in the fur bearing season from January 1 to March 15.

7—Directed Denmead to draft a regulation specifically outlawing the trapping of wild waterfowl.

8—Authorized Ernest A. Vaughn, director of the Department of Game and Inland Fish, to arrange for three-member advisory councils in each county, composed of representatives of sportsmen, farmers and the county board of education.

9—Put a possession limit of 35 on bait fish taken from other sources than trout streams or their tributaries, and prohibited the taking of such fish from trout streams.

Pellicle Establishes Grass Course Record

CHICAGO, July 9 (AP)—Hal Price Headley's Pellicle smashed an American grass course record for the second consecutive time when he galloped home an easy winner of the $25,000 Grassland Handicap before 19,000 spectators at Arlington Park today.

Pellicle, handled by Al Snider finished two and one-half lengths in front of Mrs. J. S. Letellier's Jack S. L., in 1:56 flat for the mile and three-sixteenths.

This was two-fifths of a second better than the old mark established by Put In at Washington Park in 1943.

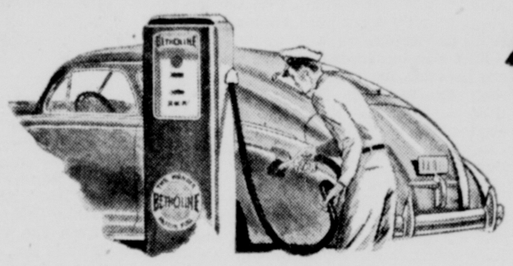
ENJOYMENT IS A BIG WORD!

Enjoyment is a big, big word—refreshment and satisfaction are big, too. So let's save space—and suggest that you try a glass of DUQUESNE PILSENER—and let its delicious taste and flavor tell the story of its fine sparkling quality.

DUQUESNE BREWING COMPANY
Pittsburgh, Pa.

DUQUESNE
PILSENER
"The Finest Beer in Town"

"YOU BET! IT'S THE BEST BETHOLINE EVER"



and HERE'S WHY...

Chief chemist Gustav Bornscheuer, in an official motor fuel analysis of improved Betholine, says:

"This is the best Betholine we have ever made. During the war several new types of compounds were used in making 100 Octane aviation fuel. The exclusive Betholine formula contains a large proportion of these compounds. Improved Betholine has exceptional starting and accelerating qualities, a low gravity and a higher octane value than any Betholine ever produced. It ranks first among motor fuels in this territory."

A great PREMIUM motor fuel—now better than ever. PROVE IT.

Check the extra mileage, the extra antiknock protection. Feel the extra power, extra pep, extra smoothness. It's economical to buy the best, and with motor fuels that means improved Betholine.

"YOU BET! IT'S THE BEST BETHOLINE EVER"

and HERE'S WHY...

Chief chemist Gustav Bornscheuer, in an official motor fuel analysis of improved Betholine, says:

"This is the best Betholine we have ever made. During the war several new types of compounds were used in making 100 Octane aviation fuel. The exclusive Betholine formula contains a large proportion of these compounds. Improved Betholine has exceptional starting and accelerating qualities, a low gravity and a higher octane value than any Betholine ever produced. It ranks first among motor fuels in this territory."

A great PREMIUM motor fuel—now better than ever. PROVE IT.

Miners Reported Thronging Back Into Coal Pits

Normal Production Expected By Friday

PITTSBURGH, July 9. (AP)—Miners thronging back into soft coal pits after their extended vacation sent production soaring in Northern states today while the announcement by Southern Operators that they also would accept the new wage contract promised normal production by the week's end.

The Southern Operators, who employ approximately 100,000 of the 400,000 bituminous United Mine Workers, late today followed the lead of the Northern, Mid-West and Western owners in agreeing to John L. Lewis' terms.

First Groups Sign

The first of the Southern group to sign represented West Virginia and East Kentucky bituminous mines. The UMW estimated less than ten percent of the nation's soft coal production still is unaccounted for.

Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio led the field in restoring coal production with fuel flowing from tipples to industry in a growing stream. Over the nation, delay in holding ratification meetings, widespread absenteeism and lack of full crews slowed recovery in some areas.

Forecasts were general of resumption of normal production by tomorrow. A state-by-state survey showed nearly 135,000 of the 300,000 miners covered by the northern agreement were back at work today.

The Illinois Coal Operators Association reported all mines working and the AFL-United Mine Workers said about 17,000 of the state's 23,000 miners had returned to work. John McCann, president of the Independent Progressive Miners reported all his 17,000 members were on the job.

Work Is Resumed

Miners resuming work near Pittsburgh were jubilant over gains won by the new contract but feared increased living costs might eat up some of the benefits.

"It's the best contract we ever had but it's liable to hit us right in the breadbasket," declared a grizzled veteran miner waiting to enter the shaft. "Watch the prices go up now. We'll need all of our raise to make ends meet."

ACKNOWLEDGES CHEERS— Princess Elizabeth waves, acknowledging cheers of about 1,500 persons, as she leaves Buckingham Palace in London yesterday following Royal Family dinner attended by her fiance, Lt. Philip Mountbatten, former Prince Philip of Greece.

Senate in which nine others joined. He told reporters that he and others are "coming gradually to the conclusion" that if Russia fails to co-operate, it may be necessary to re-form the United Nations without that country.

Ferguson was joined in sponsoring the resolution by Senator Tobey (R-NH), Baldwin (R-Conn.) Flanders (R-Vt.), Cain (R-Wash.), Byrd (D-Va.), O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), McMahon (D-Conn.), Sparkman (D-Ala.) and Taylor (D-Idaho).

Taylor subsequently proposed that the call for the United Nations Charter conference be directed toward providing the U.N. with "a legislative branch to enact law, an executive branch with all power necessary to enforce law and a judicial branch to interpret law." Taylor said Senators Chavez (D-NM) and Johnston (D-SC) joined him in sponsorship of this proposal.

Protested Export License Granted

WASHINGTON July 9 (AP) — The Commerce Department today granted a special export license for shipment of petroleum products to Russia only a few holurs after Chairman Weichel (R-Ohio) of the House merchant Marine Committee demanded the license be refused.

Under Secretary of Commerce William C. Foster acknowledged his office issued the license after Weichel had telephoned him yesterday to halt the movement of 248,000 barrels of petroleum now being loaded aboard three American-owned tankers on the West Coast.

Foster's announcement was made calmly before the Merchant Marine Committee in response to a question by Rep. Willis Bradley (R-Calif).

Obviously taken by surprise and apparently angry, Weichel demanded to know whether Foster had received the message "on behalf of the committee."

Foster: "That's right, sir."

Weichel: "What did you do about it?"

Foster said that it had been taken "under consideration."

Earlier, he had declared, in response to questions, that the department planned to continue to issue export licenses.

In his prepared statement, he said "we are anxious to preserve and develop a healthy domestic industry, but it will still be necessary to import in order further to supplement our own production."

A.P. Corrects Report

PITTSBURGH, July 9 (AP)—Jimmy Sander, 144, of Warren, O., won a split decision in six hard-fought rounds against Jack Besselman, 147, Pittsburgh, in the Zivic Arena boxing bouts last night.

Sander caught the nod of Referee Ernie Sesto and Judge Willie Davies, while Judge Bob Brownlee voted for Besselman.

Protection Asked For Siegel's Friend

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., July 9 (AP)—Police Chief Charles H. Anderson said today he had cabled French Police requesting protection for Virginia Hill, local party girl in whose Beverly Hills home racketeer Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel was slain last June 20.

Anderson said he had been informed by an "underground source" that a "pair of assassins" had left early this week for Paris with instructions to "take care" of Miss Hill, friend of Siegel and who was known locally as an heiress because of the lavish champagne parties she gave.

The police chief said he had cabled the request to the Paris Police Prefecture, and followed it up with an airmail letter listing a number of questions he wants them to ask Miss Hill.

willing to be wrong, and we hope Fred Hartley is right," Tierney said.

"I hope we'll be able to pick comfortable cells.. We'll probably have good companionship."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio), the Senate sponsor of the Act, had no comment on. Hartley's assertions. When questioned last night about the agreement "by-passing" the law, he observed that agreements under which employers and workers would settle their own disputes was "exactly what the law was aimed at."

Hartley declared the "free enterprise system is in danger" when a small group "under the guise of collective bargaining, can reach an agreement that affects the lives of 140,000,000 Americans."

Waive Operators' Right

In addition, he said, the mine operators have "thrown away the legal protections given them by the new law" by agreeing to settle disputes by industry machinery exclusively. This waives the operators' right to sue for damages in case of illegal work stoppage.

"This agreement constitutes an irreparable blow to the economic stability of the country," Hartley added.

But the contract, giving great gains and few obligations to the miners, now has been signed by producers of all but 5 or 10 per cent of the nation's soft coal.

The Southerners abandoned their last-ditch fight after a two-hour session.

Henry F. Warden, chief negotiator, announced that directors of the Southern Association voted unanimously to authorize the 13 affiliated associations to close the deal on Lewis' take-it-or-leave it terms.

This was an even greater victory for Lewis than appeared on the surface, for the Association yesterday informed Lewis it wished to sign up as a unit instead of piece by piece. Lewis—who already had indicated he was out to break up the All-South Employers' Group—rejected this flatly.

"It might be possible to have some of the mines in operation tomorrow," Warden told reporters.

He estimated that 150,000 workers would be covered by the Southern signatures—a higher estimate than given by most industry sources but one which emphasized the sweeping nature of Lewis' conquest.

There was one snag, however. Three of the sub-associations, representing mines in Virginia, Alabama and Tennessee, were described as temporarily withholding signature because they feared collision with state laws regulating the closed shop and dues check-up.

10 Groups Sign

The 10 groups which signed were: The Pocahontas Coal Operators Associations, Willimson Coal Operators Association, Kanawha Coal Operators Association, Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, Winding Gulf Operators Association, and Green-Brief Coal Operators Association, (all these associations are in West Virginia except that Pocahontas also has mines in Virginia); and the Big Sandy and Hazard Coal Operators Association, of Kentucky.

The three temporarily withholding signatures are the Virginia Coal Operators Association, Alabama Mining Institute and Southern Appalachian (Tennessee) Coal Operators Association.

Besides these, there were actual holdout companies in five states—Colorado, Washington, Kansas, Iowa and New Mexico. But all eight states produce only about 40 million tons annually, or well under 10 per cent of the nation's annual output.

The Sportlight

no one around who is even close to his class.

"The Zale-Graziano fight should be one of the best of many years. I wouldn't miss it for a lot. For you have here many unusual turns. Graziano is younger, stronger and a much harder puncher. Zale is no longer a kid. He is a good boxer and a fair puncher. He is certainly as game a fellow as I ever saw in the ring, and I am looking back to some pretty game fellows I met—Harry Greb, Jack Dempsey, Tom Gibbons, Johnny Risko and one or two others. I hit Greb one night with a full right in the pit of the stomach. I stepped aside to let him fall. Before I knew what had happened he was on top of me trying to murder me.

"I doubt very much that Zale can take the beating he took in New York and come back to win. That could hardly happen twice. But, I can't believe that Graziano can land as many rights as he did last year. No good boxer should be hit that often with a right hand.

"You also wonder just how much Graziano will be thinking of meeting a fellow who took that much beating and still had enough left to stop him with a punch. I wouldn't say that Rocky had any record amount of imagination. But, a thing like that is something you don't forget too quickly. You still remember it, even when you have the other fellow groggy.

"I know Zale can take a punch. In fact, he has proved that he could take a flock of solid blows on the chin — and still have something left. Graziano has yet to prove he can take a solid punch from a fighter in his own class. This is the big advantage Zale has. Physically, Graziano has all the better of the argument. He is a much harder puncher. He is younger and rougher. But, he hasn't had a real fight in nearly a year. His two warm-ups were nothing. They won't help him too much.

"With so many varying angles, this is a tough fight to pick. I know many smart students, who picked Zale before, now like Graziano, although Zale won. But, from what I know at this point, I'd have to string with the fighter I know won't be afraid, no matter what happens. This is Zale."

This is about as good a summing up as one can get.

As Tunney points out it isn't likely that Zale can take that same beating again, and come back to win. But, being smart as well as dead game, he should be better prepared defensively in this second meeting, unless time has called him over the hill.

Protection Asked For Siegel's Friend

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., July 9 (AP)—Police Chief Charles H. Anderson said today he had cabled French Police requesting protection for Virginia Hill, local party girl in whose Beverly Hills home racketeer Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel was slain last June 20.

Anderson said he had been informed by an "underground source" that a "pair of assassins" had left early this week for Paris with instructions to "take care" of Miss Hill, friend of Siegel and who was known locally as an heiress because of the lavish champagne parties she gave.

The police chief said he had cabled the request to the Paris Police Prefecture, and followed it up with an airmail letter listing a number of questions he wants them to ask Miss Hill.

willing to be wrong, and we hope Fred Hartley is right," Tierney said.

"I hope we'll be able to pick comfortable cells.. We'll probably have good companionship."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio), the Senate sponsor of the Act, had no comment on Hartley's assertions. When questioned last night about the agreement "by-passing" the law, he observed that agreements under which employers and workers would settle their own disputes was "exactly what the law was aimed at."

Hartley declared the "free enterprise system is in danger" when a small group "under the guise of collective bargaining, can reach an agreement that affects the lives of 140,000,000 Americans."

Waive Operators' Right

In addition, he said, the mine operators have "thrown away the legal protections given them by the new law" by agreeing to settle disputes by industry machinery exclusively. This waives the operators' right to sue for damages in case of illegal work stoppage.

"This agreement constitutes an irreparable blow to the economic stability of the country," Hartley added.

But the contract, giving great gains and few obligations to the miners, now has been signed by producers of all but 5 or 10 per cent of the nation's soft coal.

The Southerners abandoned their last-ditch fight after a two-hour session.

Henry F. Warden, chief negotiator, announced that directors of the Southern Association voted unanimously to authorize the 13 affiliated associations to close the deal on Lewis' take-it-or-leave it terms.

This was an even greater victory for Lewis than appeared on the surface, for the Association yesterday informed Lewis it wished to sign up as a unit instead of piece by piece. Lewis—who already had indicated he was out to break up the All-South Employers' Group—rejected this flatly.

"It might be possible to have some of the mines in operation tomorrow," Warden told reporters.

He estimated that 150,000 workers would be covered by the Southern signatures—a higher estimate than given by most industry sources but one which emphasized the sweeping nature of Lewis' conquest.

There was one snag, however. Three of the sub-associations, representing mines in Virginia, Alabama and Tennessee, were described as temporarily withholding signature because they feared collision with state laws regulating the closed shop and dues check-up.

10 Groups Sign

The 10 groups which signed were: The Pocahontas Coal Operators Associations, Willimson Coal Operators Association, Kanawha Coal Operators Association, Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, Winding Gulf Operators Association, and Green-Brief Coal Operators Association, (all these associations are in West Virginia except that Pocahontas also has mines in Virginia); and the Big Sandy and Hazard Coal Operators Association, of Kentucky.

The three temporarily withholding signatures are the Virginia Coal Operators Association, Alabama Mining Institute and Southern Appalachian (Tennessee) Coal Operators Association.

Besides these, there were actual holdout companies in five states—Colorado, Washington, Kansas, Iowa and New Mexico. But all eight states produce only about 40 million tons annually, or well under 10 per cent of the nation's annual output.

no one around who is even close to his class.

"The Zale-Graziano fight should be one of the best of many years. I wouldn't miss it for a lot. For you have here many unusual turns. Graziano is younger, stronger and a much harder puncher. Zale is no longer a kid. He is a good boxer and a fair puncher. He is certainly as game a fellow as I ever saw in the ring, and I am looking back to some pretty game fellows I met—Harry Greb, Jack Dempsey, Tom Gibbons, Johnny Risko and one or two others. I hit Greb one night with a full right in the pit of the stomach. I stepped aside to let him fall. Before I knew what had happened he was on top of me trying to murder me.

"I doubt very much that Zale can take the beating he took in New York and come back to win. That could hardly happen twice. But, I can't believe that Graziano can land as many rights as he did last year. No good boxer should be hit that often with a right hand.

"You also wonder just how much Graziano will be thinking of meeting a fellow who took that much beating and still had enough left to stop him with a punch. I wouldn't say that Rocky had any record amount of imagination. But, a thing like that is something you don't forget too quickly. You still remember it, even when you have the other fellow groggy.

"I know Zale can take a punch. In fact, he has proved that he could take a flock of solid blows on the chin — and still have something left. Graziano has yet to prove he can take a solid punch from a fighter in his own class. This is the big advantage Zale has. Physically, Graziano has all the better of the argument. He is a much harder puncher. He is younger and rougher. But, he hasn't had a real fight in nearly a year. His two warm-ups were nothing. They won't help him too much.

"With so many varying angles, this is a tough fight to pick. I know many smart students, who picked Zale before, now like Graziano, although Zale won. But, from what I know at this point, I'd have to string with the fighter I know won't be afraid, no matter what happens. This is Zale."

This is about as good a summing up as one can get.

As Tunney points out it isn't likely that Zale can take that same beating again, and come back to win. But, being smart as well as dead game, he should be better prepared defensively in this second meeting, unless time has called him over the hill.

Frostburg Elks To Send 17 Boys To Camp Ritchie

District B.P.O.E. Sponsors Outing

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, July 9 — Frostburg No. 470, B. P. O. Elks, will complete plans during this week to send 17 boys to Camp Ritchie, Md., from July 20 through July 26 for a week's outing under auspices of the Youths' Advisory Commission of the Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia Elks Association. Fourteen boys have already been selected and three morew ill be named before the final physical examinations are given Sunday, July 13, at the Elks Home, East Main street, by Dr. W. O. McLane.

All expenses attached to the outing, including transportation to and from Camp Ritchie will be paid by the local lodge. Articles which each boy will be required to take on the trap are: one sheet, one pillow case, one cake soap, two towels, tooth brush and tooth paste, pair of play shoes, four pair of socks, two sets of underwear, onep air of dungarees or long pants, one sweater, two shirts and a swimming suit.

The articles which are optional include camera, knife, athletic equipment, stationery and stamps, musical instruments, sun glasses and a raincoat.

The daily routine of the boys while in camp will under direction of a group of experienced counsellors. The government hospital at the camp will be available for any serious accidents and first aid will be furnished by the councellors.

Any parents or friends wishing to spend any time at the camp can do so by making reservations ahead of time. These fees will be small. To make reservations contact or write Marion B. Pryor, Officers Club, Camp Ritchie, Md.

Each Elk lodge in Maryland will send boys to the camp.

Marriage Announced

Miss Harriet Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald, Athens, Ga., and Russell Inskeep, Bel Air, Md., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inskeep, Barton, were married June 17 in a double ring ceremony solemnized in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Athens, with Rev. David Cady Wright, Jr., pastor, officiating.

The attendants were Miss Jean Miller, sister of the bride, and J. M. McRae, both of Athens.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a soft blue silk shantung suit. Her hat was a small crownless Panama model, trimmed with matching ribbon. She carried a white satin prayer book showered with stephanotis and topped with a white orchid.

The maid of honor wore a two-piece gray model with navy accessories and carried a garden bouquet in shades of pink.

The altar of the church was decorated with stately white gladoli, snapdragons, and stephanotis, framed on each side by white tapers in seven branched candelabra.

A program of nuptial music was presented during the ceremony by Horace Heidler, organist.

The bride is a graduate of Perry County High School and attended the University of Georgia where she was a member of the Kappa Delta Sorority.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Barton High School, class of '39, and from the Catherman's Business School, Cumberland, class of '40. He served three years as a Marine pilot in World War II. He is now employed by the Government Arsenal at Edgewood, Md.

The couple left for a short honeymoon in the Carolinas following the ceremonies.

They will make their home on Broadway Street, Bel Air.

Franklin Youth Held For Keyser Bicycle Thefts

18-Year-Old Admits Taking Four Wheels

By MRS. JOSEPH H. TAYLOR

KEYSER, W. Va., July 9 — Charles Thompson, age 18, Franklin, Md., is being held in Mineral County Jail following his arrest last night by Chief of Police Hanlin of Westernport, on a charge of the theft of four bicycles from Keyser.

Thompson was arrested when he tried to sell one of the bicycles for $3 in Westernport. One bicycle was stolen from Neil Mills, 507 St. Cloud Street, and sold for $10; another was rented from Mrs. Mary F. Mongold, Spring Street, Keyser, and never returned; the other two were stolen from Richard Wensell and Leroy Metz, on Water Street. The Metz bicycle was dismantled in order to repair the Wensell boy's bicycle, and the remaining parts were thrown into George's Creek.

Thompson has confessed the theft of the four bicycles, and is being held for action of the State authorities.

Crash Drivers Fined

Garland Loy, Augusta, W. Va., and Maxwell Whipp, Burlington, pleaded guilty to motor charges preferred by West Virginia State Trooper L. D. Proudfoot after an accident near the intersection of the Hedgesville road and Route 50 yesterday.

Loy was fined $10 and costs for passing an intersection and Whipp was fined the same amount for failing to stop at an intersection in a hearing before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle in Keyser.

The wreck occurred when Loy, driving a car, attempted to pass a taxicab from Washington. Whipp, who was driving a truck, entered the highway and collided with the car. No one was injured but considenable damage was done to both cars.

Moose Steward Fined $300

A hearing was held this afternoon before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle for James Bonney, Piedmont Moose Club steward, on a charge of illegal possession of liquor and two slot machines. He was fined $300 and costs amounting to $10.20.

Hearings for Scott Dawson, Piedmont Eagles Club steward, Page Entler, Keyser Moose Club steward, and Sylvia Piccolo, Piedmont American Legion Club, have been continued until next Wednesday at the request of Lester Reynolds, Attorney for Entler, and Arthur Arnold, attorney for Piccolo.

Stolen Car Drivers Held

A hearing for Dory Ferrebee, 578 Newton Street, Keyser, who was arrested Monday night after he wrecked the Workman Market delivery truck on North Main Street, was held this afternoon by Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle. He was fined $100, or 60 days in jail on the charge of drunkenness, and held for action of the Grand Jury under a $500 bond, on the charge of unlawful possession of the truck.

Stanley McCloud was also given a hearing before Justice Madalyn Bazzle, charged with the theft of a truck. He was ordered held under a $500 bond for action of the grand jury.

Three Men Fined

Ralph B. Richie, Bergton, Va., William J. Richie, also of Bergton, Va., and James Galloway, Moreland, Ky., who were arrested Monday evening by City Police on charges of permitting an unlicensed person to drive an automobile, driving without a license and drunkenness, respectively, were all fined $10 by City Clerk A. A. Jordan.

Maxwell Haines, Lincoln Street, paid a $10 fine for prowling at the home of Newton B. Carskadon, Radical Hill, on Monday evening.

Harry V. Lear, Vienna, Va., paid a $2 forfeit on a charge of running through a red light. One other traffic violator paid a fine of $1 this morning.

Keyser Residents Injured

Frank Snider, who was called to Washington Monday night following an automobile wreck in which his son and daughter in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Snider, and their two-year old daughter, Ann Katheryn, Keyser, were involved, returned to Keyser today.

The accident, a head-on collision, occurred at 2 p. m. Monday near Warrenton, Va. The Sniders were taken to a Washington hospital.

Dr. Snider, a local dentist, is said to have received a punctured lung and possible fractures of the arm and leg.

Mrs. Snider was to be operated on this afternoon in an attempt to remove a piece of glass which entered her eye when the sunglasses she was wearing were broken in the crash.

The little girl is uninjured. Further details of the accident could not be learned.

Police Recover Stolen Articles In Tucker Homes

By HELEN COLLETT

PARSONS, W. Va., July 9—West Virginia State Police have uncovered $400 more in loot brought to Tucker County by a former resident who is now being held in custody of Delaware police in connection with a $1,500 robbery of a hardware store in Milton, Del.

Sgt. J. M. Johnson, of the Elkins Detachment, Cpl. R. C. Roger, of Department Headquarters, and Trooper Charles Burke, of the Thomas Detachment, who are investigating the case, found the stolen articles in homes in Canaan Valley and Benbush, which were part of a number of articles brought here by George Alan Pase in June.

$1127 worth of goods had been found by the investigators a few weeks ago and officers stated that there is still between $150 and $200 in electrical supplies, hardware and garage equipment missing.

In recovering the stolen goods, other property than that taken from the Milton hardware store has been found and authorities have not yet traced its origin. Pase is said by officers to have brought to this section, a new Delco system which has been found in Mackeysville and a gasoline driven saw which was in operation when uncovered at Red Run. Pase sold both pieces of equipment April 1 for $130 and these were later resold.

Pase was released earlier this year from an Oregon prison where he served a term for 27 breaking and entering charges.

Building Project Started

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Smith, Davis, have started the erecting of nine tourist cabins and one larger home on a twelve lot piece of ground in the Davis City limits near the Blackwater Filling station.

The cabins will be of native river rock and will have three rooms and a bath. The larger dwelling which will be used by Mr. and Mrs. Smith will have seven rooms and two baths. The construction of the cabins is now underway and is expected to be completed during the summer months.

Announce Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Dana Lee Deane, Buckhannon, announced the marriage of their only daughter, Roberta Lea, to James P. Caynor, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Caynor, Sr., Elkins.

The marriage was held Saturday, June 28, in the Dundalk Presbyterian Church at four o'clock with Rev. Benjamin A. Coleman, pastor of the church, conducting the double ring service in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length pastel dress of blue crepe with which she wore a lace open-crown picture hat and lace mitts. She also wore a string of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom, and completed her attire with a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Clement Kropff, Dundalk, aunt of the bride, was her matron of honor and wore a pink dress of street length with white accessories and a corsage of pink and blue summer flowers interspersed with baby's breath.

Clement Kropff, Dundalk, served the bridegroom as best man. Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Nodonly, uncle and aunt of the bride, with the bride's table centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with the traditional bride and groom.

Mr. Caynor is a graduate of Buckhannon-Upshur High School, class of 1944, and attended West Virginia Wesleyan College. She is now employed as a secretary in the bookkeeping department of the Berry Insurance Brokers in Baltimore, Md. She is well known in Parsons where she was with her father when he was editor of the Tucker Democrat two years ago.

Mr. Caynor, a graduate of Coalton High School, attended West Virginia Wesleyan College and served for 21 months overseas with the 13th Army Air Force in the Pacific. He is now employed by General Motors in Dundalk where they will reside upon their return from a brief honeymoon.

75 Children To Attend Camp

A. L. Deiss, secretary of the State Y. M. C. A., and director of the summer camp at Camp Horseshoe in Tucker County, stated that approximately 75 crippled children from the Martinsburg, Clarksburg, Huntington, Wheeling, Charleston and Bluefield areas are expected to arrive on Monday, July 14 to spend a week at the camp. Chester A. Marshall, Buckhannon, will be in charge. Other instructors will be accompanied here by the youths.

Does Stomach Gas and Bloat Make You Feel Miserable?

If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in freeing your stomach from this nervous distress. It works this way:

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Franklin Youth Held For Keyser Bicycle Thefts

18-Year-Old Admits Taking Four Wheels

By MRS. JOSEPH H. TAYLOR

KEYSER, W. Va., July 9 — Charles Thompson, age 18, Franklin, Md., is being held in Mineral County Jail following his arrest last night by Chief of Police Hanlin of Westernport, on a charge of the theft of four bicycles from Keyser.

Thompson was arrested when he tried to sell one of the bicycles for $3 in Westernport. One bicycle was stolen from Neil Mills, 507 St. Cloud Street, and sold for $10; another was rented from Mrs. Mary F. Mongold, Spring Street, Keyser, and never returned; the other two were stolen from Richard Wensell and Leroy Metz, on Water Street. The Metz bicycle was dismantled in order to repair the Wensell boy's bicycle, and the remaining parts were thrown into George's Creek.

Thompson has confessed the theft of the four bicycles, and is being held for action of the State authorities.

Crash Drivers Fined

Garland Loy, Augusta, W. Va., and Maxwell Whipp, Burlington, pleaded guilty to motor charges preferred by West Virginia State Trooper L. D. Proudfoot after an accident near the intersection of the Hedgesville road and Route 50 yesterday.

Loy was fined $10 and costs for passing an intersection and Whipp was fined the same amount for failing to stop at an intersection in a hearing before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle in Keyser.

The wreck occurred when Loy, driving a car, attempted to pass a taxicab from Washington. Whipp, who was driving a truck, entered the highway and collided with the car. No one was injured but considenable damage was done to both cars.

Moose Steward Fined $300

A hearing was held this afternoon before Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle for James Bonney, Piedmont Moose Club steward, on a charge of illegal possession of liquor and two slot machines. He was fined $300 and costs amounting to $10.20.

Hearings for Scott Dawson, Piedmont Eagles Club steward, Page Entler, Keyser Moose Club steward, and Sylvia Piccolo, Piedmont American Legion Club, have been continued until next Wednesday at the request of Lester Reynolds, Attorney for Entler, and Arthur Arnold, attorney for Piccolo.

Stolen Car Drivers Held

A hearing for Dory Ferrebee, 578 Newton Street, Keyser, who was arrested Monday night after he wrecked the Workman Market delivery truck on North Main Street, was held this afternoon by Justice of the Peace Madalyn Bazzle. He was fined $100, or 60 days in jail on the charge of drunkenness, and held for action of the Grand Jury under a $500 bond, on the charge of unlawful possession of the truck.

Stanley McCloud was also given a hearing before Justice Madalyn Bazzle, charged with the theft of a truck. He was ordered held under a $500 bond for action of the grand jury.

Three Men Fined

Ralph B. Richie, Bergton, Va., William J. Richie, also of Bergton, Va., and James Galloway, Moreland, Ky., who were arrested Monday evening by City Police on charges of permitting an unlicensed person to drive an automobile, driving without a license and drunkenness, respectively, were all fined $10 by City Clerk A. A. Jordan.

Maxwell Haines, Lincoln Street, paid a $10 fine for prowling at the home of Newton B. Carskadon, Radical Hill, on Monday evening.

Harry V. Lear, Vienna, Va., paid a $2 forfeit on a charge of running through a red light. One other traffic violator paid a fine of $1 this morning.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, July 9—One of Marion Davies' first pictures was "Belle of New York", a successful William A. Brady New York play. She always hoped, after the talkies came in, to remake it, but she retired from the screen and sold the rights to MGM.

Barbara Hutton

Now June Allyson will be starred in "Belle of New York". That, I know, will interest Marion, because she always expressed interest in June. With June will be Peter Lawford, and this duet will certainly please the bobby soxers.

With the exception of new music added to the score there will be very little difference in the original play. It will retain all its charm and quaintness.

Lewis Stone might be a very good choice to play Frank Bacon, although he is a much bigger man than I remember the delightful veteran of the theatre to be.

The two gents most vitally interested—I mean Director Lloyd Bacon and Producer Robert Golden, are just about convinced that Lewis Stone is the perfect choice for Bacon's biography, "Barnstorming".

Well, they certainly have the right director in mind. Lloyd Bacon is Frank's son.

Chit-chat: Freddie McEvoy, international playboy, is being seen everywhere in New York with Bea Courtright, his first wife.

Freddie tried very hard to marry Barbara Hutton, but when he didn't succeed, he decided to reconcile his second wife, Irene Wrightsman, then that fell through. Apparently that boy is going to get married, or remarried, or else.

Could be he may have a chance with Barbara again, if its true that she and Prince Troubetskoy are at the breaking point.

The marriage of ex-King Carol of Roumania and redhaired Magda Lupescu, as she lay near death in Rio, reveals an interesting inside story of their romance.

They first met when they were children. He was the heir to the Roumanian throne, and she the daughter of a palace gardener. Even then he was attracted toward the beautiful child.

Hollywood has never thought up a script more dramatic than this true story, which, I'll bet my last dollar, will be made into a movie.

Tyrone Power was such a success as a goodwill ambassador when he visited South America, that he's going to take a trip around the world in his own plane. In the middle of August he will circle the globe. Europe, Africa and Asia will be included in Ty's itinerary.

If Nellie Bly took a trip around the world in 80 days, Ty could do it in eight days, and that would include stops.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random—The Helmut Dantine-Charlene Wrightsman romance is being carried on via trans-Atlantic telephone. When she gets back, despite parental objection, you may expect an announcement.

Paul Douglas, star of "Born Yesterday" and ex-husband of Virginia Fields, is reported recovering from an operation in New York.

Rudy Vallee spiked those rumors of a secret marriage to Mary Ann Nyberg over the telephone, when he told me he wasn't engaged to her and had no plans for marriage.

Macoco, Argentine millionaire, is escorting Ruth Satir about New York. She is a beautiful girl and a singer at the Copacabana. Maybe that's the reason he dropped his $35,000 suit against Kay Williams last week.

Paulette Goddard entertained Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose on her European movie set. The two princesses remained to look at the "rushes" and were fascinated.

Martha Vickers had everyone admiring her smart orange gown when she walked into Ciro's with Michael North. She said it was a bathing suit, over which she wore a white jersey skirt.

Janet Michaels will not admit that she is marrying George Brent when he gets back in January, but I happen to know that George told friends he expects to move to the Neil McCarthy ranch and take Janet with him as his bride.

Max Krindler, of "21" fame, will meet Dorris Lilly in France. This looks serious.

Marie Osborne, the original "Baby Marie" of "Our Gang" comedies, has been signed by Paramount for Phyllis Calvert's next picture.

Leonard Picker, Eagle-Lion producer, will be sued for divorce. His wife will charge when he went to Mexico to make "Adventures of Casanova" he took the title too seriously.

The Errol Flynns gave Sara Hamilton a birthday party on Sunday with a cake and all the trimmings. No, Sara won't tell how old she is. Well, neither will I.

At the Al Halls on the Fourth of July, Clark Gable came with Iris Bynum. It was a very nice party.

Joseph Schenck gave a small but delightful dinner for Louis B. Mayer on the Fourth, to celebrate L. B's birthday.

That's all today.

The name Jean, Jeanne or Joanne means "grace of the Lord."

Radio in Review

By JOHN CROSBY

"Life In The Country"

John Crosby

Life in the country presents a number of strenuous complications for a man with a radio. To the big city dweller, static, at least serious static, is something that used to happen in the Model T days of radio. Well, I'm prepared to offer documentary proof that static is still with us. The particular hill in Bucks County on which this is being written is a rendezvous point for all the thunderheads in eastern Pennsylvania. They gather directly overhead to talk things over, sounding like a platoon of H. V. Kaltenborns. The conversation reverberates for miles and even Ralph Edwards can't outshout them.

Thunderstorms must create a lot of confusion among the soap opera fans out here. A housewife could easily miss a whole string from "Today's Children" right through "Young Widder Brown." Stella Dallas could break her other leg and Ma Perkins could land in Sing Sing and how would the housewife know? However, listening to the radio through this bedlam of static is not entirely a curse. You get a few fragments here and there, a sort of weird and wonderful parody of radio. The other night listening to a murder yarn, one of the mobsters caught a string of machine gun bullets right in the middle of his triple-action Rinso. And Alcatraz was described as "so white, so clean, so dainty." You'd be surprised how static improves some programs.

EVERYTHING BUT GRANDMA: Somewhere about the middle of "Gramps" (NBC 8 p. m. E. D. T. Wednesdays), the listeners might pardonably get the impression that he has six or seven radio programs on all at once. This new program has been assembled out of snippets from all the other shows about families and about small towns. The first episode contained enough plot to stock a summer series or possibly a three-generation novel by Edna Ferber.

"Gramps," you will be surprised to learn, is a lovable old scamp. It would violate a number of cherished traditions if he weren't. "Gramps" not only adheres to tradition, he enlarges on it a little. He is a scamp in two or three different ways. (You get extra helpings of everything on this show.) He is a monstrous liar; he also is a monumental nuisance and he gets everything beautifully balled up. Nevertheless, the kids love it.

The kids, of which there are many, are the Palmer youngsters and they come in all convenient sizes, an arrangement calculated to appeal to all tastes. I'll enumerate them if you like and you can take your choice. There are Babs, who is sixteen and a little Corliss Archer if ever there was one; her boy friend, Ellsworth, who is the spitting image of Henry Aldrich; Sandy, aged twelve, and Penny, aged four. This is the big family-sized package, this show.

One the first program, Gramps, the old skeezix, had just hit the Palmer household and before he could say, "Well, bust my bustle" or anyway before he said it more than twelve times, he had the entire community by the ears. Somehow he got mixed up in a private feud between Poppa Palmer and Mayor Appleton; he'd driven a baseball clean through the Mayor's window at City Hall; he'd disrupted a date between Babs and Ellsworth; he'd flushed a crooked municipal official; and he got Poppa Palmer elected Chairman of the Civic Planning Commission. Have I forgotten anything? Oh, yes, he took all the kids to the Sugar Bowl for sodas and they drank him under the table.

I don't know what else to tell you about "Gramps" except that it sounds like "You Can't Take it With You" cleaned up for radio. The big difference is that each member of the family in the Kaufman-Hart play was violently eccentric, whereas the Palmers are so normal they're downright unnatural, if that makes any sense.

To date no actual rent increases allowable under the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, which took effect this month, have been reported at the local office of the OPA Rent Control division, according to Caleb J. White, local administrator.

Numerous applications by which landlords can report rent increase agreements with tenants to the area rent office have been distributed, however, and reports are expected within a few days.

The act provides for a 15 per cent increase in rent, if the tenant agrees, based on a lease extending beyond December 31, 1948. The landlord must enter into such a contract before December 31 of this year. The lease is voluntary with the tenant, and he cannot be evicted for failure to sign or consider it.

Within 15 days after the date of execution of such a lease, a copy of the lease and three copies of the registration of the lease must be filed with the office. Rent increases, however, may become effective as soon as the contract is signed.

No action so far has been disclosed in appointing a local Rent Advisory Board, a body required by the new act.

Spangler Named To Veterans Post

C. William Spangler, Cumberland, who has been affiliated with the Veterans Employment Service of Maryland for three and a half years, has been named assistant veterans employment representative for the state, according to an announcement made yesterday by Director Grafton Lee Brown in Baltimore.

Spangler, who will retain his present office in the State Employment Service office, 146 Union Street, will have Allegany, Garrett, Washington, Frederick, Carroll, Prince Georges, Montgomery and Anne Arundel Counties under his jurisdiction.

It will be Spangler's duty, Brown said, to participate in planning and developing veterans programs by promoting interest of employes and employer groups in the hiring of veterans. He also will act in a liaison capacity between the Veterans Employment Service and federal, state and civic agencies and veterans organizations.

New Labor Law To Be Discussed On Town Meeting

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, July 9—Now that the bill is a law, America's town meeting wants to know "will the Taft - Hartley law improve labor relations in industry?" when it ABC broadcasts from Denver at 8:30 Thursday night.

Included in the panel will be Sen. Joseph Ball of Minnesota, Harold Silver of Denver and Gerhard van Arkel, former general counsel of the national labor relations board.

This broadcast is another in the Town meeting's series of summer touring. Included in the itinerary are several Pacific coast stops.

Gloria Swanson of the silent movie days is to do some vocal acting for radio in the CBS Suspense at 7. It will be "Murder by the Book." . . . Scarlet Queen, new MBS seas adventure series at 7:30 is to switch activities to Honolulu, with a curio shop as the locale on shore.

For the second of the "Rooftops of the City," new CBS summer show at 7:30 depicting life in a metropolis, will have "Dance With Me." . . . Now that she is running the Village store on NBC in the permanent absence of Jack Haley, Eve Arden has picked Victor Mature to do the guesting tomorrow night at 8:30. . . . Family Theater of MBS, in presenting "Some Rain Must Fall," at 9 o'clock, has picked Jimmy Gleason to act as host and William Lundigan and Joan Caulfield to do the principal roles.

A CBS broadcast from the N.E.A. convention at Cincinnati at 4:45 will have Mrs. Pearl A. Wanamaker, president, and Richard B. Kennan.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our fiends and neighbors, the Kingsley Methodist Church, and Capt. Robert French, Memorial Bible Class of the Kingsley Methodist Church for their sympathy and kindness during our recent bereavement, the death of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Mary L. Kesler. We also wish to thank those who sent floral tributes and loaned cars for the funeral.
BERNARD L. KESLER and FAMILY.

We take this means of expressing our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends, and neighbors who were so kind to us in our recent bereavement, the death of our beloved mother, Mrs. Delia May Boyce. We also wish to thank Rev. Hazel DeVore, the choir, those who sent flowers, and those who donated the use of their cars for the funeral.
MRS. HAZEL GRIGGS and SISTERS, Kitzmiller, Md.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 20149 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The bill states that the parties were married at Baltimore, Maryland on December 30th, 1944; that no children were born of said marriage, that the defendant deserted and abandoned the plaintiff without just cause or reason and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for over eighteen months and is final and deliberate, and that the separation of the parties is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff is a resident of Allegany County whereas the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 9th day of July, 1947, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Allegany County once a week for four successive weeks, before the 10th day of August, 1947, giving notice to the absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, and warning her to be and appear in this court in person or by solicitor on or before the 26th day of August, 1947, and show cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

ROBERT JACKSON,
Clerk.

SUSIE Q. SMITH — By Linda and Jerry Walter

"Somehow your family doesn't make me feel welcome any more!"

Light Selling Cuts Down Market After 9 Straight Rising Meets

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—Light selling cut down most stock market leaders today after nine straight rising sessions, a record since the boom-bust year of 1929.

Pivotals dipped following early irregularity. Steels rallied around midday but failed to hold. Offerings became insistent approaching the final hour. Dealings then slowed and extreme losses running to 2 or more points were reduced in the majority of instances at the close. Transfers of 1,040,000 shares compared with 1,390,000 Tuesday which were a top since May 19.

On the advancing side at peaks for 1947 were Amerada, up 1 7-8 at 86 7-8 and Allied Chemical 1 at 187. American Woolen added 1 3-8 at 36, Procter & Gamble 7-8 at 64 7-8 and American Can 5-8 at 92 5-8. Modest improvement was retained by Republic Steel, Philip Morris, United Aircraft, Goodyear and Owens-Illinois.

Western Union "A" jumped more than a point in the morning. It finished up 5-8 at 21 5-8.

Texas & Pacific Railway yielded 2 1-2 at 49, Union Pacific 2 at 136 1-2, Norfolk & Western 1 1-2 at 226 1-2, Superior Oil 3 at 123, Publicker 1 at 28 7-8, General Motors 1 3-8 at 58 3-4, Chrysler 1 at 112 3-4, Douglas Aircraft 2 1-4 at 55 1-4, American Telephone 1 7-8 at 156 3-4, Skelly Oil 1 1-2 at 75, Union Carbide 1 3-4 at 107 and American Smelting 1 1-2 at 58 1-4.

In the casualty division were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Deere, Caterpillar Tractor, Sperry, Electric Power & Light, Consolidated Edison, General Electric, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Schenley, International Paper, Gulf Oil, Texas Co., Standard Oil (NJ), Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific.

In the curb Colonial Sand, International Petroleum and Blue Ridge were up a shade. Backward were Barium Steel, Kaiser-Frazer and American Cities Power. Turnover here was 340,000 shares versus 350,000 yesterday.

Gains and losses were in close balance at the final bell with most changes around a point or less. Turnover contracted to $3,480,000 from $4,060,000 Tuesday.

U. S. Governments held steady in the over-the-counter market, the victory loan 2 1-2s of December 1967-'72 remaining at 102 24-32 bid.

Saw Mill Operator Arrested At Big Pool

Brook Bodkin, forestry supervisor, reported yesterday that Lloyd Rockwell, Mercersburg, Pa., was arrested near Big Pool in Washington county, on a charge of failing to register as a forest products operator.

He was given a hearing before Magistrate H. Ross Fite of Hancock, at Clear Spring and instructed to pay the $25 registration fee and $2.40 in trial costs. Bodkin said Rockwell operates a saw mill near Big Pool and had failed to comply with state regulations requiring registration.

Divorces Filed

Simon F. Piper filed a bill of complaint in Circuit Court yesterday seeking a divorce from Anna Mae Piper. The couple married December 30, 1944 and separated December 1, 1945.

Ernest W. Pfaff also entered a suit against Wanda Pfaff, but no details were given.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 20149 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant A VINCULO MATRIMONII. The bill states that the parties were married at Baltimore, Maryland on December 30th, 1944; that no children were born of said marriage, that the defendant deserted and abandoned the plaintiff without just cause or reason and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for over eighteen months and is final and deliberate, and that the separation of the parties is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the plaintiff is a resident of Allegany County whereas the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 9th day of July, 1947, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Allegany County once a week for four successive weeks, before the 10th day of August, 1947, giving notice to the absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, and warning her to be and appear in this court in person or by solicitor on or before the 26th day of August, 1947, and show cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

ROBERT JACKSON, Clerk.

Light Selling Cuts Down Market After 9 Straight Rising Meets

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—Light selling cut down most stock market leaders today after nine straight rising sessions, a record since the boom-bust year of 1929.

Pivotals dipped following early irregularity. Steels rallied around midday but failed to hold. Offerings became insistent approaching the final hour. Dealings then slowed and extreme losses running to 2 or more points were reduced in the majority of instances at the close. Transfers of 1,040,000 shares compared with 1,390,000 Tuesday which were a top since May 19.

On the advancing side at peaks for 1947 were Amerada, up 1 7-8 at 86 7-8 and Allied Chemical 1 at 187. American Woolen added 1 3-8 at 36, Procter & Gamble 7-8 at 64 7-8 and American Can 5-8 at 92 5-8. Modest improvement was retained by Republic Steel, Philip Morris, United Aircraft, Goodyear and Owens-Illinois.

Western Union "A" jumped more than a point in the morning. It finished up 5-8 at 21 5-8.

Texas & Pacific Railway yielded 2 1-2 at 49, Union Pacific 2 at 136 1-2, Norfolk & Western 1 1-2 at 226 1-2, Superior Oil 3 at 123, Publicker 1 at 28 7-8, General Motors 1 3-8 at 58 3-4, Chrysler 1 at 112 3-4, Douglas Aircraft 2 1-4 at 55 1-4, American Telephone 1 7-8 at 156 3-4, Skelly Oil 1 1-2 at 75, Union Carbide 1 3-4 at 107 and American Smelting 1 1-2 at 58 1-4.

In the casualty division were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Deere, Caterpillar Tractor, Sperry, Electric Power & Light, Consolidated Edison, General Electric, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Schenley, International Paper, Gulf Oil, Texas Co., Standard Oil (NJ), Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific.

In the curb Colonial Sand, International Petroleum and Blue Ridge were up a shade. Backward were Barium Steel, Kaiser-Frazer and American Cities Power. Turnover here was 340,000 shares versus 350,000 yesterday.

Quotations for railroad issues wobbled indecisively in the bond market after slanting upward for more than a week.

Gains and losses were in close balance at the final bell with most changes around a point or less. Turnover contracted to $3,480,000 from $4,060,000 Tuesday.

U. S. Governments held steady in the over-the-counter market, the victory loan 2 1-2s of December 1967-'72 remaining at 102 24-32 bid.

Saw Mill Operator Arrested At Big Pool

Brook Bodkin, forestry supervisor, reported yesterday that Lloyd Rockwell, Mercersburg, Pa., was arrested near Big Pool in Washington county, on a charge of failing to register as a forest products operator.

He was given a hearing before Magistrate H. Ross Fite of Hancock, at Clear Spring and instructed to pay the $25 registration fee and $2.40 in trial costs. Bodkin said Rockwell operates a saw mill near Big Pool and had failed to comply with state regulations requiring registration.

Divorces Filed

Simon F. Piper filed a bill of complaint in Circuit Court yesterday seeking a divorce from Anna Mae Piper. The couple married December 30, 1944 and separated December 1, 1945.

Ernest W. Pfaff also entered a suit against Wanda Pfaff, but no details were given.

Tax Exemption Cases Argued In Court Here

Maryland Laws Under Attack

Two schools of thought were clearly portrayed yesterday in Circuit Court, as six local attorneys argued the legality of county tax exemptions granted three major Allegany County manufacturing corporations.

The hearing climaxed suits brought by James H. Reed, taxpayer, Allegany Street, against the County Commissioners of Allegany County and the Kelly Springfield Tire Company; the County Commissioners and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company and the County Commissioners and Celanese Corporation of America.

Attorneys for Reed are Clarence Lippel and David Kauffman, while William C. Walsh represents the Kelly Springfield, Charles Z. Heskett argued for Celanese, Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., is counsel for the Pulp and Paper Company and Lewis M. Wilson is attorney to the County Commissioners.

Attack Local Law

The suits were brought by Reed to determine validity of exemptions from county taxes, granted by County Commissioners to the three companies. The ultimate question to be determined in each case is the constitutionality of Chapter 7, of the Acts of 1931.

This Act provides, "that for the purpose of encouraging the location and extension, and the growth and development of factories, industries, establishments, plants, and the like in Allegany County, Maryland, the County Commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to exempt from county taxes, the land and/or buildings, machinery and tools thereof and therewith used, and/or raw materials and products thereof, for a period of not more than ten years from the date of location and extension of such factories, industries, establishments, plants and the like, and to ratify any contracts heretofore made for the purpose of inducing the location of any factory, industry, establishment or plant to locate in Allegany County, and, when, in the opinion of said County Commissioners the public welfare so requires, to extend the benefits of said exemption for a further period of not more than 10 years."

Cite Purpose of Act

Lippel and Kauffman contend the law as passed was for the purpose of encouraging new industries to locate here, as well as to encourage the expansion of existing industry. They charge that the three plants were already established and that specific exemptions to them under this law are invalid since the exemptions discriminate against other industries and taxpayers.

They further charge that the Kelly has had four exemptions and the Celanese has had three, whereas the act authorizes only two.

Lippel and Kauffman argued that the special act is illegal and void because it violates the Constitutional principles of uniformity and equality provided in the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution and Article 15 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights.

Constitutional Provisions

The 14th Amendment provides, their brief outlines, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privilege or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law." It is this last clause on "equal protection" which Kauffman and Lippel emphasized in their arguments.

The two attorneys for the plaintiff also argue that the Constitution of Maryland provides, in Article 3, Section 14—"the General Assembly shall pass no special law for any case for which provision has been made by an existing general law."

They argue the local law known as Chapter 7, of 1931 is therefore unconstitutional because there is a general law known as Article 81, Section 7, sub-section 23, which provides for exemption of tools, machinery, manufacturing apparatus and equipment used in manufacturing if the County Commissioners pass a resolution or ordinance authorizing such exemption. No such resolution has been passed by the County Commissioners here, Lippel declared, adding, "if such a resolution was passed it would apply to all manufacturers and not just three or four, and would therefore be fair and legal."

Walsh Argues

Arguing the case for the Kelly Springfield Company, Walsh outlined for the Court, the history of the company. He declared the Kelly has not had four exemptions, but has been granted two. He explained this by saying the previous company or corporation which operated the plant here went bankrupt about 10 years ago, after having two county tax exemptions. The present company which was organized to keep the plant operating in Cumberland is now on its second exemption, he explained.

Walsh declared exemption of taxes on tools and machinery was one of the inducements in the agreement to get the Goodyear Company to buy the plant, form a company and operate it. He declared "if we people here in Cumberland declare invalid this exemption now, we are going back on our word and are not keeping faith with those who helped us provide employment for several thousand local citizens."

Economic Factors

Walsh argued that "tax exemptions are merely the relinquishment of legislative powers to tax," and in the case of the local exemptions, that is what has been done, he explained. "Without these three major plants, or without anyone of them," he continued, "the plaintiff and all other taxpayers, would suddenly find that his own property has depreciated in value over-night, and he has lost much more than the few dollars he hopes to save by taxing the industries which provide employment.

"Manufacturing concerns," Walsh continued, "make goods and ship them out of the community. In return for these goods, they bring

Regional Meeting Of Pharmacists To Be Held Here

State Group Will Convene Next Week

The first regional meeting of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association to be held here in 10 years will convene at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, Thursday, July 17, according to Webster K. Edwards, temporary president of the Allegany-Garrett County Pharmaceutical Association and past state president.

Some 100 druggists from throughout Maryland as well as members of the Travelers Auxiliary of the Association, are expected to attend and many of them will come here by special bus.

Walter E. Kennedy, chief of the state Sales Tax Division; Dr. L. M. Cantnor, deputy pure food and drug inspector for the state, and Dr. Robert P. Fishell, Washington, D. C. one of the leading pharmacists in the country, are on the speaking list.

Editor Invited

Dr. R. L. Swain, New York, editor of Drug Topics, a trade magazine, and one of the leaders in his field, has been invited to attend and will speak if he is present, according to Edwards.

Dr. Fishell, an associate editor of the U. S. Pharmacopeia and a member of the committee on revision of the USP, will discuss matters of national interest.

Dr. Cantnor will speak on "Control of Barbituric Acid," and his address will be based on legislation which became effective June 1 after being enacted at the last session of the Legislature.

Kennedy will discuss the state sales tax as it applies to pharmaceutical products.

The meeting will begin at 1 p. m. with luncheon at the Shrine Country Club and the business session and addresses will follow. Dinner will be served at 6 p. m.

Melvin Strawsberger, editor of the Maryland Pharmacist, will be master of ceremonies. Albin A. Hayman, Salisbury, is state president.

Will Meet Tonight

Representatives of pharmaceutical distributors are expected to be present.

Allegany and Garrett County druggists, who now have a temporary organization, are scheduled to meet tonight to make that organization permanent.

Temporary officers besides Edwards are H. C. Lewis, secretary, and F. C. Knepper, treasurer.

Frostburg Guard Recruiting Drive Opens Tonight

Plan To Enlist 160 Local Men

FROSTBURG, July 9 — Recruiting of officers and enlisted men for Company D, first Battalion, 115th Regiment, Maryland National Guard unit being formed here, will begin Thursday night at 7:30 p. m. in the Council Chamber, according to Maj. Howard H. Dickey, battalion commander of Cumberland.

Maj. Dickey told local officials that 160 men can be enlisted in the company, which will be designated as a heavy weapons Infantry unit, and that any young man, past his 17th birthday, who is in good physical condition may enlist. Previous military training is not necessary, but some men with prior training will be needed as instructors and cadre, he said.

Outlining the benefits to the community, Maj. Dickey said the Company will provide part time training, study and recreation for many of the town's young men, and they will be paid for each weekly drill period attended. Pay schedules are based upon regular Army base pay, at the rate of $2.50 for each drill for privates and upward increases according to rank.

In addition, he explained, members will have full use of Armory facilities for recreational purposes and entertainment at all times. Commenting upon the Armory, Maj. Dickey said plans are already underway for the construction of a building and a committee is now conducting surveys for an adequate site.

When the Regiment goes to camp next month for a week of training it is doubtful if the Frostburg unit will be sufficiently equipped or organized to participate, Maj. Dickey said, but those who wish to attend can probably go with Cumberland units. He also said that full Army pay and all expenses are a part of the summer camp program.

Local organizations and civic leaders are co-operating with the plan to organize the Guard company here and obtain an Armory for the town.

Hardy Youth Cuts Leg In Fall On Bottle

Gordon Hardy, 14, 808 Sylvan Avenue, was treated in Allegany Hospital early last night for a puncture wound on the right leg. He told attaches he fell upon a broken bottle.

Roberta Lease, 6-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ruth Lease, 606 Hill Street, was treated in the same hospital yesterday for a severe cut on the right knee. Five stitches were used to close the cut suffered in a fall on the pavement, attaches said.

Ruby Barger, 8, Route 3, was treated in Allegany Hospital last night after she cut her foot on a broken milk bottle.

Chaney Permit Hearing Opened By ICC Examiner

Local Carrier Seeks Additional Routes

A hearing conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of Earl D. Chaney, doing business as the Chaney Transportation Company, 23 Howard Street, for additional motor carrier routes, was held all day yesterday in the federal grand jury room of the Postoffice Building.

Besides Chaney, seven witnesses testified on behalf of the application during the first day of the hearing, which was adjourned until today at 9:30 a. m. Alton R. Smith, Washington, D. C., an examiner for the ICC, is presiding.

Chester E. King, Washington, D. C., counsel for Chaney, indicated that he will call 12 additional witnesses to appear today. Smith said the hearing will probably be continued in Washington next week, unless testimony can be completed today.

Seeks Other Routes

Chaney has applied for additional motor carrier routes in sections of Delaware, the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, and Allegany, Garrett and Washington Counties in Maryland.

Railroads which have filed protests against granting of the application include the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and all railroads in the territory affected by the application, with the exception of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. They are represented by William A. Gunter, local attorney.

Numerous motor carriers who would be affected by Chaney's proposed additional operations have also filed protests. They include members of the joint Northeastern Motor Carrier Association, Inc., and the Interstate Common Carrier Council of Maryland, Inc., represented by Victor G. MacKenzie, Baltimore attorney.

Other motor carriers who would be similarly affected entered their protests at the hearing. Those represented by Spencer J. Money, Washington attorney, are the Cumberland Motor Express Corporation, Charlton Brothers Transportation Company, Inc., Masser Motor Express and the Ward Trucking Corporation.

Peter J. Decker, Cumberland, is representing 13 additional motor carriers intervening to protest the application. They are M. W. Bean, Moorefield, W. Va.; Crites Transfer, Cumberland; Dailey Trucking Company, Westernport; Roger A. Etzler, Frederick; W. R. Fields, Chambersburg, Pa.; H. L. Grove, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Maryland Motor Lines, Inc., Cumberland; Maryland Transportation Company, Frederick; Morris Motor Express, Inc., city; Charles W. Karper, Chambersburg; William O. Redman, Petersburg, W. Va.; Rockwell Brothers, Mercersburg, Pa., and West Virginia Motor Express, Clarksburg.

Smith Is Witness

Among witnesses who appeared yesterday was H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, who said he is in favor of securing any additional transportation facilities which will improve business conditions and make for a more progressive community.

Others who testified included Lewis Q. Cowherd, manufacturing representative; Martin L. Johnson, food broker; Wesley E. Taylor of the Taylor Lumber Company; and John S. Zolvik, accountant, all of Cumberland.

They said they believed more adequate and expeditious motor carrier service would be available if the application were granted, adding that some carrier should be granted the service outlined in the application. The proposed routes would augment rail carrier service, it was stated.

Chaney's counsel said he planned to call representatives of the Buchanan Lumber Company, Queen City Dairy, Inc., Big Savage Refractories, and the General Textile Mills plant at Lonaconing among other witnesses today.

Law's Strong Arm Upholds Its Post; Lamp, That Is

The strong arm of the law showed itself last night in down town Cumberland when a guardian of the peace maintained a successful vigil at his post (a tottering lamp post) and kept the pole from falling into the street.

Summoned when a street light started to lean hazardly into North Mechanic Street after a pedestrian identified as Lester McGill had started its downward trend by leaning against it, City Police Officer Arthur Kennell hurried to the scene and held the post upright for an hour and five minutes.

A short time after Kennell assumed his duties a tow rope was secured from Police Headquarters and, under the direction of Thomas F. Conlon, was tied to the post and looped around a parking meter on the opposite side of the street. A local youth, Leonard Winebrenner, was stationed on the other end and instructed to pull the lamp post into the street if it started to fall to keep it from smashing the store windows behind it.

Aided by an onlooker, Henry Schmeer, the jovial cop with multitudinous verbal aids from the crowd that gathered, kept the pole from crashing into the street, while waiting for the Potomac Edison emergency car to arrive.

The post, which probably had been bumped by a truck earlier in the day and the cast iron base cracked, was guyed to buildings along the west side of the street by the repairman.

Eastbound traffic on North Mechanic between Frederick and Baltimore streets was routed up Frederick to Liberty Street during the vigil. Traffic was normal by 11 o'clock.

Cumberland Photographer Chosen To Go On Expedition To Africa

Keith Sisk Slated To Leave This Fall

A Cumberland man who became interested in photography as a hobby several years ago will leave New York sometime between September 15 and October 1 as one of four photographers on the Gatti-Hallicrafters Expedition to the legendary Mountains of the Moon in Africa.

Keith Sisk, 306 Bedford Street, supervisor of photography at the Allegany Ballistics Plant of the Hercules Powder Company, got his chance to become a member of the expedition by winning over 14,000 contestants, the True Magazine for Men contest to select a photographer, camp assistant and aviator for the exploring party.

The expedition is the result of the merging of the plans of two men—Attilio Gatti, who has directed 10 scientific expeditions and spent 14 years on African soil, and William J. Halligan, president of the Hallicrafters Company, Chicago, and one of the best known pioneers in radio short wave communications.

Hams To Benefit

Halligan, whose Hallicrafters communications equipment will be used on the expedition, the first to be completely electronically equipped to grapple with the age-old secrets of Central and Eastern Africa, is seeking new horizons for ham radio.

On the Mountains of the Moon, now known as the Ruwenzori Range, the expedition will set up new short wave radio links between territorties like the Belgian Congo and the rest of the radio listening world.

Gatti, who became interested in Africa soon after the First World War, has brought a valuable contribution to the world's knowledge of Africa in the fields of zoology, anthropology, ethnography and paleontology through his observations, discoveries and collections. He and Mrs. Gatti, who accompanies him, have written many books and magazine articles about the continent's inhabitants, flora and fauna.

These are some of the expedition's missions which Sisk, as photographer, will cover:

1. Exploration from the air of inaccessible crater lakes and other virgin sections of the Mountains of the Moon.

2. Closed aerial observation of un-

Coal Production Expected To Hit Normal Friday

Officials Say Miners Returning

Miners of District 16 are expected to return to most operations today and production is expected to be on a normal basis by Friday, operators, union officials and railroad spokesmen said last night.

Frank Powers, Frostburg, state mine inspector for this county, said the required inspections which must be made 24 hours before the men return after a shutdown were completed yesterday, and practically all deep mines are ready for production today.

Contracts have been signed with most operators in this area, union spokesmen said, and the men are ready and willing to work. A few operations worked in the Georges Creek and Upper Potomac Regions yesterday, and several strip mines were reported working.

The Geoges Creek Coal Company announced that its three large operations, Waynesburg, Franklin and Pittsburgh mines will resume production today.

The Consolidated Fuel Company also reported that Mine No. 1 at Ocean and Nos. 4 and 10 at Eckhart are ready to start work this morning. Mines No. 17 at Klondyke worked yesterday and will be at normal today.

A number of smaller operations and independently owned units have also signed the new agreements and will return today or tomorrow, it was indicated.

Western Maryland Railway officials said mines in the Davis-Thomas area worked yesterday as did mines in nearby Pennsylvania. Other mines along the Elkins Division are ready to resume this morning and the railroad expects normal production and coal freight movement by Fiday.

B. And O. Buys 10 Mallet Engines From Seaboard

First Delivery Here Scheduled July 15

The first of 10 high-speed Mallet locomotives purchased by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from the Seaboard Airline Railway is expected to be delivered here about July 15, H. F. Wyatt, Cumberland Division superintendent of the B. and O., said yesterday.

Wyatt said the Seaboard Line is Dieselizing and that the Baltimore and Ohio bought 10 of the steam locomotives to be disposed of. They were built in 1935 and 1939.

As soon as the Mallet locomotives are received from the Seaboard, they will be put into the Baltimore and Cumberland shops of the B. and O. for repainting and minor adjustments, and then will be placed in high-speed freight service between Cumberland and Brunswick.

Roy B. White, president of the B. and O., pointed out that this sizeable addition to the railroad's locomotive fleet is a timely move in view of the fact that the B. and O. is doing the biggest peacetime freight business in its history, and that delivery of these Mallets will be completed by August 15.

The freight power of the B. and O will be further augmented in the first quarter of next year when delivery of 20 new 3,000 horsepower Diesel-electric freight locomotives is scheduled. These are now being built by the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors.

The B. and O. has had an historic association with both the Mallet and the Diesel-electric locomotives. The first Mallet to be constructed in this country was designed and built by the B. and O. in 1904 for the hauling of heavy freight trains over mountainous lines. The first Diesel-electric road freight locomotive in the United States made its trial runs over the B. and O. in 1939.

Finan Is Named To Housing Group

Thomas B. Finan, Cumberland attorney, has been named by Gov. Lane with four other men to the Maryland Veterans Housing Commission, authorized by the 1947 General Assembly.

Urging that the commission set to work at once, the Governor also named as members E. Brooke Lee, Silver Spring, chairman; and Henry P. Irr, chairman of the State Planning Commission; Attorney Harry H. Cropper, Salisbury, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph D. Buscher.

Under the law, the commission is directed to make a state-wide survey "to determine areas critically in need of additional temporary and permanent housing accommodations for veterans" and to assist in seeing that needed housing is pushed forward.

All members of the group are veterans of World Wars I and II.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. John Alburtis, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter in Allegany Hospital Wednesday night.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stoner, Cresaptown, in Allegany Hospital Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Shannon, 20 Potomac Street, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a son in Memorial Hospital Wednesday morning.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Ford, Hyndman, Pa., in Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Warren White, 1513 Frederick Street, Wednesday morning in Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Calvert, Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son Wednesday morning in Allegany Hospital.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ferman Lease, Triple Lakes, Tuesday night in Allegany Hospital.

Ward N. Hauger Is Seriously Ill

Ward N. Hauger, well known local jeweler, who resides at 112 North Cedar Street, is reported in a serious condition at Memorial Hospital where he was admitted June 28. Hauger became ill, it was reported, while attending the Shrine convention at Atlantic City, N. J., last month and was in a serious condition when admitted to the hospital. He underwent an operation on June 29.

Rubber Workers Back Committee In Contract Talks

Little Progress Noted By Local 26 Officials

Members of Local 26, United Rubber Workers, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America, CIO, have voted unanimous support to its negotiating committee which is currently seeking to negotiate proposed changes in thel ocal's contract with the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, A. E. Johnson, president, said yesterday.

The vote of confidence was received at meetings held yesterday afternoon for second shift workers and on Tuesday night by first and third trick employes.

The committee, composed of Johnson, Roy E. Davy and R. C. Burkhart, announced it had "little progress to report" as a result of negotiations conducted so far.

Johnson said the committee has gone practically through the preliminary discussions on the contract and expects to complete the general discussion at a meeting to begin today at 10 a. m.

In the course of the talks held during the past few weeks, the union said, a number of points have been listed as satisfactory to both the union and the company while "several issues" have been set aside for further discussion.

They reported there has been "little progress" on some 20 changes the union wishes to incorporate into the working agreement.

Paul Welker, Greensburg, Pa., District 1, URCLPWA representative, will be here later this week to assist the local in the contract negotiations.

The next regular membership meeting of the local will be held Sunday, July 20, at 2:30 p. m. Members will hear a report of progress on the contract at the meeting, Johnson said.

19 Young Men Join Naval Division Here

Nineteen young men of the Cumberland area, including four veterans, have been accepted for membership in the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer.

The veterans are Samuel H. Brown, Ridgeley, W. Va., chief machinist's mate, who served three years in the Navy, including duty in Londonderry, Ireland; Robert H. Whetstone, 154 North Centre Street, watertender second class, who served one year aboard an attack transport in the Pacific; Paul B. Conlon, 7 South Barnard Place, Frostburg, seaman first class, a veteran of one year's Army service; and Paul G. Luteman, 500 Kingsley Street, seaman first class, whose three years of Navy duty included service in the Pacific theater.

Others accepted for the division, all apprentice seamen, are David C. Mersing, 50 McCulloh Street, Frostburg; Louis C. Garner, 523 North Mechanic Street; George A. Herring, Frostburg; James S. Hinkle, 718 Yale Street; George C. Martin, 520 Columbia Avenue; Alfred M. Erling, 850 Sperry Terrace; Paul E. Dunn, 435 Virginia Avenue.

James E. Fisher, Route 1, Ridgeley; Herbert J. Wagner, 111 West Second Street; William B. Yates, Jr., Main Street, Frostburg; Arthur M. Trenton, 51 Spring Street, Keyser, W. Va.; William J. Root, 22 Broadway, Frostburg; Clarence B. Sharer, 214 West Main Street, Frostburg; Barnard E. Sitter, 400 Piedmont Avenue; and William G. Fuller, 619 Sedgwick Street.

Enters Marine Corps

Robert Patrick O'Rourke, 17, son of Mrs. Kathleen O'Rourke, 635 North Centre Street, has enlisted in the Marine Corps for three years and has been transferred to Parris Island, S. C., for training, local Marine recruiters reported yesterday.

O'Rourke, who enlisted as a private, was graduated this year from LaSalle High School.

Contract For New Naval Armory Let To Altoona Firm

Bid Is $159,887; Work To Start Soon

Word was received here yesterday that an Altoona, Pa., construction firm has been granted the contract to build a Naval Reserve armory on the hill at the eastern end of Baltimore Street, and work is expected to begin soon, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer for the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division.

The firm of Moyer Brothers bid $159,887 for the work, as compared to the next lowest bid of $219,000, Comdr. Hedrick was informed. Word that the contract had been let came from Capt. Valery Havard, USN, director of naval reserve for the Fifth Naval District, with headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Capt. Havard said that under terms of the contract, work should be completed within six months. He added that the Altoona firm has also received contracts to build several naval armories in the Fourth Naval District, which covers the state of Pennsylvania.

Navy Leases Land

Comdr. Hedrick said he plans to contact the firm today regarding the date when construction is expected to start, adding that it may begin within a week or two. Although no estimate was available on the number of men needed for the work, it is expected that a majority will be employed from this area, through the co-operation of the local Maryland State Employment Service office.

Comdr. Hedrick explained that the $159,887 bid covers only the cost of construction, and that an additional $28,000 will be needed to install approximately $500,000 worth of training equipment.

The armory, which will be located on seven and one-quarter acres of land leased to the Navy by the city, will be composed of three metal Butler buildings, each 40 feet wide by 100 feet long, having concrete foundations and connecting corridors. They will be connected by a main entrance corridor 154 feet long and 26 feet wide, running the width of the armory.

Housed in the armory will be a complete combat radio station, radar and electronics equipment, a communications system, a "bridge" containing navigational instruments and chart room, an engine room, a dispensary, assembly rooms, class rooms and offices.

Drills Held Weekly

Comdr. Hedrick said that equipment will be shipped here in the near future from naval depots at Norfolk, Clearfield, Utah, and Scotia, N. Y., and that arrangements will be made to store the equipment pending completion of the armory.

At present the division numbers approximately 190 enlisted men and seven officers besides Comdr. Hedrick. Comdr. Richard J. Williams, USNR, has been serving as examining physician for enlistees and for those taking summer training or cruises under the Naval Reserve program.

For several months the division has been holding weekly drill meetings at Fort Hill High School, under permission granted by Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools.

Police Seek 22 Cases Of Missing Ale

Police were searching for some ale here yesterday — but it was strictly for business and not pleasure.

The missing ale, some 22 cases of it, was stolen from a Wilson Brothers, beer distributors, truck which was parked outside the Bell Service Station, 1601 Bedford Street, police said.

Officers said the driver left the loaded truck outside the garage at 1 a. m. yesterday rather than wake the residents by the noise of unloading. The beverage was gone when he returned this morning at 9 o'clock, police said.

Optimists See Film

Cumberland Optimist Club members last night viewed a film entitled "Crimes of Carelessness," dealing with the causes of fire and its prevention at their dinner meeting in Central YMCA. The film is sponsored by the National Board of Underwriters, and was shown by Charles L. Park, local insurance man and member of the club.

Park had as his guests, H. M. Gibbs, Baltimore and W. F. Krake, Washington, D. C.

Probe Attempted Theft

City Police Tuesday night were called to investigate an attempt to break into a shed housing playground equipment at the North End Playground, but Assistant Chief of Police John J. Treiber said the attempt was unsuccessful.

Bus Breakdowns Plague Sightseeing Westerners In Allegany County

Thirty-nine young people ranging in age from 18 to 25 from the University Congregational Church, Seattle, Wash., probably will remember Allegany County as well as any of the places they visited on their 29-day sightseeing tour of the East.

The group came east by rail as far as Chicago and there chartered a Greyhound bus for their sightseeing trip. They were en route back to Chicago yesterday when the bus broke down at 5:30 a. m. on Polish Mountain.

The unusual noise of the breakdown broke the early-morning quiet for Mr. and Mrs. Russell O. Smith, who live atop the mountain, and they were startled even more when they looked outside and saw a group of young women walking up the mountain road, followed by a large bus whose only motive power was the group of young men pushing it.

Finding out that Polish Mountain was not the last mountain before reaching Cumberland, the bus driver called for another bus from Bedford, Pa., and in the meantime transferred to a passing Blue Ridge bus bound for Cumberland all of the group but five young men. They stayed behind to help transfer baggage to the bus on which they were to continue the trip.

True Southern hospitality was displayed by Mr. and Mrs. Smith who invited the remaining members of the group to breakfast. They and members of the Smith family—Mr. and Mrs. Smith, their children Donald and Eleanor, and Donald's guest, James Smith, Little Orleans—consumed two dozen eggs, a home-cured country ham, home-canned tomato juice, cereal, toast and milk.

One of the unexpected guests told his hosts he expects to visit Honolulu soon and promised to visit Miss Genevieve Yonkers, Smith's business partner, who is civilian attorney for the Seventh Air Force at Hickam Field.

Once the group was complete, they set out westward bound once more, but bad luck befell them again when a second bus broke down at the foot of Big Savage Mountain. Another bus was brought from Pittsburgh and the group left again about 4:30 p. m. They were chaperoned by Rev. William Gold, pastor of the church, and Miss A. Norris, a registered nurse.

Tax Exemption Cases Argued In Court Here

Maryland Laws Under Attack

Two schools of thought were clearly portrayed yesterday in Circuit Court, as six local attorneys argued the legality of county tax exemptions granted three major Allegany County manufacturing corporations.

The hearing climaxed suits brought by James H. Reed, taxpayer, Allegany Street, against the County Commissioners of Allegany County and the Kelly Springfield Tire Company; the County Commissioners and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company and the County Commissioners and Celanese Corporation of America.

Attorneys for Reed are Clarence Lippel and David Kauffman, while William C. Walsh represents the Kelly Springfield, Charles Z. Heskett argued for Celanese, Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., is counsel for the Pulp and Paper Company and Lewis M. Wilson is attorney to the County Commissioners.

Attack Local Law

The suits were brought by Reed to determine validity of exemptions from county taxes, granted by County Commissioners to the three companies. The ultimate question to be determined in each case is the constitutionality of Chapter 7, of the Acts of 1931.

This Act provides, "that for the purpose of encouraging the location and extension, and the growth and development of factories, industries, establishments, plants, and the like in Allegany County, Maryland, the County Commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to exempt from county taxes, the land and/or buildings, machinery and tools thereof and therewith used, and/or raw materials and products thereof, for a period of not more than ten years from the date of location and extension of such factories, industries, establishments, plants and the like, and to ratify any contracts heretofore made for the purpose of inducing the location of any factory, industry, establishment or plant to locate in Allegany County, and, when, in the opinion of said County Commissioners the public welfare so requires, to extend the benefits of said exemption for a further period of not more than 10 years."

Cite Purpose of Act

Lippel and Kauffman contend the law as passed was for the purpose of encouraging new industries to locate here, as well as to encourage the expansion of existing industry. They charge that the three plants were already established and that specific exemptions to them under this law are invalid since the exemptions discriminate against other industries and taxpayers.

They further charge that the Kelly has had four exemptions and the Celanese has had three, whereas the act authorizes only two.

Lippel and Kauffman argued that the special act is illegal and void because it violates the Constitutional principles of uniformity and equality provided in the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution and Article 15 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights.

Constitutional Provisions

The 14th Amendment provides, their brief outlines, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privilege or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law." It is this last clause on "equal protection" which Kauffman and Lippel emphasized in their arguments.

The two attorneys for the plaintiff also argue that the Constitution of Maryland provides, in Article 3, Section 14—"the General Assembly shall pass no special law for any case for which provision has been made by an existing general law."

They argue the local law known as Chapter 7, of 1931 is therefore unconstitutional because there is a general law known as Article 81, Section 7, sub-section 23, which provides for exemption of tools, machinery, manufacturing apparatus and equipment used in manufacturing if the County Commissioners pass a resolution or ordinance authorizing such exemption. No such resolution has been passed by the County Commissioners here, Lippel declared, adding, "if such a resolution was passed it would apply to all manufacturers and not just three or four, and would therefore be fair and legal."

Walsh Argues

Arguing the case for the Kelly Springfield Company, Walsh outlined for the Court, the history of the company. He declared the Kelly has not had four exemptions, but has been granted two. He explained this by saying the previous company or corporation which operated the plant here went bankrupt about 10 years ago, after having two county tax exemptions. The present company which was organized to keep the plant operating in Cumberland is now on its second exemption, he explained.

Walsh declared exemption of taxes on tools and machinery was one of the inducements in the agreement to get the Goodyear Company to buy the plant, form a company and operate it. He declared "if we people here in Cumberland declare invalid this exemption now, we are going back on our word and are not keeping faith with those who helped us provide employment for several thousand local citizens."

Economic Factors

Walsh argued that "tax exemptions are merely the relinquishment of legislative powers to tax," and in the case of the local exemptions, that is what has been done, he explained. "Without these three major plants, or without anyone of them," he continued, "the plaintiff and all other taxpayers, would suddenly find that his own property has depreciated in value over-night, and he has lost much more than the few dollars he hopes to save by taxing the industries which provide employment.

"Manufacturing concerns," Walsh continued, "make goods and ship them out of the community. In return for these goods, they bring

Regional Meeting Of Pharmacists To Be Held Here

State Group Will Convene Next Week

The first regional meeting of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association to be held here in 10 years will convene at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, Thursday, July 17, according to Webster K. Edwards, temporary president of the Allegany-Garrett County Pharmaceutical Association and past state president.

Some 100 druggists from throughout Maryland as well as members of the Travelers Auxiliary of the Association, are expected to attend and many of them will come here by special bus.

Walter E. Kennedy, chief of the state Sales Tax Division; Dr. L. M. Cantnor, deputy pure food and drug inspector for the state, and Dr. Robert P. Fishell, Washington, D. C. one of the leading pharmacists in the country, are on the speaking list.

Editor Invited

Dr. R. L. Swain, New York, editor of Drug Topics, a trade magazine, and one of the leaders in his field, has been invited to attend and will speak if he is present, according to Edwards.

Dr. Fishell, an associate editor of the U. S. Pharmacopeia and a member of the committee on revision of the USP, will discuss matters of national interest.

Dr. Cantnor will speak on "Control of Barbituric Acid," and his address will be based on legislation which became effective June 1 after being enacted at the last session of the Legislature.

Kennedy will discuss the state sales tax as it applies to pharmaceutical products.

The meeting will begin at 1 p. m. with luncheon at the Shrine Country Club and the business session and addresses will follow. Dinner will be served at 6 p. m.

Melvin Strawsberger, editor of the Maryland Pharmacist, will be master of ceremonies. Albin A. Hayman, Salisbury, is state president.

Will Meet Tonight

Representatives of pharmaceutical distributors are expected to be present.

Allegany and Garrett County druggists, who now have a temporary organization, are scheduled to meet tonight to make that organization permanent.

Temporary officers besides Edwards are H. C. Lewis, secretary, and F. C. Knepper, treasurer.

Frostburg Guard Recruiting Drive Opens Tonight

Plan To Enlist 160 Local Men

FROSTBURG, July 9 — Recruiting of officers and enlisted men for Company D, first Battalion, 115th Regiment, Maryland National Guard unit being formed here, will begin Thursday night at 7:30 p. m. in the Council Chamber, according to Maj. Howard H. Dickey, battalion commander of Cumberland.

Maj. Dickey told local officials that 160 men can be enlisted in the company, which will be designated as a heavy weapons Infantry unit, and that any young man, past his 17th birthday, who is in good physical condition may enlist. Previous military training is not necessary, but some men with prior training will be needed as instructors and cadre, he said.

Outlining the benefits to the community, Maj. Dickey said the Company will provide part time training, study and recreation for many of the town's young men, and they will be paid for each weekly drill period attended. Pay schedules are based upon regular Army base pay, at the rate of $2.50 for each drill for privates and upward increases according to rank.

In addition, he explained, members will have full use of Armory facilities for recreational purposes and entertainment at all times. Commenting upon the Armory, Maj. Dickey said plans are already underway for the construction of a building and a committee is now conducting surveys for an adequate site.

When the Regiment goes to camp next month for a week of training it is doubtful if the Frostburg unit will be sufficiently equipped or organized to participate, Maj. Dickey said, but those who wish to attend can probably go with Cumberland units. He also said that full Army pay and all expenses are a part of the summer camp program.

Local organizations and civic leaders are co-operating with the plan to organize the Guard company here and obtain an Armory for the town.

Hardy Youth Cuts Leg In Fall On Bottle

Gordon Hardy, 14, 808 Sylvan Avenue, was treated in Allegany Hospital early last night for a puncture wound on the right leg. He told attaches he fell upon a broken bottle.

Roberta Lease, 6-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ruth Lease, 606 Hill Street, was treated in the same hospital yesterday for a severe cut on the right knee. Five stitches were used to close the cut suffered in a fall on the pavement, attaches said.

Ruby Barger, 8, Route 3, was treated in Allegany Hospital last night after she cut her foot on a broken milk bottle.

Chaney Permit Hearing Opened By ICC Examiner

Local Carrier Seeks Additional Routes

A hearing conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of Earl D. Chaney, doing business as the Chaney Transportation Company, 23 Howard Street, for additional motor carrier routes, was held all day yesterday in the federal grand jury room of the Postoffice Building.

Besides Chaney, seven witnesses testified on behalf of the application during the first day of the hearing, which was adjourned until today at 9:30 a. m. Alton R. Smith, Washington, D. C., an examiner for the ICC, is presiding.

Chester E. King, Washington, D. C., counsel for Chaney, indicated that he will call 12 additional witnesses to appear today. Smith said the hearing will probably be continued in Washington next week, unless testimony can be completed today.

Seeks Other Routes

Chaney has applied for additional motor carrier routes in sections of Delaware, the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, and Allegany, Garrett and Washington Counties in Maryland.

Railroads which have filed protests against granting of the application include the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and all railroads in the territory affected by the application, with the exception of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. They are represented by William A. Gunter, local attorney.

Numerous motor carriers who would be affected by Chaney's proposed additional operations have also filed protests. They include members of the joint Northeastern Motor Carrier Association, Inc., and the Interstate Common Carrier Council of Maryland, Inc., represented by Victor G. MacKenzie, Baltimore attorney.

Other motor carriers who would be similarly affected entered their protests at the hearing. Those represented by Spencer J. Money, Washington attorney, are the Cumberland Motor Express Corporation, Charlton Brothers Transportation Company, Inc., Masser Motor Express and the Ward Trucking Corporation.

Peter J. Decker, Cumberland, is representing 13 additional motor carriers intervening to protest the application. They are M. W. Bean, Moorefield, W. Va.; Crites Transfer, Cumberland; Dailey Trucking Company, Westernport; Roger A. Etzler, Frederick; W. R. Fields, Chambersburg, Pa.; H. L. Grove, Martinsburg, W. Va.

Maryland Motor Lines, Inc., Cumberland; Maryland Transportation Company, Frederick; Morris Motor Express, Inc., city; Charles W. Karper, Chambersburg; William O. Redman, Petersburg, W. Va.; Rockwell Brothers, Mercersburg, Pa., and West Virginia Motor Express, Clarksburg.

Smith Is Witness

Among witnesses who appeared yesterday was H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, who said he is in favor of securing any additional transportation facilities which will improve business conditions and make for a more progressive community.

Others who testified included Lewis Q. Cowherd, manufacturing representative; Martin L. Johnson, food broker; Wesley E. Taylor of the Taylor Lumber Company; and John S. Zolvik, accountant, all of Cumberland.

They said they believed more adequate and expeditious motor carrier service would be available if the application were granted, adding that some carrier should be granted the service outlined in the application. The proposed routes would augment rail carrier service, it was stated.

Chaney's counsel said he planned to call representatives of the Buchanan Lumber Company, Queen City Dairy, Inc., Big Savage Refractories, and the General Textile Mills plant at Lonaconing among other witnesses today.

Law's Strong Arm Upholds Its Post; Lamp, That Is

The strong arm of the law showed itself last night in down town Cumberland when a guardian of the peace maintained a successful vigil at his post (a tottering lamp post) and kept the pole from falling into the street.

Summoned when a street light started to lean hazardly into North Mechanic Street after a pedestrian identified as Lester McGill had started its downward trend by leaning against it, City Police Officer Arthur Kennell hurried to the scene and held the post upright for an hour and five minutes.

A short time after Kennell assumed his duties a tow rope was secured from Police Headquarters and, under the direction of Thomas F. Conlon, was tied to the post and looped around a parking meter on the opposite side of the street. A local youth, Leonard Winebrenner, was stationed on the other end and instructed to pull the lamp post into the street if it started to fall to keep it from smashing the store windows behind it.

Aided by an onlooker, Henry Schmeer, the jovial cop with multitudinous verbal aids from the crowd that gathered, kept the pole from crashing into the street, while waiting for the Potomac Edison emergency car to arrive.

The post, which probably had been bumped by a truck earlier in the day and the cast iron base cracked, was guyed to buildings along the west side of the street by the repairman.

Eastbound traffic on North Mechanic between Frederick and Baltimore streets was routed up Frederick to Liberty Street during the vigil. Traffic was normal by 11 o'clock.

Cumberland Photographer Chosen To Go On Expedition To Africa

Keith Sisk Slated To Leave This Fall

A Cumberland man who became interested in photography as a hobby several years ago will leave New York sometime between September 15 and October 1 as one of four photographers on the Gatti-Hallicrafters Expedition to the legendary Mountains of the Moon in Africa.

Keith Sisk, 306 Bedford Street, supervisor of photography at the Allegany Ballistics Plant of the Hercules Powder Company, got his chance to become a member of the expedition by winning over 14,000 contestants, the True Magazine for Men contest to select a photographer, camp assistant and aviator for the exploring party.

The expedition is the result of the merging of the plans of two men—Attilio Gatti, who has directed 10 scientific expeditions and spent 14 years on African soil, and William J. Halligan, president of the Hallicrafters Company, Chicago, and one of the best known pioneers in radio short wave communications.

Hams To Benefit

Halligan, whose Hallicrafters communications equipment will be used on the expedition, the first to be completely electronically equipped to grapple with the age-old secrets of Central and Eastern Africa, is seeking new horizons for ham radio.

On the Mountains of the Moon, now known as the Ruwenzori Range, the expedition will set up new short wave radio links between territories like the Belgian Congo and the rest of the radio listening world.

Gatti, who became interested in Africa soon after the First World War, has brought a valuable contribution to the world's knowledge of Africa in the fields of zoology, anthropology, ethnography and paleontology through his observations, discoveries and collections. He and Mrs. Gatti, who accompanies him, have written many books and magazine articles about the continent's inhabitants, flora and fauna.

These are some of the expedition's missions which Sisk, as photographer, will cover:

1. Exploration from the air of inaccessible crater lakes and other virgin sections of the Mountains of the Moon.

2. Closed aerial observation of un-

Coal Production Expected To Hit Normal Friday

Officials Say Miners Returning

Miners of District 16 are expected to return to most operations today and production is expected to be on a normal basis by Friday, operators, union officials and railroad spokesmen said last night.

Frank Powers, Frostburg, state mine inspector for this county, said the required inspections which must be made 24 hours before the men return after a shutdown were completed yesterday, and practically all deep mines are ready for production today.

Contracts have been signed with most operators in this area, union spokesmen said, and the men are ready and willing to work. A few operations worked in the Georges Creek and Upper Potomac Regions yesterday, and several strip mines were reported working.

The Geoges Creek Coal Company announced that its three large operations, Waynesburg, Franklin and Pittsburgh mines will resume production today.

The Consolidated Fuel Company also reported that Mine No. 1 at Ocean and Nos. 4 and 10 at Eckhart are ready to start work this morning. Mines No. 17 at Klondyke worked yesterday and will be at normal today.

A number of smaller operations and independently owned units have also signed the new agreements and will return today or tomorrow, it was indicated.

Western Maryland Railway officials said mines in the Davis-Thomas area worked yesterday as did mines in nearby Pennsylvania. Other mines along the Elkins Division are ready to resume this morning and the railroad expects normal production and coal freight movement by Fiday.

B. And O. Buys 10 Mallet Engines From Seaboard

First Delivery Here Scheduled July 15

The first of 10 high-speed Mallet locomotives purchased by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from the Seaboard Airline Railway is expected to be delivered here about July 15, H. F. Wyatt, Cumberland Division superintendent of the B. and O., said yesterday.

Wyatt said the Seaboard Line is Dieselizing and that the Baltimore and Ohio bought 10 of the steam locomotives to be disposed of. They were built in 1935 and 1939.

As soon as the Mallet locomotives are received from the Seaboard, they will be put into the Baltimore and Cumberland shops of the B. and O. for repainting and minor adjustments, and then will be placed in high-speed freight service between Cumberland and Brunswick.

Roy B. White, president of the B. and O., pointed out that this sizeable addition to the railroad's locomotive fleet is a timely move in view of the fact that the B. and O. is doing the biggest peacetime freight business in its history, and that delivery of these Mallets will be completed by August 15.

The freight power of the B. and O will be further augmented in the first quarter of next year when delivery of 20 new 3,000 horsepower Diesel-electric freight locomotives is scheduled. These are now being built by the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors.

The B. and O. has had an historic association with both the Mallet and the Diesel-electric locomotives. The first Mallet to be constructed in this country was designed and built by the B. and O. in 1904 for the hauling of heavy freight trains over mountainous lines. The first Diesel-electric road freight locomotive in the United States made its trial runs over the B. and O. in 1939.

Finan Is Named To Housing Group

Thomas B. Finan, Cumberland attorney, has been named by Gov. Lane with four other men to the Maryland Veterans Housing Commission, authorized by the 1947 General Assembly.

Urging that the commission set to work at once, the Governor also named as members E. Brooke Lee, Silver Spring, chairman; and Henry P. Irr, chairman of the State Planning Commission; Attorney Harry H. Cropper, Salisbury, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph D. Buscher.

Under the law, the commission is directed to make a state-wide survey "to determine areas critically in need of additional temporary and permanent housing accommodations for veterans" and to assist in seeing that needed housing is pushed forward.

All members of the group are veterans of World Wars I and II.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. John Alburtis, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter in Allegany Hospital Wednesday night.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stoner, Cresaptown, in Allegany Hospital Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Shannon, 20 Potomac Street, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a son in Memorial Hospital Wednesday morning.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Ford, Hyndman, Pa., in Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Warren White, 1513 Frederick Street, Wednesday morning in Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Calvert, Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son Wednesday morning in Allegany Hospital.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ferman Lease, Triple Lakes, Tuesday night in Allegany Hospital.

Ward N. Hauger Is Seriously Ill

Ward N. Hauger, well known local jeweler, who resides at 112 North Cedar Street, is reported in a serious condition at Memorial Hospital where he was admitted June 28. Hauger became ill, it was reported, while attending the Shrine convention at Atlantic City, N. J., last month and was in a serious condition when admitted to the hospital. He underwent an operation on June 29.

Rubber Workers Back Committee In Contract Talks

Little Progress Noted By Local 26 Officials

Members of Local 26, United Rubber Workers, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America, CIO, have voted unanimous support to its negotiating committee which is currently seeking to negotiate proposed changes in thel ocal's contract with the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, A. E. Johnson, president, said yesterday.

The vote of confidence was received at meetings held yesterday afternoon for second shift workers and on Tuesday night by first and third trick employes.

The committee, composed of Johnson, Roy E. Davy and R. C. Burkhart, announced it had "little progress to report" as a result of negotiations conducted so far.

Johnson said the committee has gone practically through the preliminary discussions on the contract and expects to complete the general discussion at a meeting to begin today at 10 a. m.

In the course of the talks held during the past few weeks, the union said, a number of points have been listed as satisfactory to both the union and the company while "several issues" have been set aside for further discussion.

They reported there has been "little progress" on some 20 changes the union wishes to incorporate into the working agreement.

Paul Weiker, Greensburg, Pa., District 1, URCLPWA representative, will be here later this week to assist the local in the contract negotiations.

The next regular membership meeting of the local will be held Sunday, July 20, at 2:30 p. m. Members will hear a report of progress on the contract at the meeting, Johnson said.

19 Young Men Join Naval Division Here

Nineteen young men of the Cumberland area, including four veterans, have been accepted for membership in the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer.

The veterans are Samuel H. Brown, Ridgeley, W. Va., chief machinist's mate, who served three years in the Navy, including duty in Londonderry, Ireland; Robert H. Whetstone, 154 North Centre Street, watertender second class, who served one year aboard an attack transport in the Pacific; Paul B. Conlon, 7 South Barnard Place, Frostburg, seaman first class, a veteran of one year's Army service; and Paul G. Luteman, 500 Kingsley Street, seaman first class, whose three years of Navy duty included service in the Pacific theater.

Others accepted for the division, all apprentice seamen, are David C. Mersing, 50 McCulloh Street, Frostburg; Louis C. Garner, 523 North Mechanic Street; George A. Herring, Frostburg; James S. Hinkle, 718 Yale Street; George C. Martin, 520 Columbia Avenue; Alfred M. Erling, 850 Sperry Terrace; Paul E. Dunn, 435 Virginia Avenue.

James E. Fisher, Route 1, Ridgeley; Herbert J. Wagner, 111 West Second Street; William B. Yates, Jr., Main Street, Frostburg; Arthur M. Trenton, 51 Spring Street, Keyser, W. Va.; William J. Root, 22 Broadway, Frostburg; Clarence H. Sharer, 214 West Main Street, Frostburg; Barnard E. Sitter, 400 Piedmont Avenue; and William G. Fuller, 619 Sedgwick Street.

Enters Marine Corps

Robert Patrick O'Rourke, 17, son of Mrs. Kathleen O'Rourke, 635 North Centre Street, has enlisted in the Marine Corps for three years and has been transferred to Parris Island, S. C., for training, local Marine recruiters reported yesterday.

O'Rourke, who enlisted as a private, was graduated this year from LaSalle High School.

Bid Is $159,887; Work To Start Soon

Word was received here yesterday that an Altoona, Pa., construction firm has been granted the contract to build a Naval Reserve armory on the hill at the eastern end of Baltimore Street, and work is expected to begin soon, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer for the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division.

The firm of Moyer Brothers bid $159,887 for the work, as compared to the next lowest bid of $219,000, Comdr. Hedrick was informed. Word that the contract had been let came from Capt. Valery Havard, USN, director of naval reserve for the Fifth Naval District, with headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Capt. Havard said that under terms of the contract, work should be completed within six months. He added that the Altoona firm has also received contracts to build several naval armories in the Fourth Naval District, which covers the state of Pennsylvania.

Navy Leases Land

Comdr. Hedrick said he plans to contact the firm today regarding the date when construction is expected to start, adding that it may begin within a week or two. Although no estimate was available on the number of men needed for the work, it is expected that a majority will be employed from this area, through the co-operation of the local Maryland State Employment Service office.

Comdr. Hedrick explained that the $159,887 bid covers only the cost of construction, and that an additional $28,000 will be needed to install approximately $500,000 worth of training equipment.

The armory, which will be located on seven and one-quarter acres of land leased to the Navy by the city, will be composed of three metal Butler buildings, each 40 feet wide by 100 feet long, having concrete foundations and connecting corridors. They will be connected by a main entrance corridor 154 feet long and 26 feet wide, running the width of the armory.

Housed in the armory will be a complete combat radio station, radar and electronics equipment, a communications system, a "bridge" containing navigational instruments and chart room, an engine room, a dispensary, assembly rooms, class rooms and offices.

Drills Held Weekly

Comdr. Hedrick said that equipment will be shipped here in the near future from naval depots at Norfolk, Clearfield, Utah, and Scotia, N. Y., and that arrangements will be made to store the equipment pending completion of the armory.

At present the division numbers approximately 190 enlisted men and seven officers besides Comdr. Hedrick. Comdr. Richard J. Williams, USNR, has been serving as examining physician for enlistees and for those taking summer training or cruises under the Naval Reserve program.

For several months the division has been holding weekly drill meetings at Fort Hill High School, under permission granted by Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools.

Police Seek 22 Cases Of Missing Ale

Police were searching for some ale here yesterday — but it was strictly for business and not pleasure.

The missing ale, some 22 cases of it, was stolen from a Wilson Brothers, beer distributors, truck which was parked outside the Bell Service Station, 1601 Bedford Street, police said.

Officers said the driver left the loaded truck outside the garage at 1 a. m. yesterday rather than wake the residents by the noise of unloading. The beverage was gone when he returned this morning at 9 o'clock, police said.

Optimists See Film

Park had as his guests, H. M. Gibbs, Baltimore and W. F. Krake, Washington, D. C.

Probe Attempted Theft

Bus Breakdowns Plague Sightseeing Westerners In Allegany County

Thirty-nine young people ranging in age from 18 to 25 from the University Congregational Church, Seattle, Wash., probably will remember Allegany County as well as any of the places they visited on their 29-day sightseeing tour of the East.

The group came east by rail as far as Chicago and there chartered a Greyhound bus for their sightseeing trip. They were en route back to Chicago yesterday when the bus broke down at 5:30 a. m. on Polish Mountain.

The unusual noise of the breakdown broke the early-morning quiet for Mr. and Mrs. Russell O. Smith, who live atop the mountain, and they were startled even more when they looked outside and saw a group of young women walking up the mountain road, followed by a large bus whose only motive power was the group of young men pushing it.

Finding out that Polish Mountain was not the last mountain before reaching Cumberland, the bus driver called for another bus from Bedford, Pa., and in the meantime transferred to a passing Blue Ridge bus bound for Cumberland all of the group but five young men. They stayed behind to help transfer baggage to the bus on which they were to continue the trip.

True Southern hospitality was displayed by Mr. and Mrs. Smith who invited the remaining members of the group to breakfast. They and members of the Smith family—Mr. and Mrs. Smith, their children Donald and Eleanor, and Donald's guest, James Smith, Little Orleans—consumed two dozen eggs, a home-cured country ham, home-canned tomato juice, cereal, toast and milk.

One of the unexpected guests told his hosts he expects to visit Honolulu soon and promised to visit Miss Genevieve Yonkers, Smith's business partner, who is civilian attorney for the Seventh Air Force at Hickam Field.

Once the group was complete, they set out westward bound once more, but bad luck befell them again when a second bus broke down at the foot of Big Savage Mountain. Another bus was brought from Pittsburgh and the group left again about 4:30 p. m. They were chaperoned by Rev. William Gold, pastor of the church, and Miss A. Norris, a registered nurse.
